

DESERET EVENING NEWS

WEATHER REPORT.

Record at the local office of the weather bureau for the 24 hours ending at 6 a. m. today:

Barometer reading at 6 a. m., 30.6 inches. Temperature at 6 a. m., 30 degrees; maximum, 42; minimum, 27; mean, 34, which is 7 degrees above normal.

Excess of daily mean temperature since the first of the month, .56 degrees.

Precipitation since the first of the month, .07 inch, which is .36 inch below normal.

FORECASTS TILL 6 P. M. SATURDAY.

Local forecast for Salt Lake City and vicinity:

Partly cloudy tonight and Saturday. For Utah: Forecasts taken at Denver, Colo.

Partly cloudy tonight and Saturday.

WEATHER CONDITIONS.

Pressure is moderately low over the southwest and Alberta. An area of high pressure extends from the Washington and Oregon coast eastward to the Dakotas. Precipitation has occurred over Washington and Oregon. It is warmer over Nevada, Alberta, western Montana, and Texas, and colder over the Dakotas and Minnesota.

L. H. MURDOCH, Section Director.

TODAY'S TEMPERATURE.

6 a. m.	30
7 a. m.	30
8 a. m.	30
9 a. m.	30
10 a. m.	30
11 a. m.	30
12 noon.	32
1 p. m.	32
2 p. m.	34

THE SEMI-WEEKLY NEWS.

THE GREAT COUNTRY PAPER OF THE WEST.

is issued Mondays and Thursdays and contains all the cream of the Daily and Saturday News.

To-day's Metals:

SILVER, Bar, 47 7-8 cents
LEAD, $3.50.
CASTING COPPER, 11 1-4 cents a lb.

LOCAL BRIEFS.

Hyrum Popp, formerly of Germany, and Domenico Tono, formerly of Italy, both now residents of this city, have been admitted to citizenship by Judge Stewart.

The officers of the signal corps have changed the color of their shoulder straps from black to orange, in accordance with the recent changes made in uniforms by the army board.

Several cases of smallpox have developed in the Twenty-second ward recently, due, it is said, to carelessness on the part of those afflicted. Six families in that section are now under quarantine.

The ladies' auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. meets at 2:30 tomorrow afternoon, at the association rooms, where an address will be given by Edgar M. Robinson of New York on the subject of "The Family." A lunch will be served at noon to boys, and Mr. Robinson will speak to them.

Will Henderson, the blind newspaper vendor, mislaid his steps yesterday, and fell down the basement stairs at the Utah National bank corner. He was considerably bruised, but was picked up and helped to his rooms on Commercial street where he was cared for.

General Manager D. S. Murray of the Rocky Mountain Bell Telephone company is contracting for poles for the new line to be built from St. John to Tropic in the Deep Creek district, 118 miles, and which will be a proposed side line, will make a mileage of 150 miles of new service. This will be of the greatest benefit to the mining community all through the Clifton mining district.

Mrs. Shinnons of Thistle has just undergone an operation at the Keogh-Wright hospital for the removal of an encysted stricture in the intestine immediately below the pyloric valve of the stomach. On account of this stoppage food from the stomach could not reach the alimentary tract, and the sufferer was starving to death. Owing to her weakened condition the operation was a critical one, but there are reasonable hopes of her recovery.

We may 4 per cent interest per annum on $1 to $5,000. Zion's Savings Bank & Trust Co., Joseph F. Smith, President; George M. Cannon, Cashier.

UTAH COMMERCIAL AND SAVINGS BANK

Interest paid on savings, W. F. Armstrong, president, Byron Groo, vice-president, J. E. Oline, cashier.

A machine of pure steel kneads our dough for Royal Bred. No sweat from the human hands and body makes it unclean. All grocers sell it. Shipped all over Utah.

DIAMOND COAL, 51 W. 2ND SO.

Waldenholme Coal Co., Tel. 495, 51 West Second South.

CHRISTENSEN'S DANCING ACADEMY.

Opening of New Classes.

Gentlemen beginners, Monday, Jan. 15th, 7:15.

Lady beginners, Tuesday, Jan. 16th, 7:15.

Matinee every Saturday 5 to 6:30.

CHURCH NOTICES.

Salt Lake High Priests.

