Nocturnal Pedestrians.-In these days of garrottings and rumors of garrottings it is peculiar, not to say rather amusing, to observe the movements of nocturnal pe lestrians upon the streets of the city. Men. on seeing each other approach in the grim darkness, sidle, some-other toward the ditch, turn half around, clutching nervously behind, as much as to say, "Look out, I'm armed," and, anticipating the dread command, "Your loose cash or your life checks!" they pass each other finally and wonder why they had been so foolish.

The streets are more free from pedestrians after dark now than they have been for years previously.
