belong to time. They do not reach into eternity. They are not acknowledged of God, because he did not authorize them. They have an end when the parties are dead. A divine marriage, which is the true marriage, must be performed by Divine authority. The root of this matter is in the doctrine that marriage is ordained of God. It h a Divine institution and should be under Divine regulations. When it is not, it is only a human ordinance and stands simply on that ground.

The "Mormon" Church claims to be of Divine origin. Its Priesthood acts by virtue (of authority revealed from heaven. What is scaled by that authority on earth is sealed in heaven. Its marriage laws and ordinances, and covenants and promises, have been received from the Almighty. It makes no difference to the argument if this is disbelieved by the people outside o the Church. What they dispute is settled conviction with the members of the Church. They have the right to view this matter as they understand it, and to regard marriages not solemnized in the way they believe God has ordained, as imperfect and unrecognized of heaven. And as long as they do not compel others to adopt their views and conform to their customs, they are entitled to the free exercise of their religion.

The laws and regulations established by governments in regard to matrimony are to be respected for what the are. They do not claim to be anything but secular and for the purposes of this world. They need not intrude upon that which is ecclesiastical and for the world to come. In this country, un der the restrictions of the Constitution the Government has no right to in fringe upon the domain of the Church in this important "establishment of religion." Marriage is and always has been a religious matter, and subject to religious regulations. It is therefore, in its religious aspect, beyond the domain of the State. On the same principle the Church dees not intrude upon the province of the State in regard to its enactments concerning civil marriages.

As to the choice between Divine and human laws when the two conflict, it would almost seem idle to contend. No sincere and consistent believer hesitate g a moment as would to his duty. The question would only turn upon his conviction. If he was satisfied that a given injunction was really of God, how could he think of preferring a contrary enactment of man? Were it not for the attacks made upon the "Mormons" for their course on this question, it would not be viewed as openito controversy. Skeptics may deny the divinity of purported revelation or commandment, and even of any communication from on high. & Governments may act upon this; infidel hypothesis. But the faith of the believer would not be affected by this, nor should his factions be hindered thereby. Reason says he must, to be consistent, obey the Divine behest and risk the earthly conse quences.

The province of religion and the do main of the State are divided, by s sharply defined line. Faith must be ple of the everlasting coveleft free and also actions springing nant, for the set time to favor from faith which do not infringe upon Zion is near and the sons of those wards the deputies although I was

THE CLOSE OF THE YEAR.

THE end of the year has come. The final breath of cighteen hundred and eighty-six is departing, and before we can greet our readers again a new year will have taken the place of the old, and Time will have marked one more figure upon the eternal calendar. Thus the periods pass away like men, and their places are filled by others, and the world goes on as ever. But as no man can live his brief season without producing some effect, great or small, upon others, so each year affects the universe and helps to swell the sum of events of all the cycles of eternity. The expiring year has been very eventful. It has been a time of floods and fires, of earthquakes and tidal waves, of volcanic eruptions and serial had served a warrant upon him. cyclones. Shipwrecks and railroad disasters have hurried hosts of mortals into sudden and frightful death. The murder list is long and shocking. Anarchy has reared its gory head and manifested its monstrous power. Fraud and corruption-official and private-have been exposed in high places. Revelations of depravity and immorality in the highest circles as well as the substratum of society have shocked and startled the world. Death has laid low many of the notables of earth. Gigantic and determined efforts have been made to destroy the Church and Kingdom of God. Many excellent men have been thrust into prison for living with and supporting the wives whom they had im reel sidewise as it about to fall vowed to love and cherish for time and then seize the horse's mane and hold on eternity. And Satan has raged while while his horse went a couple of rods. the wicked have combined to trample down the Saints of the Most High. But the close of the year finds the people of God unmoved. Zion has so far safely outlived the storm. No progress against her has been made by the enemy. The faith of her sons and daughters is unshaken and their fidelity to God and each other remains firm as the rock of ages. The prospects are more favorany threats. able as the year fades out than when it entered upon its eventful career.

And to the eyes of the discerning there opens up in the vista of coming years such a promise of victory and reward for past endurance as to cheer the heart and make every besom glow with ward had reached a point about due hope and confidence. We bid our people be of good cheer. The Millennial day is dawning. The night shades will flee away. The glorious sun of permanent prosperity will arise and fill our firmament with its effulgence. Every year brings us nearer to the goal of our redemption and further fulfils the predictions made through the Seers and Prophets of ancient days. There is no need for fear nor doubt nor gloom.