The semi-monthly meeting of the High Priests of the Salt Lake Stake of Zion will be held at the Assembly hall, Friday, Jan. 5, 1933, at 7 o'clock p. m. Those who do not attend the Saturday meetings are especially requested to be present.

DAVID MCKENZIE, WILLIAM ASPER, HAMILTON G. PARK, Presidency.

Jordan Stake.

The regular High Council meeting of the Jordan Stake will be held at Sandy, Wednesday, Jan. 14, at 5 o'clock p. m. (one week earlier than usual). Appointments for special visits to the wards will be made at this meeting. The home missionaries of the Jordan Stake will meet on the same day at the same place at 8 o'clock p. m.

MILVA LIND, Clerk of the Stake.

SHAKESPEARE

AND HIS PLAYS

Brilliant Lecture at L. D. S. University.

BY FREDERICK WARDE.

A Large and Enthusiastic Audience Held Spellbound by His Oratory and Power of Impassioned.

Mr. Frederick Warde delivered his great lecture, "Shakespeare and His Plays," before the students of the L. D. S. University yesterday. Barratt hall was filled with eager listeners.

The lecturer began by discussing the life, works and influence of Shakespeare, whose very name was music to him. Who was Shakespeare and what did he do? Much has been written in answer, of which not a little is extremely puzzling.

There is an impression, the lecturer said, that the great poet was born of humble parentage. This is a mistake. His ancestors belonged to the yeomanry, that great middle class, from which has sprung the best in England and America.

Of Shakespeare's early life we know but little. The very date of his birth is a matter of inference. He probably attended the grammar school, and was therefore started out on his career with "a little Latin and less Greek." From this time till his eighteenth year we have no record of his doings, and then only a record of an indiscretion—he married. Mr. Warde here explained that he did not hold any ill-will towards matrimony in general; but that he certainly did not look with favor on a marriage between a boy of 18 and a young woman eight years older, as was the case with the poet.

The next important event in the life of Shakespeare was his escape from the law. He was charged with the theft of a deer, and the lecturer related the deer-stealing affair with a face as grave and a tone as earnest as if the critics had never been anything but agreed upon the absolute truthfulness of Mr. Halliwell's patient investigations. A Shakespeare, like the rest of mortals, must show his "wild oats."

Then Shakespeare went to London, where for a time he held horses for the gentry at the door of the theater, until he could get something to do on the stage. There is a tradition that he was not an indifferent actor, as indeed most authors are. It is thought that he took the part of Adam in "As You Like It," the part of Hamlet in part first of "Henry IV." It is certain, however, that he introduced that abominable custom of traveling companies, which has since made a theater a place of no account, the habit of acting. He wrote many plays here, at first in collaboration with others, then by himself. He stood well up in the recognition of the dramatic art of his day—Green, Jonson, Beaumont and Fletcher. After acquiring considerable wealth by his pen, he finally retired to Stratford, where he died on the 23rd of April, 1616.

Some persons have questioned Shakespeare's title to the credit of producing these great plays, and have endeavored to put the laurels upon the head of Sir Francis Bacon. This theory, however, is a mere fancy. The idea of a collaboration with others, then by himself, he stood well up in the recognition of the dramatic art of his day—Green, Jonson, Beaumont and Fletcher. After acquiring considerable wealth by his pen, he finally retired to Stratford, where he died on the 23rd of April, 1616.

There is a tradition that he was not an indifferent actor, as indeed most authors are. It is thought that he took the part of Adam in "As You Like It," the part of Hamlet in part first of "Henry IV." It is certain, however, that he introduced that abominable custom of traveling companies, which has since made a theater a place of no account, the habit of acting. He wrote many plays here, at first in collaboration with others, then by himself. He stood well up in the recognition of the dramatic art of his day—Green, Jonson, Beaumont and Fletcher. After acquiring considerable wealth by his pen, he finally retired to Stratford, where he died on the 23rd of April, 1616.

Some persons have questioned Shakespeare's title to the credit of producing these great plays, and have endeavored to put the laurels upon the head of Sir Francis Bacon. This theory, however, is a mere fancy. The idea of a collaboration with others, then by himself, he stood well up in the recognition of the dramatic art of his day—Green, Jonson, Beaumont and Fletcher. After acquiring considerable wealth by his pen, he finally retired to Stratford, where he died on the 23rd of April, 1616.

