

ELDER GODDARD AT TABERNACLE

Speaker Delivers an Interesting Address to a Large Congregation.

GOING ON SPECIAL MISSION. Will Leave Shortly for Pacific Islands And New Zealand—Discourse On the Gospel.

A large congregation at the tabernacle yesterday afternoon listened to an interesting address by Elder Benjamin Goddard. The speaker is about to take a special mission to a number of the Pacific islands, and the people of those parts formed a portion of the subject of the discourse.

WILL FIGHT INJUNCTION. City Proposes to Contest Conduit Water Grab to Last Ditch.

At the special meeting of the city council on Saturday afternoon it was decided to make a desperate fight against the injunction suit filed by the Progress company to restrain the city from diverting the waters of Big Cottonwood creek into the new conduit.

CALLING OF SEVENTY. And they departed and went through the towns, preaching the gospel and healing everywhere. And as they went they performed their duty, the gospel message could not be spread rapidly enough apparently for the Lord called unto him seventy more. And he sent forth laborers into harvest. Carry neither purse, nor scrip, nor shoes, and salute no man by the way and into whatsoever house ye enter, first say, Peace be to this house. And if the son of peace be there, your peace shall rest upon it. If not, it shall turn to you again.

SIGNS FOLLOWED. The speaker then related the story of the signs performed by these men. He said that the signs which they performed were of the same nature as those which were performed by the Master. Jesus prior to His ascension, the Savior said unto them: "Ye shall speak with new tongues, and ye shall be clothed with power, and ye shall be able to resist the temptation of the evil one. It shall not hurt them, that they should lay hands on the sick and the sick shall be healed."

MISSION TO ISLANDS. Elder Goddard referred to the fact that he is to leave in a few days for an extended visit of the various missions in the South Sea Islands, and he spoke at length of the various incidents which occurred there during his first mission. It was shown that the tradition of the natives constitute important evidence of the authenticity of the Book of Mormon. It was shown that the early Christians who brought the Bible to the natives were asked in regard to the origin of the inhabitants of the islands, and these ministers were frank to admit that they did not know. It was left for the Book of Mormon to explain their origin. The speaker stated that at different times that he had journeyed to the islands and that he had heard from them and that they undoubtedly believed in the Bible. Many characteristics and traditions prove that the people of the islands are a part of the Hebrew race and a branch of the house of Israel.

JOHN DUNN'S BODY FOUND. Remains of Missing Man Discovered Near Riter by Searching Party.

On Feb. 4, John Dunn, who was temporarily residing in Tooele, started out on a walk to Salt Lake, and Saturday afternoon, after a search lasting nearly two weeks, his dead body was found about nine miles from Riter, a station between this city and Gardfield. Death had evidently resulted from exposure. The man was aged and somewhat emaciated. Mr. Dunn was not arrived at his destination, every effort was made to locate him, Sheriff A. O. Evans, and others joining in the search. The body was found in Salt Lake following a supposed creek, which was supposed to be a branch of the Jordan. The deceased had been a resident of Utah for many years and was about 60 years old. Most of his family resided in Salt Lake, but he had relatives in Tooele, and in the latter place he spent much of his time. A brother, James Dunn, is editor of the Tooele Transcript. John Dunn very frequently walked from Tooele county to Salt Lake, and when he started on his last trip, little was thought of the matter until he failed to reach Salt Lake.

HARTMANN CONCERT. Distinguished Violinist Gives Return Engagement to Large Audience.

Hartmann drew another fine house last Saturday night, when he so wrought up his audience, that as on the occasion of his previous visit, they refused to leave after the final number, waiting for a closing recall in response to the applause. The program was one of immense difficulty, including 11 numbers, as printed last Saturday evening. He played with a dozen more numbers in the way of recalls for the violinist and pianist. Both artists used not a word of the violins, the entire heavy program being memorized.

The solo was a most masterful performance, but the most exquisite of the evening was the transcription by Hartmann himself of the "Waltz of a Wild Rose." The composer had declared before his intellectual death that he had never written a waltz, and because he did not understand the instrument, and yet, all unconsciously, he wrote this delicate, beautiful piece of lyric lace work that has been proven admirably adapted to the violin. Through the transcription of Arthur Hinemann, "To a Wild Rose" is a waltz of an unusual character, an imposing display of technical resources. The work is an easily comprehended theme whose melody, rich in simple and unpretentious elegance, attracts at once the attention by its liquid and striking originality, and without evidence of conscious design, leads captive to the heart of every listener. In one sense it is a wild rose, but a more so, yet not so, as the waltz of the same name, which is lifted to a higher environment to which the definition of aestheticism can be partially applied. The delicate composition of MacDowell's appeals to the best, the kindest sensibilities of human nature, reaching into the springs of spiritual action and warming them into livelier activity. Hartmann's presentation of that song brought out the best of his ideal expression, with an interpretation that was inspiring, and Saturday night's audience appreciated it.

The most remarkable performance of the recital from the standpoint of technical accomplishment was a masterly rendering of Bach's "Giaccona." This is one of the most difficult violin compositions of the great master which none but accomplished executives attempt to play. Mr. Hartmann gave it with an ease and grace that must have underestimated the difficulties in the minds of his audience. The "Berceuse," dedicated to the violinist, was a delicate bit of work, and the Henriques "Romanza" called forth the happiest efforts of the performer. The Mackenzie suite, too, was remarkably well given.

Herr Borshke's work at the piano only raised the reputation he established here as a genuine pupil of Paderewski. His playing of the Chopin Polonaise was immense. This young man, only 25, promises to be a great pianist in a few years. However, the abbreviation of his feminine locks would impede his personal appearance. It is to be regretted that the recital was not a financial success. The postponement from Friday to Saturday night, and the attendance of many who would otherwise have been there.

FARMING TAUGHT TO BOYS. Brief Report of the Experiment in the Waterford, Penn., High School.

The first high school in Pennsylvania to take up the study of scientific agriculture is that in Waterford, Erie county. It is not only the first in Pennsylvania, but it is nearly the first in the country, only one or two other high schools having had these courses when the Waterford High school took up the work. Professor H. O. Sampson, of Marion City, Iowa, had charge of organizing the agricultural course in this school. He was thoroughly prepared for the work, having taken two degrees from the Iowa state college at Ames. The manner in which he began and gained on the work is a credit both to him and to the school. He had a creditable knowledge of the subject, which was fortunate in getting him. Professor Sampson had nothing to follow as a guide, but had to pave a way, to be followed by other similar institutions. He was, however, thoroughly prepared for the work, having taken two degrees from the Iowa state college at Ames. The manner in which he began and gained on the work is a credit both to him and to the school. He had a creditable knowledge of the subject, which was fortunate in getting him.

see the iris at all, and the eye looks small and sharp. Out west it is a tradition that these light-eyed men are the dangerous ones. I know men who would rather fight a room full of dark-eyed gun-fighters than one with eyes of light blue or steel gray. Willie Lewis has a sharp eye of the Wyatt Earp type. It is light in color and narrow, drawn to a sharp point at the corners. It isn't a bold eye like Melody's. It isn't the eye of a man who will deliberately walk straight into danger and then fight his way through it. The eye of a furtive fighter, slinking at times, it is a bold eye like Melody's.
