Men Wanted.

SCARCITY OF THE REAL ARTICLE.

No one who reads the periodicals of the present day can have failed to notice some of the many articles that have been published about women.

While a few of those articles commend her virtues, by far the greater number of them aim to point out and ridicule her inconsistencies. We know that women, as a class, are far from being perfect, but we can not believe that all of the evils that curse the world are attributable to them. There is another class of beings who style themselves "Lords of Creation," of which we would say a few words.

The world contains very many masculines, yet it is perishing for want of men. Barbarism makes males tyrants; chivalry makes them gentlemen; Christianity makes them men. Men are wanted! Not masculine personifications of empty-headed aristocracy; not kid-gloved, cigar sporting dandies; not brainless, street lounging, gaping idiots; not vain, boasting egotists, but men; noble-souled, high-minded men; men who are ever ready to aim death blows at evil and battle for the right. Such men are wanted! Not males who dissipate their lives and squander their earnings in pleasures that leave behind them nothing but the fragments of shattered capacities and the wreck of hopes.

In God's universe there is no room for such. They tend but to debase and corrupt the morals of the community in which they live. By deceitful flatteries they lead the innocent and unsuspecting to eternal ruin. Not wanted—not wanted—there is no room for them. It is because of them that life is so full of impending perils, so burdened with crushing responsibilities.

The one great need of the world is true men, men of courage, men of fortitude, men of integrity; men who can resist temptation; men who regard nobleness of intellect and purity of character rather than beauty of face and adornment of person; men whose influence tends to lead all about them in the ways of wisdom, truth and virtue. Such men are wanted; wanted wherever the stern realities of life are to be met and battled with; wanted in the sacred precincts of home as a shield against the evil influences which may come; wanted wherever there are mothers, wives and sisters to be upheld, supported and encouraged in their mission of love; wanted wherever youth is being led captive by the vices and errors of the present age.

When such men are found to take the places of the so-called men who largely make up modern society, we can assure you that woman will not fail to perform her part; but so long as man claims to be the "stronger vessel," and is the acknowledged leader in the social realm, is it just for him to complain when woman takes just a few steps in the direction in which he himself has advanced so great a distance?—Inez Ively in Cincinnati Times.

As workmen were excavating the foundation of a shop in High street, Shoreditch, England, a chest six feet long, three feet deep, and three and a quarter wide was disclosed. On opening it a vast collection of ancient ecclesiastical plate was found. In pre-Reformation times a large convent stood on this ground, and as many objects of art disappeared after the dissolution of the monasteries, it is thought that this plate had been buried there for preservation and then forgotten.

Mr. Moody said to an interviewer: "I am the most over-estimated man in this country. By some means the people look upon me as a great man, but I am only a lay preacher, and have little learning. I don't know what will become of me if the newspapers continue to print all my sermons. My stock will be exhausted by and by, and I must repeat the old ideas and teachings. Brooklyn every Sunday hears a score of better sermons than I can preach. I can't get up such sermons as Drs. Budington and Cuyler and Talmadge, and many others who preach here week after week. I don't know what I shall do."—Ex.