There is a tradition that he was not an indifferent actor, as indeed most authors are. It is thought that he took the part of Adam in "As You Like It," the part of Hamlet in part first of "Henry IV." It is certain, however, that he introduced that abominable custom of traveling companies, which has since made a theater a place of no account, the habit of acting. He wrote many plays here, at first in collaboration with others, then by himself. He stood well up in the recognition of the dramatic art of his day—Green, Jonson, Beaumont and Fletcher. After acquiring considerable wealth by his pen, he finally retired to Stratford, where he died on the 23rd of April, 1616.

Some persons have questioned Shakespeare's title to the credit of producing these great plays, and have endeavored to put the laurels upon the head of Sir Francis Bacon. This theory, however, is a mere fancy. The idea of a collaboration with others, then by himself, he stood well up in the recognition of the dramatic art of his day—Green, Jonson, Beaumont and Fletcher. After acquiring considerable wealth by his pen, he finally retired to Stratford, where he died on the 23rd of April, 1616.

There is a tradition that he was not an indifferent actor, as indeed most authors are. It is thought that he took the part of Adam in "As You Like It," the part of Hamlet in part first of "Henry IV." It is certain, however, that he introduced that abominable custom of traveling companies, which has since made a theater a place of no account, the habit of acting. He wrote many plays here, at first in collaboration with others, then by himself. He stood well up in the recognition of the dramatic art of his day—Green, Jonson, Beaumont and Fletcher. After acquiring considerable wealth by his pen, he finally retired to Stratford, where he died on the 23rd of April, 1616.

Some persons have questioned Shakespeare's title to the credit of producing these great plays, and have endeavored to put the laurels upon the head of Sir Francis Bacon. This theory, however, is a mere fancy. The idea of a collaboration with others, then by himself, he stood well up in the recognition of the dramatic art of his day—Green, Jonson, Beaumont and Fletcher. After acquiring considerable wealth by his pen, he finally retired to Stratford, where he died on the 23rd of April, 1616.

There is a tradition that he was not an indifferent actor, as indeed most authors are. It is thought that he took the part of Adam in "As You Like It," the part of Hamlet in part first of "Henry IV." It is certain, however, that he introduced that abominable custom of traveling companies, which has since made a theater a place of no account, the habit of acting. He wrote many plays here, at first in collaboration with others, then by himself. He stood well up in the recognition of the dramatic art of his day—Green, Jonson, Beaumont and Fletcher. After acquiring considerable wealth by his pen, he finally retired to Stratford, where he died on the 23rd of April, 1616.

Some persons have questioned Shakespeare's title to the credit of producing these great plays, and have endeavored to put the laurels upon the head of Sir Francis Bacon. This theory, however, is a mere fancy. The idea of a collaboration with others, then by himself, he stood well up in the recognition of the dramatic art of his day—Green, Jonson, Beaumont and Fletcher. After acquiring considerable wealth by his pen, he finally retired to Stratford, where he died on the 23rd of April, 1616.

There is a tradition that he was not an indifferent actor, as indeed most authors are. It is thought that he took the part of Adam in "As You Like It," the part of Hamlet in part first of "Henry IV." It is certain, however, that he introduced that abominable custom of traveling companies, which has since made a theater a place of no account, the habit of acting. He wrote many plays here, at first in collaboration with others, then by himself. He stood well up in the recognition of the dramatic art of his day—Green, Jonson, Beaumont and Fletcher. After acquiring considerable wealth by his pen, he finally retired to Stratford, where he died on the 23rd of April, 1616.

Some persons have questioned Shakespeare's title to the credit of producing these great plays, and have endeavored to put the laurels upon the head of Sir Francis Bacon. This theory, however, is a mere fancy. The idea of a collaboration with others, then by himself, he stood well up in the recognition of the dramatic art of his day—Green, Jonson, Beaumont and Fletcher. After acquiring considerable wealth by his pen, he finally retired to Stratford, where he died on the 23rd of April, 1616.

There is a tradition that he was not an indifferent actor, as indeed most authors are. It is thought that he took the part of Adam in "As You Like It," the part of Hamlet in part first of "Henry IV." It is certain, however, that he introduced that abominable custom of traveling companies, which has since made a theater a place of no account, the habit of acting. He wrote many plays here, at first in collaboration with others, then by himself. He stood well up in the recognition of the dramatic art of his day—Green, Jonson, Beaumont and Fletcher. After acquiring considerable wealth by his pen, he finally retired to Stratford, where he died on the 23rd of April, 1616.

