

MOTLEY CREW IN CRIMINAL COURT

Men Accused of Offenses Ranging From Neglect to Attempt to Commit Murder.

BUT ONE HAS AN ATTORNEY.

David Latham, Who Used a Pistol, Given Until Thursday to Secure Counsel to Defend Him.

Before Judge Lewis this morning was arraigned a motley crowd of accused men. Their alleged offenses ranged from neglecting minor children to assault with a deadly weapon with intent to commit murder. But one was represented by an attorney and the others will take chances with the law, or ask the court to appoint counsel.

Frank Hall, a stockily built young man, was the first to be arraigned to plead. In the information he is charged with attempted burglary in the second degree. He was arrested, the information sets forth, while attempting to enter the Charlton shop at 122 south Main street on April 28, 1909. To this charge he plead not guilty. David Latham, whose jealousy of a woman led him to threaten her with a revolver and resulted in shooting at Policeman H. D. Lyon, was arraigned on the charge of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to commit murder. He refused to plead to the charge until he heard from his brother, who promised to retain an attorney to fight the case. He was given until next Thursday morning to arrange for an attorney to defend him. The shooting occurred on May 6, 1909.

C. O. Nelson, tall, muscular Swede, who is charged with neglecting his two little children since May 1, 1907, was arraigned and through an interpreter the information was read. He plead not guilty and has an attorney to fight his case.

Sam. Coleman, who was arrested after he had ransacked the Brown Flats at 213 Third East street, was arraigned on the charge of burglary in the third degree. He plead not guilty to this charge which was committed, it is alleged, on April 15.

Thomas Williams plead not guilty to a statutory offense alleged to have been committed on May 2, 1909. Ann Blinn, 16 years old, is the complaining witness.

THE ROUND OF THE THEATERS

MRS. FISKE AT THE GRAND—One is prone to use adjectives in reviewing the presentation of "Salvation Nell" at the Grand last night, and it is not too much to say that those who witnessed the performance found it hard to shake off its spell this morning. Some will go to see it again just to dissect the scores of little "bits of business" with which the drama of the slums abounds. The majority, however, are content to have seen it—they would not have missed it for anything, but horses could not drag them from it again. To the individual who has been slumming in large cities every type presented was instantly identified. With those whose eyes are cast in pleasant places, however, it was a case of "can such things be?"

It must be said that honors are divided between the stage manager and the cast. The amount of detail with which the free lunch mauler, the children of the slums rushing the can, the bouncer, pug-uglies, women of the street and all the rest of the footman and letman of society are depicted with a vividness that is compelling. Amid it all Sanders, the scrub girl, drifts in to the "wine room," a pathetic figure as she mops off the tables and wipes the floors. The play has been called America's greatest actress and it is hard to picture any other actress playing "Salvation Nell" with such vivid faithfulness. The little stage tricks and business all appeal to the emotions; her methods are those of restraint of the modern school of acting. When she witnesses what she believes to be murder, she dives under the table and her tough-lover handkerchief and taken away, and during the scene she is loved and less vivid. The lookkeeper turns her into the street, she utters barely a word, but one can read the emotions that are welling up for expression as she looks on. The actress in the spot and volubly pouring out her soul across the footlights.

The second act is a contrast in its simplicity, but none the less vivid. The act shows the tenement district, with street urchins, the saloon on the corner, the pawnshop, the slatternly woman leaning out of the windows and the scene of the fire escapes, is the climax. It opens with a battle between "an honest married woman" and "a thing of the streets" for a woman who has been run over and a child who has been killed. As in the first act the detail and character sketches are introduced with a master hand. Nothing is overdone, it is just the truth. While one is following the dialogue out of the fall of his eye he can see a man come on at the back carrying a bundle, he sees the woman who has been run over and a child who has been killed. Every member of the cast is an artist, not forgetting the barefooted children. Holbrook Blinn, as Jim Platt, shares the honors with Mrs. Fiske. The scene when he returns from Sing Sing being a finished piece of acting, and throughout his portrayal of the revolting character is clear and convincing. The company has returned from Logan where a big hit was registered and is now prepared to capture the downtown theatergoers. Ed. Kimball, who has taken a big part in the organization and has orchestrated the various catchy numbers with which the piece abounds.

ORDERLY HOLIDAY.

REMOVAL NOTICE.

Geo. W. Peck, general agent Fidelity and Casualty Co., has moved to Boston block, room 324.

young people, it is too revolting and vivid and too true to life. It was a wonderful house which presented the initial presentation in this city, a dressy audience representing Salt Lake as it had never been represented before at the Grand Theater. The heavy, crowded house, however, Mrs. Fiske's tendered her engagement here, closing on Thursday night, with matinee Wednesday.

COLONIAL—The clock hands pointed nearer to 12 than 11 o'clock last night when the curtain went down on the final scene in "The Christian" at the Colonial, and the audience sat and interest is evidence of the favorable impression made by the production. Miss Mary Hall as Glory Quayle did the finest piece of acting she has yet done in Salt Lake, and started off indeed she did not eclipse, the honors won by Mr. Stuart as John Storm. The latter's rendition lacked the evenness which distinguished Miss Quayle's play. The collection of screening, however, though in the strong scenes, notably that with Glory in her apartment whether he flees when pursued by the mob, he did splendid work. The cast had most excellent support throughout, the Drake and Mrs. Calender being especially well done. This is not to put Mr. Heffron to the rear, whose Lord Robert was done with the ease and finish which always make him a distinct personality in a play.

Miss Cleveland as Polly, made as much as possible out of her small part, and Mr. Arline as the archdeacon was the best of the minor characters were admirably done. A feature of the play is John Storm's "people" who gather in the church club rooms, London's tenderness being repeated in the collection of screening, make-ups and bits of character work. The play dragged a little last night in places, but will undoubtedly gather vim on further rendition. It goes for the remainder of the week.

BUNGALOW—A fair house was present at the Bungalow last evening to see "The Yankee Doodle Boy," a musical comedy in three acts, in which a railroad accident is responsible for the meeting at the only hotel in a small country town, of the principals in a couple of elopements. The situations are little more than a tissue of the ridiculous, but the meeting which there takes place, when the discovery is made that the elopers are mother and daughter and father and son, the father playing with the daughter and the son with the mother. There is also a Handy-Andy figuring prominently in the piece, who does nothing right, a railroad porter, and the severe old maid who runs the hotel. The play is followed next week by "The Courier of Fortune."

THEATRE—The climax of the dramatic and literary season is what is promised in the appearance of Montville Flowers in a series of interpretative recitals at the theater for three nights and two matinees, commencing tonight. "Ben Hur" (our acts) will be the subject tonight.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED. by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a humming sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free. Sold by Druggists.
