

SENATOR HANNA SUCCEUMBS TO TYPHOID

Every Effort Was Made to Prolong His Life but All in Vain—End Was Calm and Without Incident—For Two Days Previous to His Demise He Was Unconscious, Except at Intervals—Funeral Next Wednesday—Tributes to His Memory.

Washington, Feb. 15.—Senator Marcus Hanna died at the family apartments in the Arlington hotel, after an illness extending over nearly two months, filled with apparent recoveries followed by relapses, and finally drifting into typhoid fever, which, in his weakened condition, he was unable to withstand. When the end came all the members of the senator's family were in the room except Mrs. Hanna, the senator's wife, and Mr. and Mrs. Dan Hanna. Mrs. Hanna had left the room only a few minutes before.

BEGINNING OF THE END.

The last sinking spell began at exactly 4:30 o'clock. Drs. Carter and Osier were then in attendance. They did not come to the fact that he was about to die, and all the members of the family were sent for. Mrs. McCormack, one of the senator's daughters, and Miss Phelps were present when the end came. Mr. and Mrs. Dan Hanna were immediately to the chamber of the senator's wife to summon her to the bedside. It was while they were absent that the senator breathed his last.

DEATH COMES.

There were no distressing incidents attending the last moments. It was a sinking spell which terminated in 10 minutes. Just after his eyes closed in death Mrs. Hanna was able to come into the room. She bore up well under the ordeal, and tonight she is showing calmness and bravery. The courage which had been displayed by Mrs. Hanna was the subject of the greatest surprise. She had been in almost constant attendance on her husband, though realizing fully there was no hope for his recovery. Nevertheless, the reassurances of the physicians and the delicate importings of her children, which she took some rest were unavailing until late in the afternoon, when she was attacked by a violent headache. She was given a narcotic and then she retired to her chamber, but requested that a call be sent as soon as there appeared any change for the worse.

For the last two days Senator Hanna had not been conscious. He died at intervals, and then only to be mechanically some instructions given him by the physicians. Fourteen hours before the end was announced life had practically suspended, the flickering light being kept aglow by the most powerful scientific agencies.

NEWS SPREADS LIKE A FLASH.

Word of the senator's death went over the hotel like a flash. The lobby was crowded and a score of friends were waiting in Mr. Dover's room. No attempts were made to restrain grief. Senators Fairbanks, Scott and Kittredge broke down in tears. Dick and his wife at the loss of a friend who had been a brother. So it was that conversations were a curious admixture of whispers and choked sobs.

Spontaneous eulogies were unsolicited. Men who are acknowledged leaders of political parties, kings of finance and commerce, and men selected to serve in the highest positions in the nation were among those who expressed the country's immeasurable loss.

Funeral services will be held in the senate chamber Wednesday at noon, at which the president, cabinet, Congress, and the judiciary will be present.

For a brief period in the forenoon the body will lie in state in the marble room. After the services special trains will carry the body, the family and friends to Cleveland, where services will be held at the home of the senator on Friday afternoon. It is likely that Bishop Leonard of the northern diocese of Ohio of the Episcopal church will be present. St. John's church in this city, will conduct the services.

Sensations and representatives visited the hotel throughout the evening, and many of the dead man's friends were admitted to the death chamber.

HIS LAST WORDS.

The last intelligible words spoken by Senator Hanna were pathetic in his attempt to maintain to the last the humor which was characteristic of his life. Yesterday morning he moved his head slightly and his eyes a little. The nurse asked if he was looking for his handkerchief.

"I think my wife has my handkerchief," the senator whispered.

Members of the family, when told of the remark, at once recognized it as one of his favorite rejoinders in good nature, and it was a relief to the senator's custom when he missed any personal article, especially his handkerchief, to say:

DEATH MASK TAKEN.

At about 11 o'clock yesterday the senator became unconscious and the patient did not seem to know what was going on about him. When it was known that there was no chance of recovery, arrangement was made to have a death mask taken by Sculptor U. S. J. Dunbar, and that was done early this morning. The cast will be perfect and, strange as it may seem, will show the face in its usual fairness. The senator's face shows little emaciation and owing to the constant use of oxygen had taken on what appeared to be a coat of tan which gave it almost a like-like appearance.