Some persons have questioned Shakespeare's title to the credit of producing these great plays, and have endeavored to put the laurels upon the head of Sir Francis Bacon. This theory, however, is a mere fancy. The idea of a collaboration with others, then by himself, he stood well up in the recognition of the dramatic art of his day—Green, Jonson, Beaumont and Fletcher. After acquiring considerable wealth by his pen, he finally retired to Stratford, where he died on the 23rd of April, 1616.

There is a tradition that he was not an indifferent actor, as indeed most authors are. It is thought that he took the part of Adam in "As You Like It," the part of Hamlet in part first of "Henry IV." It is certain, however, that he introduced that abominable custom of traveling companies, which has since made a theater a place of no account, the habit of acting. He wrote many plays here, at first in collaboration with others, then by himself. He stood well up in the recognition of the dramatic art of his day—Green, Jonson, Beaumont and Fletcher. After acquiring considerable wealth by his pen, he finally retired to Stratford, where he died on the 23rd of April, 1616.

Some persons have questioned Shakespeare's title to the credit of producing these great plays, and have endeavored to put the laurels upon the head of Sir Francis Bacon. This theory, however, is a mere fancy. The idea of a collaboration with others, then by himself, he stood well up in the recognition of the dramatic art of his day—Green, Jonson, Beaumont and Fletcher. After acquiring considerable wealth by his pen, he finally retired to Stratford, where he died on the 23rd of April, 1616.

There is a tradition that he was not an indifferent actor, as indeed most authors are. It is thought that he took the part of Adam in "As You Like It," the part of Hamlet in part first of "Henry IV." It is certain, however, that he introduced that abominable custom of traveling companies, which has since made a theater a place of no account, the habit of acting. He wrote many plays here, at first in collaboration with others, then by himself. He stood well up in the recognition of the dramatic art of his day—Green, Jonson, Beaumont and Fletcher. After acquiring considerable wealth by his pen, he finally retired to Stratford, where he died on the 23rd of April, 1616.

Some persons have questioned Shakespeare's title to the credit of producing these great plays, and have endeavored to put the laurels upon the head of Sir Francis Bacon. This theory, however, is a mere fancy. The idea of a collaboration with others, then by himself, he stood well up in the recognition of the dramatic art of his day—Green, Jonson, Beaumont and Fletcher. After acquiring considerable wealth by his pen, he finally retired to Stratford, where he died on the 23rd of April, 1616.

There is a tradition that he was not an indifferent actor, as indeed most authors are. It is thought that he took the part of Adam in "As You Like It," the part of Hamlet in part first of "Henry IV." It is certain, however, that he introduced that abominable custom of traveling companies, which has since made a theater a place of no account, the habit of acting. He wrote many plays here, at first in collaboration with others, then by himself. He stood well up in the recognition of the dramatic art of his day—Green, Jonson, Beaumont and Fletcher. After acquiring considerable wealth by his pen, he finally retired to Stratford, where he died on the 23rd of April, 1616.

Some persons have questioned Shakespeare's title to the credit of producing these great plays, and have endeavored to put the laurels upon the head of Sir Francis Bacon. This theory, however, is a mere fancy. The idea of a collaboration with others, then by himself, he stood well up in the recognition of the dramatic art of his day—Green, Jonson, Beaumont and Fletcher. After acquiring considerable wealth by his pen, he finally retired to Stratford, where he died on the 23rd of April, 1616.

There is a tradition that he was not an indifferent actor, as indeed most authors are. It is thought that he took the part of Adam in "As You Like It," the part of Hamlet in part first of "Henry IV." It is certain, however, that he introduced that abominable custom of traveling companies, which has since made a theater a place of no account, the habit of acting. He wrote many plays here, at first in collaboration with others, then by himself. He stood well up in the recognition of the dramatic art of his day—Green, Jonson, Beaumont and Fletcher. After acquiring considerable wealth by his pen, he finally retired to Stratford, where he died on the 23rd of April, 1616.

