OLIVER H. PIKE IS NOT DEAD.

Body Found in Illinois Was Surely Not His.

WRITES TO CHIEF HILTON.

Mysterious Murder Recalled—Body Now Believed to Be That of William Crawford.

Dear Sir:—In the spring of 1896 there was a body found in Chicago supposed to be mine. It was also claimed to be that of a man named Chazell. This latter claim was made by his friends in your city. If you know anything of the whereabouts of these friends of Chazell will you please inform them of the mistake, and if it will be of any interest to them to establish their claim to the body I will give them all the assistance I can to rectify the mistake.

The body was given a Christian burial here by my friends, but I think it would benefit the friends of Chazell to have established his identity, and if it will be of any advantage to them I would like to see the mistake rectified. Yours truly,

OLIVER H. PIKE.

The foregoing communication was received by Chief Hilton, last evening, bearing the date Ambrose, O., February 12, 1900.

Many who peruse it will recall to mind a most mysterious murder supposed to have been committed here some years ago. On the 27th of March, 1896, there was sold to Kara Haas and Phillip Gries an unclaimed freight box with the inscription: "G. M. Morgan, 165 Jefferson avenue, Chicago."

The box was shipped from Salt Lake City by G. M. Morgan. The box which was very heavy, was sent from Chicago by the purchasers to Austin, Ill., where its contents were revealed. After opening the box a trunk wrapped in oil cloth and packed with sawdust was disclosed. As the men worked, a strong and sickening odor arose and for a time the men were compelled to suspend operations.

The trunk was 26x16x10 inches in size, and was evidently new. Inside the trunk was found a hermetically sealed zinc box and in this box the body of a man his legs bent and his arms outstretched and the head bent forward until it rested on the breast and held there by a rope a noose being around the neck.

This box, which was supposed to contain household goods was deposited at the Union Pacific freight sheds, February 7, 1896, the freight amounting to $17.50, being prepaid. The man who shipped the box left for the East the day of the shipment and that is the last seen of him.

The discovery of the body in Austin created a great excitement here, and speculation was rife as to who the murdered man was. Some claimed it was the body of Oliver H. Pike, a resident of Chicago, but it was the body of a man who had disappeared in this city in '93.

Prior to this time Chazell lived with a Frenchman of shady character on Franklin street. She was known as "Prosper Cheval" and her disappearance was believed to be the work of the woman had another lover and that he had murdered Cheval. Prosper Cheval was better known as Chazell and the probabilities are that that name is correct. When he first came here with the French woman he had about $3,000 worth of diamonds, besides considerable cash. After his disappearance the woman sent a friend named Leon to the Deseret National bank to draw the money left there by Chazell in a safety deposit box. A few diamonds and some pieces of French coin were all that could be found. About this time the disappearance of Oliver H. Pike of Chicago was announced, and when the body in the trunk was found friends of Pike identified it as his. But the letter from Pike, alive and well, dispels that idea. Detective George Sheets says that he is quite sure that the body found in Austin was not Chazell's. Chazell was six feet tall, while the body measured five feet six.

Detective Sheets stated this morning that he believed that the body found was that of William Crawford, a quarantined man who had disappeared from Evanston, Wyo., two weeks prior to the shipment of the body.

If the reader of this should chance to know of any one who is subject to attacks of biliousness he can do him no greater favor than to tell him of the remedy of Dr. J. C. Groves and Dr. J. C. Groves' medicine.

It always gives prompt relief.

SENATORIAL CONTESTS.

Senator Scott of West Virginia Will Without Doubt Retain His Seat.

QUAY'S CASE STILL IN DOUBT.

Both Sides Claim a Majority, but Final Result Cannot Be Foretold—Montana Case Interim.

Special Correspondence.

Washington, Feb. 15.—The prospects are that two senatorial contests will be settled at an early day in the Senate, those of McGraw against Scott, of West Virginia, and of M. S. Quay, applicant for a seat upon the governor's appointment from Pennsylvania. Senator Scott will retain his seat, as the Senate does not wish to go behind the result of a legislative election, where there was no question of the right of the legislature to determine who were entitled to seats as members. There will possibly be some speeches on the case, but not many. No one can predict positively as to what will be the result in the Quay case, as men on both sides are claiming a majority. There will be no very extensive debate upon this case. It is wholly a matter of constitutional law, and senators must determine the legal status. It is quite possible that personal considerations will enter into a settlement of the case, as a number of men who have voted against seating senators under the same conditions heretofore are very much inclined to vote for Mr. Quay on account of the personal regard they have for him. If the same apathy regarding the financial debate continues, there will be no reason why there should not be ample time to consider both of these cases soon and dispose of them.

THE CLARK CASE.

