DESERET EVENING NEWS.

TRUTH AND LIBERTY.

VOL. II.

SALT LAKE CITY, THURSDAY EVENING, MAY 27, 1890.

No. 158

BREVITIES.

Moonlight immersions are becoming popular in Indiana.

An anvil block weighing twenty-five tons was cast at Trenton, New Jersey, recently.

Fish, Jr., has engaged a band of music for each of the new steamers of his Boston line.

Delenda Louisa Cook, living in San Francisco, took arsenic to improve her complexion and died.

Gargaroff, the wealthiest merchant in Moscow, is the grandson of a serf. His father was a poor shoemaker.

One of the friars at the Convent at Presburg, Hungary, was recently poisoned while partaking of the sacrament. A servant had poured sulphuric acid into his cup.

Advice to those who are about to go to law—first, ask yourself the question: "Are you morally in the right?" If the answer is "No," go to law by all means, you'll be sure to win.

Two ladies were having some words together on the roadside, when the laughter of one of them popped her head out of the door and cried "Be quick mother and call her a thief before she calls you one."

Woman suffrage is recognized by the Methodist Episcopal Church. All members of that church over twenty-one years of age are called upon to vote on the question of lay representation.

The Young Ladies' debating Society of the Female Seminary at Luray (Va.), has decided the following question in the negative: "Is the mind of woman capable of as high a degree of cultivation as that of the opposite sex?"

A revival has been in progress in Richmond, Indiana, in which Presbyterians, Methodists and Orthodox Friends are sharing richly. The latter, it is said, now carry on their meetings very much as do the Methodists.

The famous maelstrom on the coast of Norway is so little feared that the fishermen pass and repass it in their sail vessels at all states of the tide, except at certain times in the winter, when the greatest rate of the tide does not exceed six miles an hour.

Among the clerks in the Dead Letter Office at Washington, is a brother of Amos Kendall, who appointed him while he was Postmaster General under Jackson, over thirty years ago. Amos is now worth over a million. His brother never progressed over a $1,200 clerkship.

A young and pretty girl, a little proud of her good looks, had a quarrel with her lover, who repaid her for caring more for her beauty than his love. To prove to him how much she loved him she broke off her four front teeth, and, thus disfigured, cast herself at his feet. It is, perhaps, unnecessary to state that she lost her lover.

Among the aristocratic equestrians in Hyde Park, London, recently, was a man dressed as a girl of the period, who rode on a side-saddle, and acted the part of a woman to perfection. The police took no notice of him, although he made his appearance daily for upwards of a week.

Beecher says that the men confess everything but their own besetting sins. They steer clear of these. Who ever heard a man say, "O Lord, I am as proud as Lucifer; humble me;" or, "O Lord, I am so mean and stingy that 'tis only with great pain that I can unclose my fist; make me generous."

The "Girl of the Period," and other essays of the same class which have appeared in the Saturday Review, and which have been ascribed to various female members of the aristocracy, were written by Mrs. Lynn Linton, authoress of "Lizzie Lorton," and other novels, and wife of an artist.

Lord Palmerston was always very particular to write nothing rashly. He wrote at a standing desk, and kept his inkstand at the other end of the room, so that he had the time occupied in crossing the room twice to reflect upon what he intended to say. His own excuse for this habit was that he obtained the necessary exercise by it. He did not edit a daily paper.

The habit of one of our favorite boys was very much amused the other day. A fresh married couple arrived from the country. The lady was young, plump, pretty, and although "as pure as snow and chaste as ice," seems to have conveyed the idea to certain parties in the house that she was one of those "who seem not of the earth, but yet are on it." The husband was an honest, ingenious chap and fearfully verdant in the ways of the world, as will be seen. The pair had been at the house some twenty-four hours, when the bridegroom walked up to the clerk and remarked, "That's my wife that stops in the room with me."

"Yes, I suppose so," was the blank reply of the clerk.

"Well, I thought I'd mention it," continued Mr. Verdant, "so you wouldn't think it strange in my company. I never like to find fault, you know, but we're kinder bothered and I don't hardly know what to do. We've only been here since yesterday, and my wife has been invited to go to ride three times, and to go to minstreles' shows likewise, and just now a sleek-looking person knocked at the door and wanted to know if she was alone, and another actually inquired if 'that countryman she had on the string was gone.' I've no doubt these young men mean well enough," continued he, "but they are too dogoned polite for me. Though I s'pose it's city fashions."

"The poor fellow was assured that 'well-meaning' young men should not annoy him any further with their politeness, and he retired apparently much gratified."—Rock Island Argus.