Some persons have questioned Shakespeare's title to the credit of producing these great plays, and have endeavored to put the laurels upon the head of Sir Francis Bacon. This theory, however, is a mere fancy. The idea of a collaboration with others, then by himself, he stood well up in the recognition of the dramatic art of his day—Green, Jonson, Beaumont and Fletcher. After acquiring considerable wealth by his pen, he finally retired to Stratford, where he died on the 23rd of April, 1616.

There is a tradition that he was not an indifferent actor, as indeed most authors are. It is thought that he took the part of Adam in "As You Like It," the part of Hamlet in part first of "Henry IV." It is certain, however, that he introduced that abominable custom of traveling companies, which has since made a theater a place of no account, the habit of acting. He wrote many plays here, at first in collaboration with others, then by himself. He stood well up in the recognition of the dramatic art of his day—Green, Jonson, Beaumont and Fletcher. After acquiring considerable wealth by his pen, he finally retired to Stratford, where he died on the 23rd of April, 1616.

Some persons have questioned Shakespeare's title to the credit of producing these great plays, and have endeavored to put the laurels upon the head of Sir Francis Bacon. This theory, however, is a mere fancy. The idea of a collaboration with others, then by himself, he stood well up in the recognition of the dramatic art of his day—Green, Jonson, Beaumont and Fletcher. After acquiring considerable wealth by his pen, he finally retired to Stratford, where he died on the 23rd of April, 1616.

There is a tradition that he was not an indifferent actor, as indeed most authors are. It is thought that he took the part of Adam in "As You Like It," the part of Hamlet in part first of "Henry IV." It is certain, however, that he introduced that abominable custom of traveling companies, which has since made a theater a place of no account, the habit of acting. He wrote many plays here, at first in collaboration with others, then by himself. He stood well up in the recognition of the dramatic art of his day—Green, Jonson, Beaumont and Fletcher. After acquiring considerable wealth by his pen, he finally retired to Stratford, where he died on the 23rd of April, 1616.

Some persons have questioned Shakespeare's title to the credit of producing these great plays, and have endeavored to put the laurels upon the head of Sir Francis Bacon. This theory, however, is a mere fancy. The idea of a collaboration with others, then by himself, he stood well up in the recognition of the dramatic art of his day—Green, Jonson, Beaumont and Fletcher. After acquiring considerable wealth by his pen, he finally retired to Stratford, where he died on the 23rd of April, 1616.

There is a tradition that he was not an indifferent actor, as indeed most authors are. It is thought that he took the part of Adam in "As You Like It," the part of Hamlet in part first of "Henry IV." It is certain, however, that he introduced that abominable custom of traveling companies, which has since made a theater a place of no account, the habit of acting. He wrote many plays here, at first in collaboration with others, then by himself. He stood well up in the recognition of the dramatic art of his day—Green, Jonson, Beaumont and Fletcher. After acquiring considerable wealth by his pen, he finally retired to Stratford, where he died on the 23rd of April, 1616.

Some persons have questioned Shakespeare's title to the credit of producing these great plays, and have endeavored to put the laurels upon the head of Sir Francis Bacon. This theory, however, is a mere fancy. The idea of a collaboration with others, then by himself, he stood well up in the recognition of the dramatic art of his day—Green, Jonson, Beaumont and Fletcher. After acquiring considerable wealth by his pen, he finally retired to Stratford, where he died on the 23rd of April, 1616.

There is a tradition that he was not an indifferent actor, as indeed most authors are. It is thought that he took the part of Adam in "As You Like It," the part of Hamlet in part first of "Henry IV." It is certain, however, that he introduced that abominable custom of traveling companies, which has since made a theater a place of no account, the habit of acting. He wrote many plays here, at first in collaboration with others, then by himself. He stood well up in the recognition of the dramatic art of his day—Green, Jonson, Beaumont and Fletcher. After acquiring considerable wealth by his pen, he finally retired to Stratford, where he died on the 23rd of April, 1616.

Some persons have questioned Shakespeare's title to the credit of producing these great plays, and have endeavored to put the laurels upon the head of Sir Francis Bacon. This theory, however, is a mere fancy. The idea of a collaboration with others, then by himself, he stood well up in the recognition of the dramatic art of his day—Green, Jonson, Beaumont and Fletcher. After acquiring considerable wealth by his pen, he finally retired to Stratford, where he died on the 23rd of April, 1616.