But the same is not true in the case of Senator Clark, who is resisting the charges of bribery brought in connection with his election. No one can tell what the result will be. There seems to be no end to the number of witnesses and extensive examination of them. There are adjournments from time to time to secure more witnesses, but for the most part the committee on privileges and elections has been very industrious, beginning early in the morning and continuing even while the Senate is in session. After the testimony is all in there will be an elaborate summing up and argument by the attorneys. The committee will have to go through the testimony, digest it and reach a conclusion. Reports will have to be prepared and made to the Senate. This will be followed by the speeches and unlimited debate. In case there is a division of opinion this discussion will take up a great deal of time. It can easily be seen that the present session of Congress will be a long one, and that the Senate reaches a decision in the Montana case.

THE MISSOURI SENATORS.

The Missouri senators were once political rivals. Both were candidates for the Senate, but Clark was elected, and Mr. Vest was elected four years later and will leave the Senate after serving 24 years, while Cockrell is already elected for two years' service beyond a retirement period of three years. Mr. Vest has been in the Senate for 30 years to his credit. "Cockrell will serve longer than any man elected to the Senate," remarked Champ Clark. "In Missouri it will simply be a case of the prolongation of his life, for the people like him better than any other man in the State. He can get 10,000 votes from the Republicans. There are many old soldiers in Missouri, and many of them have got pensions through the untiring efforts of Senator Cockrell. He never neglects any one. Every man who writes to him receives a letter written by himself. It may be nine months in coming, but when it is received it is in the senator's handwriting."

"Well, if regular habits have anything to do with prolonging life," remarked Senator Tillman, "then Cockrell is destined to a long life. No man works harder or is more regular. There is never a day when he is not at his post. He is the hour of 2 that Senator Cockrell does not enter the cloakroom and take two apples from his overcoat pocket, peel and eat them. The sun is not more regular than he."

COCKRELL AND VEST RIVALS.

"But you were going to tell us when

MAN AND WIFE

See Changes as They Change.

To sweeten sour human nature, one of the best things to do is to leave off coffee if it gives you dyspepsia or makes you nervous.

"I asked husband this morning to write out a testimonial for the Postum Food Coffee, and I am pleased to be able to state that my wife has been cured of sick headaches and 'general cussedness' by leaving off coffee and using your Postum Food Coffee. My home is now a happy one."

"I am glad to add that my wife contains more of a medium of truth, for I find now I have complete control of my nerves, while formerly I was often irritable, and husband himself has been entirely cured of insomnia by leaving off coffee and taking up Postum. He sleeps now like a baby, from the time he goes to bed, until morning, and perhaps his improvement is partly a result of his seeing such an improvement in me. At any rate, no old sickness and troubles have been left behind."

"I had tried everything for my sick headaches, but as long as I stuck to the coffee, the headaches stuck to me. It took us a little while to learn that we every family the best used Postum Food Coffee, in order to obtain a really palatable, delicious beverage. People must get over the idea that they can make it in any kind of a slipshod way and have it good. The great element in making good Postum is to allow it plenty of time to boil. That is certainly simple enough, and when the cook becomes accustomed to making Postum, one can depend upon a regular quality every morning."

"I know people who seem to be able to drink coffee, with no bad effects; and on the other hand, I know that probably one-half of all my friends are more or less unpleasantly affected with coffee, when they persist in using it. Postum has obtained a strong hold since its qualities have become known, and a great many of our friends are steady users of Postum in place of the ordinary coffee, and you may be sure even one month will be ready to testify to the improvement in health."

"If you should publish this letter, please suppress my name, as I have a horror of undue notoriety. If any one will take the trouble to write you my name and address, I will cheerfully answer any questions that may be asked, and furnish satisfactory evidence to substantiate my statements. Respectfully, Mrs. M. Hyde Park, London, Ca."

Senators Cockrell and Vest were rivals," I said to Champ Clark.

"Well," I said to Champ Clark, "you know, was a brigadier general in the Confederate army and commanded a division part of the time. If the war had lasted four years longer, he would have been commander in chief. Most of his division was raised in Missouri, and the men were his devoted friends. Cockrell kept a roll of his troops and learned the names of nearly all of them. When he went out campaigning, he always met from one to a dozen in nearly every town. By a few acrobatic questions he was able to locate his man and talk of his service and his company. This kind of thing made him mighty popular, you may be sure. After Vest had been out campaigning for some time he met one of his intimate friends, who asked him how he was getting along. 'Not very well,' he said. 'I don't see much chance for me.' 'Why, what's the matter?' asked his friend. 'Well, you see, Vest answered. He served the Confederacy in the House and Senate, and he was in the army, and from the number of his old command he meets and talks with, hanged if I don't think half the Confederate army served in Cockrell's division.'