PRESIDENT CALLS.

President Roosevelt called at the Arlington tonight personally to express his condolences to the members of the late Senator Hanna's family. The president walked to the hotel unattended. Some consideration has been given by the president and several members of the cabinet to the question of accompanying the funeral party to the place of interment of the late senator's remains in Ohio. The matter, however, is still undecided.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH.

Senator Hanna's full name was Marcus Alonzo Hanna, and he was past 64 years of age. He was born Sept. 21, 1839, in New Lisbon (now Lisbon), Columbiana county, O. His family removed to Cleveland in 1852. Senator Hanna was educated in the common schools and in the Western Reserve university at Hudson, O. After leaving school he entered the employ of the wholesale grocery house of Hanna, Garretson & Co., of which his father, Daniel Hanna, was the senior member, and when his father died, in 1862, Senator Hanna presented the family's interest in the concern until 1867, when the business was closed up. Senator Hanna then entered the iron and coal business as a member of the firm of Hanna & Co., under the name of the firm being changed in 1870 to M. A. Hanna & Co., under which name it still exists. Senator Hanna was heavily interested in the lake carrying business, both in the construction of vessels. He was also interested in mines, and was president of the Ca-

A prominent club woman, Mrs. Danforth, of St. Joseph, Mich., tells how she was cured of falling of the womb and its accompanying pains and misery by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Life looks dark indeed when a woman feels that her strength is fading away and she has no hope of being restored. Such was my feeling a few months ago when I was advised that my poor health was caused by prolapsus or falling of the womb. The words sounded like a knell to me. I felt that my sun had set; but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound came to me as an elixir of life; it restored the lost forces and built me up until my good health returned to me. For four months I took the medicine daily, and each dose added health and strength. I am so thankful for the help I obtained through its use."—MRS. fact that the vital organs were in good condition and performing their functions properly. Several years ago the senator was troubled to some extent by an affection of the heart, at first it was feared that a serious ailment should develop, but the affection might ensue. The examinations of the heart conditions, however, were reassuring to the physicians. Having been impressed by Dr. Brewer's treatment in New York, Senator Hanna requested that that physician be sent for to consult with Drs. Rixey and Nagruder.

HAS TYPHOID FEVER.

On his arrival here Dr. Brewer agreed with the diagnosis of the attending physicians. Dr. William Osier, the eminent diagnostician of the John Hopkins hospital in Baltimore, also was summoned to the bedside of the senator. Discovering some symptoms of typhoid fever, he suggested that an examination of the senator's blood be made. On Feb. 10, the physicians announced that Mr. Hanna was suffering from a case of irregular typhoid fever.

The most profound solitude was manifested by Senator Hanna's friends in Washington and throughout the country. Anxious inquiries as to the patient's condition were made almost momentarily throughout each day as his illness progressed.

WORRIED ABOUT HIS WORK. Mr. Hanna worried considerably about his work in the senate, and finally, at his suggestion, such matters as he was particularly interested in and required immediate attention were placed in the hands of Senator Fairbanks of Indiana.

Excessive weakness characterized the senator's condition on Sunday, the 7th inst. He was too weak, indeed, to attend to business practically as usual. Some fever was noted, but no more than usually as an incident of that disease. In a day or two the senator was better, and for several days thereafter he attended to business practically as usual. On the following Tuesday the senator's symptoms became more serious, and he was ordered by Dr. Rixey to discontinue all work likely to produce nervous strain, and to remain quietly in bed for a few days.

AT THE GRIDIRON CLUB.

Complying with these directions, he became better and was well enough on the night of Saturday, Jan. 30, to attend the annual dinner of the Gridiron club, an occasion which, he remarked, joyfully, no attack of the grip could induce him to forego.

The next morning he showed no ill effects of his attendance on the dinner, and during the day he received and chatted with about 40 of his friends. He was in fine spirits. Among others with whom he talked that day was James J. Hill, the financier and railroad magnate. They talked for nearly two hours about the financial and political situations, the Northern Securities case and other incidental topics. That was the last really important conference on general subjects of public interest in which Mr. Hanna participated.