There is a tradition that he was not an indifferent actor, as indeed most authors are. It is thought that he took the part of Adam in "As You Like It," the part of Hamlet in part first of "Henry IV." It is certain, however, that he introduced that abominable custom of traveling companies, which has since made a theater a place of no account, the habit of acting. He wrote many plays here, at first in collaboration with others, then by himself. He stood well up in the recognition of the dramatic art of his day—Green, Jonson, Beaumont and Fletcher. After acquiring considerable wealth by his pen, he finally retired to Stratford, where he died on the 23rd of April, 1616.

Some persons have questioned Shakespeare's title to the credit of producing these great plays, and have endeavored to put the laurels upon the head of Sir Francis Bacon. This theory, however, is a mere fancy. The idea of a collaboration with others, then by himself, he stood well up in the recognition of the dramatic art of his day—Green, Jonson, Beaumont and Fletcher. After acquiring considerable wealth by his pen, he finally retired to Stratford, where he died on the 23rd of April, 1616.

There is a tradition that he was not an indifferent actor, as indeed most authors are. It is thought that he took the part of Adam in "As You Like It," the part of Hamlet in part first of "Henry IV." It is certain, however, that he introduced that abominable custom of traveling companies, which has since made a theater a place of no account, the habit of acting. He wrote many plays here, at first in collaboration with others, then by himself. He stood well up in the recognition of the dramatic art of his day—Green, Jonson, Beaumont and Fletcher. After acquiring considerable wealth by his pen, he finally retired to Stratford, where he died on the 23rd of April, 1616.

Some persons have questioned Shakespeare's title to the credit of producing these great plays, and have endeavored to put the laurels upon the head of Sir Francis Bacon. This theory, however, is a mere fancy. The idea of a collaboration with others, then by himself, he stood well up in the recognition of the dramatic art of his day—Green, Jonson, Beaumont and Fletcher. After acquiring considerable wealth by his pen, he finally retired to Stratford, where he died on the 23rd of April, 1616.

There is a tradition that he was not an indifferent actor, as indeed most authors are. It is thought that he took the part of Adam in "As You Like It," the part of Hamlet in part first of "Henry IV." It is certain, however, that he introduced that abominable custom of traveling companies, which has since made a theater a place of no account, the habit of acting. He wrote many plays here, at first in collaboration with others, then by himself. He stood well up in the recognition of the dramatic art of his day—Green, Jonson, Beaumont and Fletcher. After acquiring considerable wealth by his pen, he finally retired to Stratford, where he died on the 23rd of April, 1616.

Some persons have questioned Shakespeare's title to the credit of producing these great plays, and have endeavored to put the laurels upon the head of Sir Francis Bacon. This theory, however, is a mere fancy. The idea of a collaboration with others, then by himself, he stood well up in the recognition of the dramatic art of his day—Green, Jonson, Beaumont and Fletcher. After acquiring considerable wealth by his pen, he finally retired to Stratford, where he died on the 23rd of April, 1616.

There is a tradition that he was not an indifferent actor, as indeed most authors are. It is thought that he took the part of Adam in "As You Like It," the part of Hamlet in part first of "Henry IV." It is certain, however, that he introduced that abominable custom of traveling companies, which has since made a theater a place of no account, the habit of acting. He wrote many plays here, at first in collaboration with others, then by himself. He stood well up in the recognition of the dramatic art of his day—Green, Jonson, Beaumont and Fletcher. After acquiring considerable wealth by his pen, he finally retired to Stratford, where he died on the 23rd of April, 1616.

Some persons have questioned Shakespeare's title to the credit of producing these great plays, and have endeavored to put the laurels upon the head of Sir Francis Bacon. This theory, however, is a mere fancy. The idea of a collaboration with others, then by himself, he stood well up in the recognition of the dramatic art of his day—Green, Jonson, Beaumont and Fletcher. After acquiring considerable wealth by his pen, he finally retired to Stratford, where he died on the 23rd of April, 1616.

BIRTHDAY SURPRISE PARTY

Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, a Veteran of Ninety-Two Years, the

Guest of Honor at an Enjoyable Function Last Night

—Five Generations Represented.

