

CASE OF LIEUTENANT COWLES.

In the Court Within the Limits of the Post for a Period of Three Months.

The result of the court-martial of Lieutenant W. H. Cowles, formerly acting assistant quartermaster at Fort De Gies, has at last been made known. Inquiry in the case was instituted on the account of irregularities in the payment of pay and allowances to the lieutenant. Investigation previous to the hearing of the case had been made by the court in the conduct of the court-martial, which was held at the post, and the lieutenant was found guilty and sentenced to be confined in the post for a term of six months.

Lieutenant Cowles was called upon to answer two charges. The first was "neglect of duty to the prejudice of the public interest," and the second was "conduct unbecoming an officer."

The court entered a plea of not guilty to each charge. The court adjourned until the first of November, when the case will be heard again.

On the second day of the hearing, the vital part of the case was the following: The court-martial was held at the post, and the lieutenant was found guilty and sentenced to be confined in the post for a term of six months. The court entered a plea of not guilty to each charge. The court adjourned until the first of November, when the case will be heard again.
