"Americans" Getting Ready to Take Hold of City Government.

Since the return of Mayor-elect Ezra Thompson from the coast, the scouting for position under the new administration. which was very active at the time of his departure, has again been renewed. It is understood that Mayor Thompson will act in making many appointments on the recommendation of his city committee, and members of the committee have so announced.

announced. The city council is now being organized for next year, at least so far as its presi-dency is concerned, and it is understood that the three leading candidates are T. R. Black, M. E. Mulvey and A. J. Davis. Davis is not regulariy an "American" as he is a Republican holdover. Mulvey was formerly a Democrat, and Black is an outspoken "American" from the Republi-can ranks.

to legislation which will be beneficial to the immigrants and the country by sending them to places where they are needed and where they will find better homes and employment. The concentration of foreigners in large cities is a condition that alarms those who give attention to sociology. Just how to prevent this is one of the many serious problems that confront the men who would like to improve the condition of the immigrant and make him a more useful citizen. Immigrants once inside the country cannot be forced to go to one state or another, and the only method that is available is that of per-

PROPOSED RETIREMENT.

The intention of Senator Proctor of The intention of Senator Proctor of Vermont to retire two years before his term expires was reached after taking into consideration every phase of sena-torial life. Proctor could have stayed in the senate as long as he lived. That is a rule in New England that has been followed with only few exceptions for many years, but Senator Proctor has seen examples of this locality of conseen examples of this loyalty of con-stituents to senators which have not stituents to senators which have not been for the best interests either of the men or the states they representd. We have seen men retained in the sen-ate who had long outlived their useful-ness, and who were merely ghosts of their former greatness. They held prominent places on committees, but never took part in the legislation which their committees reported. Senator Proctor, yet sound and vigorous in mind and body, desires to retire while he can still enjoy the rest of private life and while he is yet capable of per-forming his senatorial duties.

appointment of Jim Tawney airmanship of the appropriation committee. Grosvenor was named as one of these leaders. When the story was brought to his attention he remarked in tones that left no doubt as to his meaning: "So far as I am concerned it is an unmitigated lie. I never spoke to Cannon about Tawney." WHEN COURTESY ENDS.

"Senatorial courtesy," about which we hear so much in the course of the session, does not extend to the assign-ment of places on committees or committee rooms. One might suppose that a committee room belonged to the comhave equal rights there, but not so. It belongs to the chairman almost as much as his room in a hotel. In the re-arrangement of committees there is alarrangement of committees there is al-ways a scramble for vacant chairman-ships, especially if a good room goes with the committee. The senators who make up the committees are having nearly as much trouble with the rooms as they have in placing the new sena-tors and filling vacancies. In making demands for committee places and com-mittee rooms senators do not hesitate to get all they can.

SENATORIAL AMENITIES.

The card party given by Miss Clayton on Saturday night in honor of the Misses Young was a most enjoyable affair, the amusement being cards, and about 10 guests being present. The rooms were bright with Christmas reds and greens, and prizes were won by Miss Jean Spen-cer and Richard Young, Jr. On Monday night Miss Clayton entertained at a sec-ond party, the prizes in the card contest going to Miss Phyllis Bruton and Tyler Young. "When this bill," remarked Senator Allison, referring to the emergency canal appropriations, "comes before the appropriations committee, I will, with the aid of the South Carolina senator, "If I did not know," replied Senator, "If I did not know," replied Senator Tillman, "now eminently and thorough-ly kind hearted and genial the senator from Iowa is, I would have taken that as a sarcastic allusion to my insignificance as a member of the appropriations committee, because no one feels his unimportance there more than I