There was a very pleasant birthday surprise party last night, in honor of the 92nd birthday of Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, at the residence of her granddaughter, Mrs. H. J. Martin, 235 G street. There were present five generations represented as follows: Children, David Yearsley, Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, Mrs. H. J. Martin, 235 G street. There were present five generations represented as follows: Children, David Yearsley, Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, Mrs. H. J. Martin, 235 G street.

Children, David Yearsley, Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, Mrs. H. J. Martin, 235 G street. There were present five generations represented as follows: Children, David Yearsley, Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, Mrs. H. J. Martin, 235 G street.

Children, David Yearsley, Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, Mrs. H. J. Martin, 235 G street. There were present five generations represented as follows: Children, David Yearsley, Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, Mrs. H. J. Martin, 235 G street.

Children, David Yearsley, Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, Mrs. H. J. Martin, 235 G street. There were present five generations represented as follows: Children, David Yearsley, Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, Mrs. H. J. Martin, 235 G street.

Children, David Yearsley, Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, Mrs. H. J. Martin, 235 G street. There were present five generations represented as follows: Children, David Yearsley, Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, Mrs. H. J. Martin, 235 G street.

Children, David Yearsley, Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, Mrs. H. J. Martin, 235 G street. There were present five generations represented as follows: Children, David Yearsley, Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, Mrs. H. J. Martin, 235 G street.

Children, David Yearsley, Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, Mrs. H. J. Martin, 235 G street. There were present five generations represented as follows: Children, David Yearsley, Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, Mrs. H. J. Martin, 235 G street.

Children, David Yearsley, Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, Mrs. H. J. Martin, 235 G street. There were present five generations represented as follows: Children, David Yearsley, Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, Mrs. H. J. Martin, 235 G street.

Children, David Yearsley, Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, Mrs. H. J. Martin, 235 G street. There were present five generations represented as follows: Children, David Yearsley, Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, Mrs. H. J. Martin, 235 G street.

Children, David Yearsley, Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, Mrs. H. J. Martin, 235 G street. There were present five generations represented as follows: Children, David Yearsley, Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, Mrs. H. J. Martin, 235 G street.

Children, David Yearsley, Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, Mrs. H. J. Martin, 235 G street. There were present five generations represented as follows: Children, David Yearsley, Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, Mrs. H. J. Martin, 235 G street.

Children, David Yearsley, Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, Mrs. H. J. Martin, 235 G street. There were present five generations represented as follows: Children, David Yearsley, Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, Mrs. H. J. Martin, 235 G street.

Children, David Yearsley, Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, Mrs. H. J. Martin, 235 G street. There were present five generations represented as follows: Children, David Yearsley, Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, Mrs. H. J. Martin, 235 G street.

Children, David Yearsley, Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, Mrs. H. J. Martin, 235 G street. There were present five generations represented as follows: Children, David Yearsley, Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, Mrs. H. J. Martin, 235 G street.

Children, David Yearsley, Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, Mrs. H. J. Martin, 235 G street. There were present five generations represented as follows: Children, David Yearsley, Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, Mrs. H. J. Martin, 235 G street.

Children, David Yearsley, Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, Mrs. H. J. Martin, 235 G street. There were present five generations represented as follows: Children, David Yearsley, Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, Mrs. H. J. Martin, 235 G street.

Children, David Yearsley, Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, Mrs. H. J. Martin, 235 G street. There were present five generations represented as follows: Children, David Yearsley, Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, Mrs. H. J. Martin, 235 G street.

Children, David Yearsley, Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, Mrs. H. J. Martin, 235 G street. There were present five generations represented as follows: Children, David Yearsley, Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, Mrs. H. J. Martin, 235 G street.

Children, David Yearsley, Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, Mrs. H. J. Martin, 235 G street. There were present five generations represented as follows: Children, David Yearsley, Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, Mrs. H. J. Martin, 235 G street.

Children, David Yearsley, Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, Mrs. H. J. Martin, 235 G street. There were present five generations represented as follows: Children, David Yearsley, Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, Mrs. H. J. Martin, 235 G street.

Children, David Yearsley, Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, Mrs. H. J. Martin, 235 G street. There were present five generations represented as follows: Children, David Yearsley, Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, Mrs. H. J. Martin, 235 G street.

Children, David Yearsley, Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, Mrs. H. J. Martin, 235 G street. There were present five generations represented as follows: Children, David Yearsley, Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, Mrs. H. J. Martin, 235 G street.

Children, David Yearsley, Mrs. Mary Ann Yearsley, Mrs. H. J. Martin,