Another Attack Upon Emigrants by Indians.—On Saturday last a rumor was in circulation that another company of emigrants had been attacked in the vicinity of City Rocks, near the junction of Sublett's cut-off with the Salt Lake road, and that about one-half their number had been killed. The report was confirmed in the evening by two of the party, Mr. Charles McBride, formerly of Kentucky, and Mr. John Andrews, who came in passengers that afternoon from Brigham City, by the northern stage coach. These gentlemen state that their company consisted of 15 men, some of them from California and some from Carson City, Gold Hill and other places. While passing near the Indian camp, which place they left on the 3rd inst., some of them bound for Denver and the balance of the company for Missouri and other states where they had formerly resided. The company were well mounted, well armed, and had four pack mules in addition to their ride.

The party traveled up the north side of the Humboldt, and arrived at the junction of the roads, near City Rocks, on the evening of the 11th without interruption, in the vicinity of which place they camped that night. The next morning, having taken the Salt Lake road, they continued their journey when they heard the baying of cattle, which led them to suppose that a company of emigrants were encamped near by, and, on decrying a smoke produced by camp fires, a short distance from the road, some two or three men rode toward it for the purpose of purchasing some meat, if possible, of which they were in want. They had not gone far before they discovered that the smoke proceeded from an Indian camp. Meeting with some of the Indians, who appeared very friendly, whom they knew to be the chief or leader, and seeing a very large herd of cattle, some four or five hundred head, near by, which the chief said belonged to him and his band, they made known their wants. The chief told them that if they would go into his camp he would give them all the meat they wanted. They did not hesitate and said that there was anything wrong till they had rode on a short distance further, when the chief asked one of the men if he was captain, and being told that he was not, the chief told them to go back to the road and tell their captain to come into the camp with their captives to compute the camp with him, and they should have all the beef they wished. They accordingly returned to the company, but instead of going into the Indian camp, mistrusting treachery, they thought it prudent to increase the distance between them and the wily red men, and proceeded on their way, but were soon far behind, and tired on from the road side, at which they started at full speed, followed by from 35 to 40 Indians, mounted on good horses and well armed, and by a much larger number on foot. A running fight was kept up some 20 miles, during which time their horses were wounded, at only one man was hurt, and he but slightly.

On reaching De Cassiere creek, a branch of Raft river, having been compelled to abandon four of their horses, and two others giving out, which damaged their teams, the party, the last, rode into the canyon, and endeavored to gain a position among the rocks, where they could defend themselves, as to proceed would be certain death to all who would be unhorsed, while the savages continued their pursuit, which they did in an unceasing manner until the last man should be killed; but the Indians anticipated their movement, and before they reached the rocks three of their number were killed. From that time, which was about the middle of the day, they fought the Indians, who swarmed around them thickly until after dark, during which time another man was killed and four wounded, two mortally.

On obtaining possession of the animals at about 8 or 9 o'clock in the evening most of the Indians drew off, whooping and singing hideously. Soon after the Indians retired, the seven remaining members of the party, who had each an arm broken, left their position just as the moon was rising, taking with them the two who were mortally wounded, and carrying them down to the bank of the creek, where they placed them by the side of life in each other's nearly extirpated arms, then laid them and moved slowly and cautiously in the direction of the settlements in Boxelder. They were five days without food, and fortunately met a large company of emigrants some six miles beyond Bear River, near the Humboldt, from whom they obtained food. Samuel Riley, one of the wounded men, and two others named Jackson and Grant, returned with that company, who had some 30 wagons and about 80 armed men. The other, Mr. C. McBride, J. Andrews, James W. and Ed. Wilkinson, and Mr. Lewis and Mrs. Foster, the latter remained in the arms, coming to Brigham City, where they arrived on Thursday, and from thence to this city, where they will remain a few days and then proceed on their way to the east.

The Indians, in addition to their horses, mules, etc., had a considerable quantity of ammunition and most of the arms with which the company was well supplied. How many of the Indians were killed and wounded is not known, but many of them were seen to fall.

The names of the killed, as given by Mr. McBride, were John Conner, whose Editorial Scurrility.—There seems to be a disposition on the part of some of the editorial fraternity in California, to be scurrilous, inclined towards Col. Conner, and to become the chief military officer in the department of Utah. It is evident that the colonel's promotion and some of his acts are not looked upon with universal favor. The following is from a recent number of the San Joaquin Republican:

"The San Joaquin valley will undoubtedly be the world's greatest source of pumuckles, but there is nothing in this more astonishing than the sudden growth of late Pat Connor, by the grace of Gov. Downey and the application of tinseled trappings, into 'Col. P. Edward Connor,' the hero of the 'Laxative Honey and Tar' and the original Laxative Honey and Tar is the original Laxative Honey and Tar. Gently moves the bowels and expels all cold from the system. Cuts the phlegm, cures all coughs and strengthens weak lungs."

Such vituperation is not commendable.

It is ten times easier to cure coughs, croppings, whooping-cough and all lung and bronchial affections when the bowels are open. Kennedy's Laxative Honey and Tar is the original Laxative Honey and Tar. Gently moves the bowels and expels all cold from the system. Cuts the phlegm, cures all coughs and strengthens weak lungs.

CHIVALROUS DICK ASHBY.

Senator Daniel of Virginia tells this story as illustrative of ante-bellum chivalry. Before the Internece struggle, commonly called the Civil war, the code duello was recognized in the southern states, but was discontenanced by the northerners, as it is now, everywhere in our republic.

During the war Col. Ashby, commonly called Dick Ashby, was one of the bravest of the brave, and his regiment was composed of the scions of the choicest families in the chivalry of the South. Just between the chivalry of John Brown and the besting of hostilities, there were feverish times along the border lines of the states, and many bitter words were said, and quarrels were frequently incited. At that time, a young lawyer from Philadelphia visited Winchester, and was received with great cordiality by the people. On the evening before his proposed departure, he was invited to attend a ball at Dick Ashby's home, and was escorted there by Dick Ashby himself.

Late in the evening, politics, the one thing which Mr. Ashby had declared should not be brought into conversation, became the topic of discussion. The young man who had had that subject uppermost upon their minds, The wine had been flowing, and the young Philadelphian was obliged to reply to questions, and his replies made the others angry. Finally one of the visitors, an old soldier, said to hand of the Philadelphian, and said: "This quarrel is mine. Stand aside, You are my guest and the man who insulted you, insulted me; and to me he shall make answer and recompence. Stand up there in your place, Mr. Locky, and be ready."

But, in the presence of Dick Ashby, he quailed, cringed and made only apologies to Dick Ashby, and also the guest. Dick Ashby was always an example to all that was best in the ante-bellum Southern chivalry.

FRANCIS HENDRICKS.

Superintendent of Insurance Francis Hendricks has taken the Equitable Life Building in hand, and it is expected that his report and action will be drastic. He said that he demands that Mr. Hyde resign from office. Alexander J. is declared, will be let out, also nearly a dozen of the directors. In business circles it is believed that if Mr. Hendricks puts down his foot and says Mr. Hyde must go, it will be unnecessary to bring the matter before Governor Biggs.
