The Latest from Ingersoll.

Editors Descret News:

The Caledonian Apiarian Society, in accordance with a precedent inaugurated some few seasons ago, chose the occasion of the Highland and Agricultural Society's Show for their exhibition of hives, bees, honey, etc., and I will give a brief account of the exhibition.

Passing along to the northeast corner of the grounds, where are pitched the tents sacred to the beet the observatory hives. Mr. Bryce Wilsen's hive, working somewhat on the old "Huber" principle, was noticeable both for its ingenuity and beanty. The bars, seven in number, were of the Woodbury size, arranged in a row, and standing parallel to each other. These working on a pivot, opened out like the large of the considered the case and left.

When Commodore Vanderbill rate complications of such a dwellrate complications of such a dwelling. A most interesting thing was elicited by the prize offered for the most artistic design wrought by the bees. Mr. W. Young, Perth, did himself an honor by the exhibition of the Perth arms—two spread eagles with the word "Perth" underneath, and wrought out in honey-comb; and the design received the attention and admiration it so well deserved Mr. R. R. Godfrey showed a beautiful collection of natural objects and diagramatic illustrations of apicultural subjects. Among the former was a curiosity in the shape of a wasp's nest found in a hive. Terrible as these crea was running steamboats, he beat in the shape of a wasp's nest found in a hive. Terrible as these creatures have always seemed, I could not help thinking that our old enemies would have got their deserts had the Ligurian bee been tenants of the invaded hive. The hives shown were numerous and all of a superior kind, both as to workmanship and design. One of the exhibits was a machine for making artificial comb ifoundation, along with a specimen of the work produced, which was of a high order.
