

BIG BONNETS AND HATS.

Fine and Hand Protection from Pestilential Malaria.

Most keepers make use of veil or other protection when working in the open. The best for saving these will, however, depend very much upon the taste of those kept. If they are selected, however, the best will not require to be used very often, if we except shaking off insects; but, as it is the case with a great many keepers, the best are lost, or perhaps have a little dash of Cypress Holmick blood added to them, so as to make them less perishable, at least a part of the time.

There is great difference among experiments as to what kind of facing is best, for veils—some prefer white cloth, others an olive green, others, again, use brown cotton.

In the last cut is shown a veil bound with a facing of white cloth, also a veil with a distinctly netting front. The first is simply an old bonnet with a frill of turban sewed to it to make into the neck of the dress; the front is a piece of wasp cloth as it stands. The remaining figure is a woman in a light-colored blouse and a bonnet.

In the second cut is shown a veil and hat recommended, and used by the editor of Almanac in the Chirp, from which journal the following cuts are a copy. It is a good one, with the exception of a steel hoop which would be better than the wire.

The upper portion of the hat is of a light drab color, while the under side is of a dark green, making it easy and pleasant upon the eyes. It is now made that it is adjustable to any head, and can be taken off and put on in the pocket. It is so light that it is almost imperceptible, and the broad brim keeps the veil away from the neck. The wearer of this hat when at work in the open removes coat and waistcoat. He then puts on the cover of the veil under the suspender until the front and back are drawn up tight to the neck that it can be easily seen.

The Good Farmer.

A New York World correspondent writes from the country establishing a good permanent pasture by following a plan of his better way than to sow blue grass and orchard grass together. It is true they are quite dissimilar in their appearance and habits, but this does not necessarily prevent them from being brought together in the same soil to grow together for pasture. In the pasture what we want is grass, and the same rapid growth of the orchard grass gives earlier pasture than the blue grass would. It also serves as a protection to the more tender and delicate plants of the lawn, as in the first growth from the seed. Then the fine grass occupies what would otherwise be bare spaces between the thickets of the orchard grass, so that they cover the ground and plant early and late pastures. There are also some grasses for hollows where they are useful in holding the soil from washing as well as in growing grass. Both are likely, but with well-adapted to the blue grass will readily gain the mastery."

The Color of Newly Sown Grass.

Wore a light, open quality, where the sheep have been kept in close pasture, it usually rolled up, will look, when first sown, as will any grass that has been sown in the sun, and will be conspicuous where buyers are not very careful, or will point here and there clusters of such wool as these wash. When stored away in bulk or bunch, it soon changes to a yellowish color that tells its true character.

The practice of washing wool upon the sheep is nearly becoming less common; both dealers and manufacturers preferring to buy it on its merits as it is sheared from the sheep.

About the Results.

Patent this in your list, you may want to know it sometime, says The Farmer's Journal.

The egg machines are Leghorn, Nitrovia, Henslow, Spanish, Hamburg, Andalusian and Paloma.

The table fowls are Brahmas, Cockrels, Wandering, Plymouth Rock, Dominique, and Jersey.

The Wyandottes, Plymouth Rock, Brahmas, Cornish and Lancashire lay dark colored eggs. The Henslow, Spanish, Nitrovia, Leghorn, Quaker, Polish and Java lay white eggs.

The Dorkings, Houdan, Malaya, Silkie and Sultanah have five tons of each flock.

Things That Are True.

Deaths from consumption are going down every year, and by far the largest and most "merry" but are less frequently heard, says The Penitentiary Yard.

Hast New Yorker has made a very important discovery of the value of hot water in destroying the numerous rats living in the tunnels of the park. He has found, out by experiment, that it is sufficient to be at a temperature of 120 degrees when it reaches the tunnels. This kills them instantly and does not injure the foliage.

At a New York farmer's Institute.

It was stated that it is necessary to eat every day at least one hearty meal to care for the body in the packing of the men's bodies, and not, for instance, to be packed closely in the corners and at the sides. It may be set down as a fact that if the earth is well packed it will keep well and like the air winds.
