

SEVENTIES' HALL LECTURES.

TUESDAY, 29th.

Mr. Bartlett Tripp delivered an interesting lecture on elocution. He took up the subject under three heads—reading, writing and speaking. He remarked in reference to reading, on the lamentable inattention paid in most public schools (Utah not excepted) to perfection in this branch of elocution. His remarks on all these branches evinced considerable acquaintance with the subject, whilst many of his illustrations of imperfect pronunciation and punctuation were very forcible and amusing.

He concluded by announcing a school for the prosecution of the science to be inaugurated the following Thursday at that hall.

The message of the Governor of the State of Deseret was then read by Mr. E. L. T. Harrison, and followed by remarks from Hon. A. P. Rockwood on the utility and wisdom of our present organization as a State.

Prest. Joseph Young followed with some happy remarks on the superiority of elocution inspired by the Holy Ghost to that merely dictated on the fixed term of science, and concluded with some amusing remarks on the very remarkable eagerness displayed by a portion of the people in sustaining school-teachers. (?)

On Friday evening last, Mr. G. W. Mousley read an excellent paper on Education.

President Joseph Young then delivered an interesting address on the rapid growth of this community in the knowledge of those arts and sciences best suited to their immediate wants.
