The times can be truthfully said to be dull here about, and yet they need not be near so much so as they are, as there is every reason for belief that money is much more plentiful in the Territory than it appears to be on the surface. One cause of the temporary stagnation to the reluctance of parties having is the reluctance of parties having means on hand to use it to make improvements that they would of the Eric shareholders make, providing times were more propitious in appearance. But the polding back policy is detrimental in every sense, which must be evi-dent after but little reflection, for dent after but little reflection, for several reasons. It must be admitted that times are rather flat. Well, what of that. They cannot remain so, for as sure as the night follows the day, s) must dull times be followed by a reaction in form of briskness in business. It has always been so in the past, which is a strong guarantee that it will be so strong guarantee that it will be so strong guarantee that it will be so in future. The natural deduction to be drawn from this course of reasoning is that those, who have constant at the head of a number of emancisoning is that those, who have contemplated making material improvements and have not done so because of the apparently "scaly" nature of the times, have been operating against their own personal interests; for the cause that such improvements, which would supply needy mechanics with employment.
