NEWS OF THE WEST.

A Circus Performer Meets with an Accident in Nebraska.

A BURGLAR SHOT AND KILLED.

Highwaymen in Helena, Mont.—A Ledge of Gold-bearing Ore.

Lord Swatow, a prominent Gladstonian and home ruler, at present in Montreal, is journeying to the coast.

The Silmon City (Idaho) Recorder reports the accidental death of Charles Woodman at Gilmoreville. He was caught by a fall of rock in the Keystone mine and was not discovered for six hours. He lived some hours after being taken out.

The Idaho Avalanche says that another strike in one of the Bryan groups in Owyee has been reported. "This thing is getting monotonous. These undiscovered bonanzas come here and find some one saying 'Boo,' while we old-timers are letting the moss grow on our backs."

Iron county Record: Dr. J. H. Hall, of Parowan, in company with a gentleman named Lowder, has discovered and located a ledge of gold-bearing ore in Little Creek canyon, about twelve miles east of Parowan. The mineral-bearing ledge is about ten feet in width and free gold is easily seen in the ore with the naked eye.

News has reached Klamath Falls, Oregon, from Langell valley, in that county, that Frank Swingle shot and instantly killed Arthur Langell on the latter's ranch, during an altercation over some stock. Both were well-known pioneers of Klamath county and large stock and land owners of Langell valley.

A woman named Bertha Mitchell has sued Street Superintendent Ackerson at San Francisco for $500 for alleged unlawful interference with her business as fruit peddler at the corner of Post and Montgomery streets. Although she had a license, Ackerson caused the removal of her stand under the sidewalk obstruction order.

Louis Wattle, one of Wattle Bros., circus men and specialty jugglers, whose home is in Lincoln, Neb., for about fifteen feet while practicing a trapeze act at Lincoln park on Sunday and struck head downwards upon the net below, and dislocated the third vertebra. It was quickly replaced, but he will probably not recover, as his limbs are all paralyzed.

The highwaymen who a few weeks ago held up Deadly Moor, men in a saloon at Helena, Mont., have evidently removed to Butte, judging from the bolsome displays by two men, who held up a dozen of men at Meaderville Friday evening and then shot at the proprietor of the saloon, inflicting fatal injuries, from which he died Saturday morning. His name was Stephen Grose, but there is no chance of discovering his assailants.

Jose Ledesma, the young Mexican who, while attempting to enter the house of Mrs. Frank Lowenstrur at Los Angeles, Cal., at an early hour in the morning of August 27, was shot by a domestic named Annie Cull, died at the receiving hospital on Sunday morning. His movements were heard by the girl, who, instead of fainting or screaming, put one pencil with a revolver and waited for the burglar, and when his head appeared she fired, the bullet entering his forehead and lodging in the brain.

J. E. Symons, of Butte City, has invented a water elevator which will make the matter of irrigation in many sections very simple, says the Lemi Register. The machine consists of two parallel endless cables run in the shape of a triangle, to which the buckets are fastened. The base of the triangle runs in the stream which furnishes the motive power. The invention claims that with a cable eighty feet long in the stream and with a current running three and a half miles per hour, he can raise 100 inches of water continuously.

Arizona points with pride to a tree of peculiar virtues, known as the electric light tree. This tree is a dwarf, seldom having the courage to get more than twelve feet height. Its foliage is very dense and at night it grows like an arc light. The light that shines from this tree is so strong that one can sit twenty-five feet away and read fine print. The queerest point of this tree is that the light seems to grow dim with the coming of the moon, and steadily loses brilliancy until the moon is full. Then the tree is as dark as a mine. When the moon begins to wane the tree's luminosity is gradually renewed, and by the time the moon has disappeared the tree is shining again as brightly as ever. Sometimes the light on this queer tree becomes blue, even in the dark of the moon. Then we have to do a queer thing to re-light it. We drench it with a tin bottle of two of water, and instantly the effulgent glow will return in all its brilliancy.

Dogs That Love Music.

"Dogs have much more ears to detect variations in the quality of sound," said a musician yesterday. "I have at least a large New-foundland which is a great lover of music. No matter to what portion of the house he may be, as almost soon as he hears the first bars of a piece coming to his ears he comes to me where I begin to play, lying close to the piano. I have an old organ. It is one of those instruments with many stops and but few good qualities. I think I have been able, after much endeavor, to distinguish two different qualities of tone in all of the long row of stops, but my dog insists it appears to me that not one stop out of many is true. I play for variety upon the organ, sometimes counting for it my undisputed, and my dog seems to enjoy this as much as the piece, all except one stop. Whenever I pull that stop out, for fear in his fret suddenly and unconscious to turn and growl at me in a most ugly manner, sometimes bites at the organ. Even to my ear the stop makes no difference in the result of the organ. I have tried hard to detect the distinctive quality which aggravates the dog's nature, but without success. I have tried to find the evil before by examining a tone upon one stop and positively pulling out the obnoxious one. He never fails to know this although the sound to me is not the same."—Pittsburg Dispatch.
