EVENING NEWS.

Friday, October 10, 1884.

A FATHER'S LETTER.

A FEW SUGGESTIONS TO A SON AT SCHOOL.

My Dear Son:—Your letter of last week reached us yesterday, and I enclose $13, which is all I have by me at the present time. I may sell the other shote next week and make up the balance of what you wanted. I will probably have to wear the old buffalo overcoat to meetings again this winter, but that don't matter so long as you getting an education.

I hope you will get your education as cheap as you can, for it cramps your mother and me like Sam Hill to put up the money. Mind you, I don't complain. I knew education come high, but I didn't know the clothes cost so like sixty.

I want you to be so that you can go anywhere and spell the hardest word. I want you to be able to go among the Romans or the Medes and Persians and talk to any of them in their own native tongue.

I never had any advantage when I was a boy, but your mother and I determined that we would stock you full of knowledge if your liver held out, regardless of expense. We callate to do it, only we want you to go as slow on swallow-tail coats as possible till we can sell our hay.

Now, regarding the boat paddling suit and that base ball suit and that bathing suit and that roller rinktum suit and that lawn tennis suit, mind, I don't care about the expense, because you say a young man can't really educate himself thoroughly without them, but I wish you would send home what you get through with this fall, and I'll wear them through the winter under my other clothes. We have a good deal severer winters here than we used to, or else I'm failing in bodily health. Last winter I tried to go through without under clothes, the way I did when I was a boy, but a Manitoba wave came down our way and picked me out of a crowd with its eyes shut.

In your last letter you alluded to getting injured in a little "hazin scuffle with a pelican from the rural districts." I don't want any harm to come to you, my son, but if I went from the rural districts, and another young gosling from the rural districts undertook to haze me, I would meet him when the sun goes down, and I would swat him across the back of the neck with a fence board, and I would meander across the pit of his stomach and put a blue forget-me-not under his eye.

Your father ain't much on the Grecian mythology and how to get the square root of a barrel of pork, but he wouldn't allow any educational institutions to haze with impunity. Perhaps you remember once when you tried to haze your father a little just to kill time, and how long it took you to recover. Anybody that goes at it right can have a good deal of fun with your father, but those who have sought to monkey with him, just to break up the monotony of life, have most always succeeded in finding what they sought.

I ain't much of a pensman, so you will have to excuse this letter. We are all quite well, excep, old Fan, who has a galded shoulder, and hope this will find you enjoying the same great blessing.

YOUR FATHER.

—Bill Nye in the Inqleside.

A Wonderful Shot.

A lot of summer tourists were on the beach at Los Angeles the other day watching some fancy rifle shooting by a party of professional otter hunters who had come over from the Channel Islands for a Sunday lark. These really wonderful marksmen, most of them native Californians, were killing gulls on the water, breaking bottles and hitting dollars thrown in the air with great eclat, when a dudish looking man from 'Frisco yawned in a bored manner, and remarked in a very audible voice to a companion that he did'nt see anything very wonderful in that sort of shooting.

This produced a series of sarcastically polite retorts on the part of the original lords of the soil. "Perhaps the gentleman could show them something better."

"Well, I don't know," replied the young man, languidly taking one of the hunters' Winchesters. "I might if somebody would hold a cork or something on his head for me."

The riflemen showed their white teeth with amusement.

"Doubtless," said one of them, winking at his companions, "Doubtless the gentleman's friend will oblige him."

"Why, to be sure," drawled the dude, looking around. But his fellow dude had sauntered off, and was standing some 300 yards further along the beach meditatively smoking a long nine.

"Ah! there's Cholly," said the languid party, cocking the gun. "Let me see. You observe that cigar he has in his mouth! Very well. I'll put a hole through that," and taking a careless sight, he fired. At the report the smoker gave a sudden start, took out and examined his Havana, and then shook his fist angrily.

The entire crowd ran towards him. Sure enough there was a hole right through the centre of the cigar, almost cutting it in half.

"That's the fourth cigar you've spoiled for me," said the smoking dude, in a vexed tone. "I wish you'd stop that sort of a thing."

As for the other hunters they looked at each other in mortified silence for a few minutes, then climbed into their boat and set sail.

"That's the most wonderful shot I ever saw," said an old gentleman to the shooter the next morning. "Such a terrible risk, too."

"Nothing wonderful about it," said the California Tell, confidently. "All you have to do is to have your confederate carry in the cigar with a pen-knife before hand. It's a boss scheme!"—San Francisco Post.

The Egg Trade.

Those of our readers who are interested in real matters may be in the items of the egg trade. The extent which the business has reached shows how greatly a small item may expand under favorable circumstances. In former days the market was supplied from central New York and New Jersey, but the present railway facilities are changing the state of trade. The great centre of supply is now Ohio, while large quantities are brought from Indiana and Illinois.

The chief depot of the egg trade on this continent is the village of Cardington, which is less than 100 miles south of Cleveland and in the midst of a very productive country. Although the population of Cardington is small, it is a lively place of business, but the egg trade assorts most of its energies. As the market is liable to be glutted in hot weather they adopt the custom of pickling eggs, and one concern has had at one time nearly 40,000 dozen thus laid down. They are kept until autumn, when good prices may be obtained. During the lively part of the season the receipts are nearly 2,000 barrels a month. Eggs are pickled in vats or cisterns, made of brick and cement, and each containing many thousand dozen. When a vat is full it is covered with muslin, the surface of which is coated with whitewash. The pickle is called a secret composition, but it is generally understood among the trade. During the hot season eggs are often packed in barrels with cut straw which protects them from the injurious influence of the atmosphere. They can be kept in this manner for two or three months, all that is required being to have barrels turned from one head to the other each day.

MONTANA COAL.—Mr. Bayliss returned to Helena a few days ago and in conversation with a reporter of the Independent related the following interesting facts: From Fromer station you go up the Missouri river about one and a half miles, when you strike the coal camp of Maxwell, Schennick, Lloyd & Son, a claim of 640 acres. At various places they have struck coal. At their present working they are down about 160 feet, showing clean coal the entire distance, six and one-half feet to eight feet wide. Thus far they have only been running on the foot-wall and have not yet raised to find the hanging-wall. Every foot advanced thus far has evidenced a marked improvement. McQuoin & Co. are located east and with about the same development, and show up an equally strong vein of superior coal. Still further north Dedman & Brother are represented as having a good vein. On the opposite side of the river Bayliss & McFarlane have a coal prospect, not yet developed to any extent.—Butte (M. T.) Independent.

RATHER HARD ON THE LAKE CITY.—"What a large number of fine-looking men there are in that jail, papa; what can they be doing there?" "Oh, they are striking, my child, hoping to reduce the burdens of taxation; that's all."

"Why do they have that football tied to them, papa?"

"Oh, that is to preserve their strength. If they did not have those they might get tired trying to walk too far, my child?"

"But when they get ready to come out where will they go?"

"Then they will go to Chicago and become prominent citizens."—N. Y. Journal.
