VANDERBILT HAS A GOOD RECORD

Season on French Turf Was a Prosperous One.

YEARS' CAMPAIGNING.

Name Now Stands at Head of List of Winning Owners-Ambitions Gratified.

After nearly 10 years' campaigning on the French turf one of William K. Van-derbilt's most laudable ambitions was gratified during the racing season just passed, and for the first time since his advent there his name stands at the head of the list of winning owners. That of M. Edmond Blanc, which has for several years past been at the top, has been displaced. Mr. Vanderbilt's actual winnings total $345,980, or more than double as much as those of his nearest competitor, M. Lieux, who won $122,148.

mings total $26,890, or more than double as much as those of his nearest competitor, M. Lieux, who won $122,145.

M. Caillault won $107000 and M. Blanc is the fourth on the list with $35,000.

It is the first time an American has ever held the place of honor, though in previous years Mr. Vanderbilt has been very near the top of the list. Regrettably enough, the one race of all others which our countryman desired to win, the Grand Prix, the richest stake in the world, but far more desirable because of the sentimental interest attached to it, was not destined to be his this year, notwithstanding that his representative, the great racer Maintenon, by far the best French colt of the year, was a starter, but was not placed, the race having been won by an English-bred colt. Spearmint, which had won the Epson Derby a few days before that. To this day the defeat of Maintenon is the greatest mystery of the turf season, because all his subsequent form was far above that he showed in the Grand Prix.

This year's Grand Prix was worth about $56,000 in all, of which $4,000 went to the second and $2,000 to the third. In future years the French Jockey club will make it even a more valuable stake, and it will then be worth $50,000.

Maintenon was ridden in the Grand Prix by Percy Woodland, an English jockey, who was as good over the jumps as on the flat, and as the scale of weights. 125 pounds, permitted all the good jockeys to have mounts, no less than five Americans rode in it. Ransch, the regular stable jockey, was not on Maintenon, because the youth had suffered an injury in a race a few days before. The plight of Mr. Vanderbilt and his trainer, William Duke, may be imagined when they found the public favorite, their representative, would be without a service of his regular stable jockey. They did the best they could under the circumstances, and the defeated of the popular French colt in the no less popular American colors was a sad blow to the French though they cheered heartlly the victory of the English turf critics say lowing Instructions.

Mike Cantillion tells a funny story about Claud Rossman. Says Mike: "It was when Claud was batting around 400 for the Des Moines club. Herman Long gave him the signal to sacrifice, and Claud nodded his head. He bit the first bail pitched with a mighty swat for a home run, clearing the bases and winning the game. When he came in with the crowd cheering, he was all smiles until he met Long. Herman was swearing mad, yelling half in Ederman. "Didn't I tell you to sacrifice? he said. "Why don't you follow instructions? I've a good mind to bench you for a while. I didn't tell you to hit a home run." lowing Instructions.

ADVICE TO FIGHTERS BY JAWN O'BRIEN.

"A gentleman may be a fighter but few fighters can be gentlemen." Retire before you are beaten is poor advice. Retire when the big purses stop coming and leave the field when prepared for a better one.

"Travel and the constant companionship of brighter minds will fit any thinking man for a future after his physical condition stops his ring work." "Too many irons in the fire may not be a bad thing after all. Before long one of them will turn out to be true steel. "I have made champions so that I could whip them later on.

"A Chicago physician once told me I was suffering from an enlarged heart. I cured it by being awfully good to Jack O'Brien."

STIR AMONG TENNIS PLAYERS Caused by Victory of American Over English Champion.

English Champion.

New York, April 19.—The victory of the American, D. P. Rhodes, ever A. W. Gore, the English er-champion in the semifinals of the English national covered court lawn tennis championship, has caused a stir among some of the influential local players. It brought to light the unofficial statement that it had been said since the arrival of Beals C. Wright last Sunday, that Rhodes was a possible players for the American international challenge team. Since the practical with drawal of Raymond D. Little it was said that this chance had virtually become a certainty and that Rhodes would take his place with Wright and Karl H. Behr, Jr., when the two players arrived on the other side for the contests.
