"The road connects with the Denver & Rio Grande at Price, and when completed will tap the big coal belt 15 miles south. The road will be standard gage, and the company will run its own engines and passenger coaches, but will haul coal in Rio Grande cars. Coal properties south of the proposed extension are being opened up, and if they prove to be large enough to justify, the road will probably be ex-tended still farther south." owning the concession.

"The concession to build a road be-gins, however, at the southern ter-minus of the line down the west coast of Mexico controlled by Harriman in-terests, and while there is no friction between the two interests, the matter of carrying this project to the point feached was accomplished without the interest of Mr, Harriman.

UTAH MEN INTERESTED.

"Most of the stockholders of the company are Utah people," continued Mr. Kimball. "The president of the company is a New York man well known in Utah, Captain Seeley; the vice president is Somator Jose Castellot, of Mexico, City, and some of the other officers are residents of Mexico, but many of the officials are local people, and the pro-ject might properly be called a local one, although the interests involved are very extensive. Bro very extensive. "The company already owns and oper ates a railroad extending southward from the city of Ouxaca 45 miles to Ejutia, and this will be a link in the Ejuda, and this will be a link in the line which will eventually be built along the line of the concession grant-ed. That this road will eventually figure in a direct line from Puget Sound to the Isthmus of Panama there is no doubt. The Mexican-American Holding company, which controls the con-cession, will not directly build the road, but another company, subsidiary to the parent corporation, will be organized for the purpose. The railroad company will be incorporated for $40,000,000, and will issue bonds to that amount for the will issue bonds to that amount for the construction of the road. Papers for the organization of the railroad com-pany, preliminary to the issuance of pany, preliminary to the issuance of the bonds have already been complet-ed, and it is expected the project will be carried through to early completion. The country through which the road will pass is as yet largely undeveloped, but is exceedingly rich in mineral, agri-cultural and timber resources, and all the truits of the tropics are abundantly produced in that section. That the railroad will be a paying investment from the start is scarcely debatable, and a steamship line is one of the pro-jects of the company.

Seeley of New York; first vice president, Jose Castellot, president of the Mexican sen-ate, of the City of Mexico; second vice president and financial agent, Joseph Kimbail, president of the Beaver Irri-gation & Power company; third vice president, Charles Hamilton of Mexico City: secretary and treasurer.
