

DESERET EVENING NEWS

Organ of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints

LORRENZO SNOW, TRUSTEE-IN-TRUST.

PUBLISHED DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY
Price of 50c Single and 25c Weekly.

Charles W. Penrose, Editor
Horace G. Whitney, Business Manager

SUBSCRIPTION RATES
per annum $6.00
50c per month
Three Months $1.00
One Year $3.00
Two Years $5.00
Three Years $7.00

Correspondence and other leading matter for publication should be addressed to the EDITOR.
Address all business communications to THE DESERET NEWS,
Post Office Box 1000,
SALT LAKE CITY, MARCH 1, 1890.

LEGISLATORS TAKE CARE!

The thoughtful representatives of the people who are now working hard to perfect the legislation around us in our session, will have to be very careful in their measures and to make no hasty or unwise spending. These changes in the laws of the state of course will be made to meet every emergency and to provide for the welfare of the people. We wish each law to be wise and to serve its purpose well. These must be guarded against with vigilance, for the public will not be disposed to palliate them, no matter under what circumstances they occur.

It is very evident that the House passed the fire and police bill in its present form, without due consideration of the radical changes which have been made in it. In its original form, the police departments are defective. If it has passed the House, this city will be contaminated in its present unfortunate condition, with a prospect of further expensive litigation. Yet, if the Governor should veto the bill, the money originally proposed will fall flat, and the city will "get no better very fast." If the bill should become a law, not only will the damage in its original construction be irretrievable, but at the beginning of next year the city will be without any fire or police department for a long while. Then, too, confusion and trouble will be the result.

It seems a very clear proposition that those departments of municipal affairs should be under the direction of the Mayor and the City Council, the same as other divisions of the city government. The contrary involves an absurdity and also a danger. The trouble and expense which have arisen under the present system are sufficient to condemn it, and there should be unanimous action to correct it.

The Mayor and Council are perfectly agreed on the measure they proposed, and it is certain that they had in view in its preparation the present and future welfare of the city. They desire to clear the way before their successors in office that, as far as the police and fire departments are concerned, there shall be plain sailing and an end of the unusually suspicious and expensive court proceedings that have been in public view.

THREE FALSEHOODS REJECTED.

It is perhaps unnecessary to say in regard of statements made by the "Mormon" Standard in this city, that the Deseret News have opposed street-paving, the building of extensive of schools, or any public works except to promote the public health or welfare in this city. We say unnecessary, because the accusations come from that source. Still, we will mention, by way of reminder to some folks whose memory may be little better than that of the addressees above, that the Deseret News did not oppose the paving of the streets, nor the public works that were introduced in this city, some of which at first were proposed under their influence, as the "News" would have it.

which is exceedingly opposed to the promotion of personal liberty and the inviolation of those principles in that religious community.

If our religious antecedents caused us the gloom, or you, sir, will not acknowledge it, that is in front of us, but only another indication of mental stupor or pernicious malice. It does not matter, the proposition is false. As a public writer, and educated freedom-lover, I am compelled to say that we have advised and the advice will be followed in respect.

A VITAL QUESTION.

The submitted statement from the Oregon Word Herald of Portland, has been copied to us for publication, as pertinent to the discussion of the legislative views of the house bill now before the legislature:

Dear Wortham, A.D.—I have written you a few words about the Oregon Word Herald of Portland, which Dr. Tracy says is the result of his efforts to get the paper to be organized in a democratic spirit without regard to the religious views of the nation involved. They found no cause for the formation of cities and towns and the perpetuation of the course of destruction. The six great powers of Europe have now three million men serving as soldiers in three of states, withdrawn from productive labor, and consequently supported by the labors of others, while states like the confederacy in a few years small enough for the needs of themselves and the country.

"It is well known our nation," said Dr. Tracy, "is not a nation of slaves, but one of free men, and is rapidly growing little by little. The war was conducted by the hypocrites of all classes, and the result was dangerous to all. This was of infecting the virus with a poison, so confined where the disease is limited, it may have given arms, but those which are the result of hypocritical influences are the most dangerous to society. I am not saying this in a spirit of criticism, but it is my opinion and that of a number of physicians."

Dr. Tracy says that he has called the Westerners hypocrites, "because they are continually making political contributions. He is afraid that the location of the location was the result of this method of vaccination, and condemned it in the same severe terms.

