

ded that the court should stop counsel from making any such statement on his own authority as to the contents of papers which had not been in evidence before the jury. Judge Porter insisted that he had the right to deny statements of the same character by the other side.

Judge Cox thought counsel had no right to make any statement as to the contents of such papers.

Judge Porter, with much feeling, protested that he had been a practitioner longer than the Judge and had never before heard of such a ruling. He (Porter) was of course debarred from taking legal exception, but he must protest against the unfairness of the position which would admit all sorts of statements from the prisoner and from his counsel, and yet would debar the prosecution from all opportunity of refutation.

Reed, with considerable excitement, said: "If I was Judge, I would put him under arrest. Such insolence to the court should be punished."

Judge Porter resumed his argument and proceeded to discuss the question of reasonable doubt as an element of the defense of insanity. Referring to the decision of Judge Martin, of New Jersey, which had been reinforced by a decision in Ohio, he was again interrupted by a Scoville, who desired to know if arguments were to be heard again upon law points. A sharp colloquy between counsel ensued, when Judge Hunter removed the objection by handing his authority to the Judge saying it will answer every purpose of mine, your honor, if you should have occasion to rule upon the point.

Returning to the crime and its commission Judge Porter said: Who killed Garfield?

Guiteau—The doctors.

Porter—The doctors?

Guiteau—Yes, the Lord let them do it to confirm my act.

Judge Porter—You say Secretary Blaine was responsible?

Guiteau—I say morally responsible.

Porter—Mr. Blaine saved his life on the night before the murder, simply by his presence with him as they walked together. He might have saved his life on that fatal 2nd of July but for the fact that the murderer stole up from behind. Then he says Blaine is morally responsible for not preventing the crime. The prisoner confessed that Mrs. Garfield's presence with her husband on a former occasion had prevented him from shooting.

He was asked if Mrs. Garfield had been leaning on his arm instead of Blaine upon that fatal morning would you have shot him and he answered, no. Then Mrs. Garfield is responsible for her husband's death according to the fallacies of this wretchedly fallacious defense. Referring to the oratorical flights of of the counsel for the defense when he painted the President's widow at her daily prayers praying for the acquittal of the prisoner in the name of justice. Judge Porter in burning language showed up the profanity and inconsistency of such assertions, and rebuked the assumption of a man who had never exchanged a word with Mrs. Garfield in presuming to credit her with such monstrous sentiments. Continuing, Judge Porter said, "Who else is responsible? John H. Noyes, is he responsible? Did he kill Garfield? John H. Noyes, from whom the prisoner stole his lectures?"

Guiteau—That is false; I rely on my own brains for my productions.

The father whom when 13 years old he struck, was responsible. That father whom he can never forgive and with whom he had not spoken for the last 15 years of his honored life. The mother whom he scarcely even remembered, was guilty because she had an attack of erysipelas some time before he was born, and had to cut off her hair, thereby transmitting to him congenital insanity. His drunken, dissolute uncle who, however, did not become insane until after the prisoner was born, was responsible for the killing of Garfield, Uncle Francis was responsible because he was disappointed in love. He killed the husband of the woman he loved, and long afterward became demented. His cousin Abbie is responsible because from a traveling mesmerist she became the inmate of an insane asylum. She made this murder insane.

Guiteau: "There's enough to kill your case by your own showing."

The Chicago convention killed Garfield by nominating. The doctors killed him. His nomination and election were two acts of God, and the prisoner would have us believe the Deity, who had thus twice confirmed his choice, found it necessary to correct his labors by appointing this wretched swindler, hypocrite, this syphilitic monstrosity, to murder the President, whose nomination and election he had confirmed. The deliberate murderer sits there, pointing at Guiteau.

NEW YORK, 24.—The Herald, editorially, speaking of the proposed national mining exposition to be held in Colorado next August, says: The great drawback of the mining business is that most of the alleged mines of precious metals are in the Rocky Mountains, while most of the stock which is dealt in a hundred times as much as the bullion is held two thousand miles away at New York, where the purchasers are entirely at the mercy of the speculators, while trying to obtain information as to what mines are worth and how they are worked. If Colorado wants money with which to develop her mines, let her hold an exposition, but be careful also to coax every one who owns mining stock to visit not only the show but the mines themselves. One result might be the sudden throwing of certain stocks on the market for what they would bring, even if only a piece of waste paper; but this of itself would be of immense benefit to the legitimate mining operations.

NEWARK, N. J., 24.—In the Graves murder case yesterday, the judge charged the jury that it was a settled law in New Jersey that if the accused man had sufficient mind to distinguish between right and wrong, and could control his conduct under ordinary circumstances, he could not acquit himself on a plea of irresistible impulse. Thereupon the jury brought in a verdict of murder in the first degree.