AN ALARMING RELAPSE.

Late in the afternoon of Wednesday, Feb. 11, Senator Hanna suffered an alarming relapse. Drs. Rixey and Nagruder were hastily summoned and found their patient suffering from a congestive attack. His temperature had risen to over 100 and he was very weak. An examination developed the

FRIENDS WERE ANXIOUS.

The Arlington hotel was thronged with friends of the senator. Among those who, despite the alarming condition of the patient, yet adhered to the belief that the senator would recover, were his brother, H. M. Hanna, and Representative Dick of Ohio, toward whom Mr. Hanna had sustained the relation of an elder brother than that of a personal and political associate. Friday night, quite unexpectedly, Senator Hanna rallied from the collapse into which he had fallen, and toward midnight showed signs of marked improvement.

The official bulletins announced that the senator had passed a comfortable night Friday night, though his temperature several times reached 105 degrees. Application of sponge baths, however, reduced the temperature considerably.

FAMILY HAD HOPES.

During Saturday he was unconscious a large part of the time, but showed improvement during the day, which gave the family hope to believe that he would yet make good use of the "fighting chance" of recovery which the physicians said he had. There was no setback during the day, the latest bulletin issued at 11 o'clock describing it as a "gaining day." The wearing effect of the sickness on the patient, however, was again evident Saturday night, when he manifested increased weakness, although on the whole the night was passed comfortably. When the morning bulletin was issued, at 9:30 o'clock Sunday, the senator's temperature was still high and the respiration was 40. He had several fainting spells during the day, but rallied, but as night came, it was realized that all hope must be abandoned, and that it was merely a question of how many hours would elapse before the end.

THE END.

The senator during all the later days of his illness, even when oblivious to all save his doctors' efforts in his behalf, astonished his physicians by the tenacity with which he clung to life and the determination with which his strong will aided their efforts to avert death. From Sunday on the sick man grew weaker and weaker and responded more and more feebly to the powerful stimulants and oxygen supplied by the physicians, until finally the strong vital forces which had carried the senator through his active, aggressive life, completely succumbed and came to a final stop at 6:40 o'clock tonight.

STATEMENT BY PHYSICIAN.

It Says Sen. Hanna Had Typhoid In Virulent Form.

Washington, Feb. 15.—Dr. E. P. Carter of Cleveland, one of the attending physicians, tonight made the following statement regarding Mr. Hanna's illness:

HE DIED QUIETLY.

"Senator Hanna died quietly at 20 minutes of 7 tonight, after a most superb fight against a very virulent attack of typhoid. The senator had not risen well for some time, but he was confined to his bed only during the past 15 days.

AN UNUSUAL OCCURRENCE.

"The early inability to retain nourishment was finally overcome, and the case seemed to be progressing more favorably. On Sunday, Feb. 14, the afternoon the senator had a severe chill, a most unusual occurrence in the course of typhoid. Following this his temperature rose rapidly, reaching 105 that night, and the evidences of profound toxemia were marked. During the last days of Senator Hanna's illness he was able to retain the nourishment given and responded in a way little short of marvelous to treatment. The man's true character and the cloud of calumny and vituperation that was made to surround his name by political opponents. Things that were attributed to him by thoughtless advertisers were precisely the things of which he was absolutely incapable.

CONGRESS WILL ADJOURN.

Out of Respect to Memory of Senator Hanna.

Washington, Feb. 15.—Both houses of Congress will adjourn tomorrow immediately upon the announcement of the death of Senator Hanna. No business will be transacted in either house. Senator Foraker will announce the death of his colleague, and will offer resolutions of regret and for a committee to take charge of the funeral arrangements. Both houses will adjourn at 12 o'clock.

The resolutions will be sent to the house at once, and Gen. Grosvenor will present resolutions of regret on the part of the house.

There will be an official funeral in the senate chamber at noon on Wednesday, the body lying in state in the senate marble room in the morning. It is expected that the Gridiron Club quarter will participate in the services and sing the hymns. This will be done at the request of Senator Hanna's intimate relations with the club. His last public appearance was at the annual Gridiron dinner.