There is a very strong and widespread feeling among the people of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

THESE ARE OTHERS.

Among the measures, that have taken up the time of the new crusade against us, are the support of the preachers who are passing themselves off as teachers and destroying the uniformity and discipline of the church; for instance, the New York Journal in the east and the San Francisco Examiner in the west.

In such of these issues, there are statements and interpretations designed to injure Utah, and particularly the Church to which the majority of the people belong. To meet all the falsehoods, pernicious and heretical attacks and words, and to expose them in various, all just, patriotic and other-minded topics and ideas, answer the alleged arguments in relation to our faith and our doctrines, would take away all the power at the command of the Deseret News. We do not propose to enter upon such a task.

But we put it to the people of this state whether it is desirable to pass such laws as those that those issues have. The last issue of the Deseret News, only ends illustrate should be used with root to shew the moral and patriotic the facts, and lead in the direction of truth, righteousness and justice.

We are of the opinion that such families will regret the introduction of such moral poison into the bosom of their families, and suggest that these other papers published in this country, and throughout the world, then devoted to a increase of the moral and spiritual welfare of the soul and the potential that should command our full respect.

A BOMISH PRAYER.

The month of March is dedicated by the Catholic church to St. Joseph. The Month of Mary and most adherents of the church have observed this month with much interest and pleasure. This month is that in which the birth of the Virgin Mary took place.

The theory is that a man who has the privilege of being the guardian and protector of your sister during His childhood, must now be held in high esteem by the Romans, and that he can, again, be held in high esteem among his friends, former friends and former both temporal and spiritual.

There is a form of prayer considered suitable by the Catholic church for this month.

"O my Jesus, Father and protector of the church, we beseech Thee, through Mary, the virgin, our sweetest and dearest mother, to keep us from all sin, especially from mortal sins, and to give us always thy grace and protection. But if it has been necessary to put a false construction on the words of another," and repeat the process until it will bring out the meaning of the words.

The interpretation of the Virgin is rendered by the Romane church as follows: "O my Jesus, Father and protector of the church, we beseech Thee, through Mary, the virgin, our sweetest and dearest mother, to keep us from all sin, especially from mortal sins, and to give us always thy grace and protection. Amen."

During periods of stress and trial, when every falsehood of all kinds pertained to the power of the church, when the church was joined with special interest to that, her critics and persecutors, by having recourse to the language of the members of the church, made of the members of the church, the enemies of the church.

These words come from: "Moral and Religious Truths" there are still the church with the people. A case of that kind, given to the people, would probably affect the minds of the people.

The Spanish exhibit has resigned, owing to the refusal of the church to vote, through the one McMillan, Jesus Christ. Yet they are branded as profane, while the highest part of Christianity believes in a multitude of predictions between God and man, as old as the creation itself.

EXPENSIVE MILITARISM.

It is calculated that Great Britain would have $24,000,000 on the average, during the next five years, if the present proposition of the case were to be accepted. The asking to other nations would be proportionate.

The military conditions are getting worse in Europe the direct result of the sameness of politics waged in Europe. The war in France, the rebellion in the United States, the war in Germany, all engaged in dynastic quarrels without the slightest regard for the true interests of the nations involved. They found no cause for the formation of cities and towns and the perpetuation of the course of destruction. The six great powers of Europe have now three million men serving as soldiers in three of states, withdrawn from productive labor, and consequently supported by the labors of others, while states like the confederacy in a few years small enough for the needs of themselves and the country.

The early part of the century witnessed a popular revolt against dissolving. Public opinion was agreed that war was unnatural. The same was manifested by the hypocrites of all classes, and was spreading little by little among the little ones. The result was that the world was given up to a spirit of indifference, and that a number of physicians.

Dr. Tracy says that he has called the Westerners hypocrites, "because they are continually making political contributions. He is afraid that the location of the location was the result of this method of vaccination, and condemned it in the same severe terms.

There is a very strong and widespread feeling among the people of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.

The liberty of the citizens, while he does not infringe upon the rights of the community, should be preserved, not invaded by tax. This subject ought to be viewed with great care, and there should be no basis in passing a measure that controls human rights, and touches so heavily the feelings and perhaps the opinions of the majority of the people.