THE "STAYING QUALITY."

The death of another of those valiant and capable men who bore the heat and burden of the day in doing battle with the formidable obstacles that confronted the Church when it was seeking under divine direction through human instruments, to gain a broader foothold on the earth in its earlier stages, reminds us that we are in the midst of momentous changes. A retrospective glance over the history of this peculiar work of the Latter-day Saints to group a large number of important occurrences that have taken place in a surprisingly brief time. Many of them are intimately associated with the departure from this sphere of existence of some of the most heroic spirits that ever graced the world. We are impressed with the fact that the last few years have been strikingly fruitful in that regard.

One special lesson is taught the present generation by the examples that have been set by the brave men whose lives have been a constant struggle with apparently overwhelming opposing forces—the value of unflinching courage to meet the most direst of perils. It is the undercurrent of a noble character. Without it the individual is like a house with a flimsy foundation built upon an uncertain site. He may build a handsome and costly structure, but the power of storm armies that tests the stability of the materials on which it stands. It saves way, the whole edifice becomes a chaotic ruin, and its beauty vanishes in an hour.

Let the lives of the heroes of the last dispensation be scanned and it will be seen that this undeviating peculiarity is, under the divine blessing, their greatest quality. It is that "staying quality" that enables them to continue the race to the end, and entitles them to a realization of the saving promise of the Lord. They take it with them to the eternal world, and on the firm basis laid in mortal life, they continue on the road of everlasting progression, going forward step by step until all heights, breadths and depths are theirs, reaching ultimately the highest destiny of man based on the purpose of his creation.

Such men are worthy the highest respect and esteem. They are not only benefactors of the human race because of the beneficial results of their acts in this life, but they are also on account of their examples, which are emulated by others, and thus the sum of good is increased. They beget their likeness in their fellow men, and the emulators are as branches spreading outward from the parent trunk which they provide. A man's mortal life resembles a book, and this is probably true in an actual sense. The record should be in harmony with the plan of the operation to the closing sentence. The subject writes his biography by his acts. If he has trusted in God and been inspired by a steady purpose, the pages will not be marred with black and unsightly blotches, and his work will be incomplete but present a harmonious whole. It will be pleasant for the subject himself to read and for others to peruse. It inspires the latter to make a similar record.

It is gratifying to note that many of the youth of the community are availing themselves in a position to take a capable part in carrying onward to the full fruition of the noble work that the veterans heroes of the last dispensation, under divine guidance, have carried along to the present point of advancement. In connection with this desire they should never lose sight of the need of cultivating that great gift of the Father, which is the source of all power, and which is the source of all power, and which is the source of all power.

AMERICAN ANTIQUITIES.
Cognate truths support one another, and the more of them that are brought together the stronger does the mass become. The Book of Mormon being a true history of the ancient inhabitants of the American continent, is sustained and confirmed by all of the accurate knowledge and reliable discoveries which have been brought to light in relation to American antiquities. Hence the more light thrown upon the latter subject, the more proof there will be of the truth of the record brought forth by the Prophet Joseph Smith. It is gratifying to the believers in that record to note the progress which is being made in the direction of a scientific vindication of its contents.

We have heretofore published references to the work of an archeological expedition which has been organized in Arizona, under the patronage of a wealthy lady of Massachusetts named Mrs. Hemmaway.

Relative to the work of this expedition an eastern exchange says: "Many thousands of relics of the prehistoric races, which have been dug up near Tempe and Phoenix, Arizona, by a scientific expedition that is directed by Frank H. Quinn, are on their way eastward and will be stored at Salem, Massachusetts, where they are being housed in a building erected for that purpose. The objects include pottery, stone utensils and weapons, ornaments and skeletons of men and animals. There are also drawings and photographs of the ruins, and of the ancient petroglyphs and maps of the places visited. The expedition has been at work for over a year, their expenses being paid by Mrs. Mary Hemmaway, who has long taken an interest in archeological research in this country. It is conjectured that Mrs. Hemmaway means to establish a museum where the specimens may be kept and exhibited permanently. Such a museum would certainly stimulate the interest in American antiquities, which already gives signs of being keener than ever before.

The result of the establishment of such a museum, and of a scientific examination and investigation of its contents, would be the throwing of light upon the history and civilization of ancient America, and thus the claims to credence of the Book of Mormon would inevitably be strengthened.

REGISTRATION.

There are a large number of voters in this city whose names appear on the municipal registration lists, but not on the general lists. We understand that several hundred persons registered for the last city election, who had never registered at all before. It should be understood by all that registration on the municipal lists, entitles the person to vote for municipal officers only. In order to be permitted to vote for county and territorial officers, the voter must register on the general list. If the registration officer has reason to believe that a person whose name appears on the registration list, city or general, has become disqualified to Sheridan's Condition.

WASHINGTON, 7. m. May 29.—The favorable turn in Sheridan's condition continues. He passed a very comfortable night and Mrs. Sheridan and the attending physicians are somewhat less apprehensive of a sudden change. A bulletin was issued at 10 o'clock: Consultation 9:30 a.m. General Sheridan passed a quiet night, sleeping most of the day. He is now in a fair condition, with a pulse of about 100, and a temperature of 101. He is now in a fair condition, with a pulse of about 100, and a temperature of 101.

RUSSIA'S POLICY.

Some of the Features of the Eastern Question.

Editor Deseret News:

The ever-recurring "Eastern Question," awakening such unusual interest at the present time, is so complex in its nature that time and space forbid any attempt at an account of its growth to the present dangerous stage of development. Russia, being the principal disturbing agent, we will briefly give an outline of the methods and policy of aggression, adopted by her during the last two centuries.

In reference to history we find that in 1682 Russia possessed an area of about 3,600,000 English square miles; in 1807 about 5,347,700 square miles; so that in the course of the 18th century she had increased her territory by more than one million square miles of her territory, and in a period of 147 years, mainly through the same process, her population had increased about 60 per cent, or from fourteen to twenty-four millions, and during the last twelve years it is estimated to have further increased to the enormous figure of about 60 millions.