It is expected that three special trains will go to Cleveland Wednesday afternoon.

REGRET AT HIS DEATH.

Public Men Express Great Respect for Him.

Washington, Feb. 15.—There were universal expressions of regret tonight among public men at the death of Senator Hanna, all of whom without distinction of party, saying the country had lost one of its most forceful and useful citizens. To Secy. Hay the death of Senator Hanna is a great loss.

"No one who knew Senator Hanna," said Mr. Hay, "could fail to recognize in him those remarkable qualities of mind and heart that distinguished him. He was a man in a thousand for generosity, honesty and loyalty. He was one of the truest friends that ever lived."

SECY. HAY'S TRIBUTE.

Mr. Hay said that one of the most surprising things about Senator Hanna's career was the contrast between the man's true character and the cloud of calumny and vituperation that was made to surround his name by political opponents. Things that were attributed to him by thoughtless advertisers were precisely the things of which he was absolutely incapable.

"Senator Hanna was the soul of honor, candor and open dealing," added Mr. Hay. "So far from being, as some liked to consider him, a crooked trust and organized wealth, he was one of the most powerful and devoted champions of the laboring people this country has ever known. He believed in his party; he was devoted to his friends, and we will find, now that he has gone, some of the truest mourners in the ranks of the opposition, as among them, in his life, he counted some of his most devoted friends."

Senator Hanna was a faithful and loyal friend of President McKinley, perhaps his most intimate friend, and their names always will be associated in our political history."

SECY. WILSON.

Secy. Wilson had this to say of Senator Hanna: "A remarkable development, possible only with our conditions; a business man whose knowledge of men and things came from contact with affairs. McKinley's candidacy and the issues on which it rested brought him into public notice. Senator Hanna's ability as an organizer was recognized then and has been impressed upon the country since that time on many occasions. Senator Hanna's power in legislation and before the people have come as surprises. He shortened his life by excessive devotion to his ideals of public duty, and leaves a vacancy that will not be filled soon and a name that will have a place in history."

SECY. HITCHCOCK.

Secy. Hitchcock said: "The nation has lost a patriot, and his personal friends and associates a lovable companion, whose sterling qualities of head and heart found their most congenial expression in promoting the progress and prosperity of his country."

P. M. GEN. PAYNE.

Postmaster General Payne said: "My acquaintance with Senator Hanna is almost lifelong. I have known him intimately 35 years. In all the phases of life I have never known a truer man, a more devoted friend, and his death strikes nearer to me than I can express."

MR. CLEVELAND'S OPINION.

Princeton, N. J., Feb. 15.—Grover Cleveland, when informed tonight of the death of Senator Hanna, paid him the following tribute: "My relations with Mr. Hanna were only such as grew out of our association as members of the National Civic federation. He was active in the work of that body and sincerely devoted to the adjustment of differences between employers and employees. He was of great service in the work of the federation, and what he did was able to do in accomplishing its objects made him a useful man. His loss cannot fail to be greatly felt in more than one field of valuable endeavor."

SENATOR WOLCOTT'S ESTIMATE.

Denver, Feb. 15.—Speaking of the death of Senator Hanna, Edward O. Wolcott, former United States senator from Colorado, said:

"I feel particularly sad, for he was a personal friend of mine. He was a great man and his death is a national calamity. When it comes to the organization of the party, he will be greatly missed. He was looked upon by the conservative element of the party, as the inheritor of the McKinley traditions."

EX-SENATOR MASON.

Denver, Feb. 15.—Former U. S. Senator William E. Mason of Illinois, who is visiting in Denver, had the following to say concerning the death of Senator Hanna:

"His death is a national loss. For many years to come we will see the work of Senator Hanna. Every one who knew him of all intimately knows that he has lost a friend. To my mind, Senator Hanna was the peace-maker in official circles, and many a trouble has been averted for others by his constant kindness and his acts in advancing harmony."

REV. GUNSLAU'S EULOGY.

Chicago, Feb. 15.—Senator Hanna has been eulogized for his efforts in behalf of labor by the Rev. F. W. Gunsauls
