LOCAL AND OTHER MATTERS.

Certificate Form.—We have seen the form of a "Certificate of honor" which is given by the State of Utah to those who graduate under his tuition in the tonic school system. It is a handsome card, neat enough for framing. He has been teaching quite a large class, who are making excellent progress under his thorough course of instruction.

Portrait of Apostle Erastus Snow.—The proof of a very fine steel engraving of Apostle Erastus Snow, founder of the Scandinavian Mission, has been received from the Editor by Brother Andrew Jensen, Editor and publisher of Morgenstema. The portrait will illustrate the next volume of that magazine, for which Brother Jensen is now canvassing.

General Rich's Condition.—Bro. Charles G. Rich, we learn from a correspondent, is still confined to his room, and mainly to his bed. He looks well in the face, his eyes are bright and he seems to enjoy conversation and a good reader, but his articulation has failed and his desires are expressed simply by signs. Helpless but cheerful, the aged veteran is slowly passing away.

An English Vice-Consulate.—A petition is being signed in this city for the establishment of an English consulate at Denver, Colorado, with a vice consulate in Salt Lake City, the object of which is to facilitate business affairs between Great Britain and the western portion of this country. The petition is at the London Bank of Utah, awaiting signatures, and will be forwarded to Denver and sent from there with others, to Lord Granville in London.

Primary Reorganized.—A meeting convened in the Second Ward in this city yesterday at 2 o'clock p. m., for the purpose of reorganizing the Primary Association, a proceeding rendered necessary in consequence of the resignation of the President, Mrs. Jennie Walker, who has had charge of it for the past four years. Bishop Samuel Peterson and Counselor James Leach were present and made selections of the officers, and Sister E. R. Smith, officiated in reorganizing. The officers are now as follows: President, Phoebe C. Young; Counselors, Johanna Paul Olsen and Emily Hart; Secretary, Master Joseph Seymour Young; Treasurer, Lina Olsen. Appropriate remarks were made by Sisters E. R. Smith, E. C. Clawson, E. B. Wells, and Bishop Peterson, after which the officers were set apart by the Bishop and Brother Leach.

From Colorado Springs.—Mr. William Wood, whose departure for Colorado Springs with his little daughter, rendered mute from the effects of scarlet fever, was noticed several days ago, returned yesterday from his trip, bringing with him a circular of the Colorado Institute for educating the mute and blind, and a copy of the Deaf-Mute Index, a paper published at the Institute by one of its graduates, a gentleman both deaf and dumb. The paper has a very creditable appearance, is well edited and its contents interesting, especially to such as have an eye on the progress and welfare of the unfortunate and exponent. From the circular we learn that the officers of the Institute are as follows: R. S. Buckingham, President, Denver, Colorado; Charles H. White, Secretary, Colorado Springs, Colorado; and James Correy, Treasurer, Colorado Springs, Colorado. The establishment is free to all the mute and blind, of school age, in Colorado, the statutes of that State providing that all persons between the ages of 5 and 22 years, either mute or blind, are eligible, and the trustees take pains to impress upon the minds of parents and guardians that the Institute is intended solely for the education and maintenance of the class in reference to it, and that for self support, and not designed as an asylum for the imbecile.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY.

A SKETCH OF ITS APPEARANCE IN 1852.

It is invariably interesting to the student of history to note the changes a few short years will effect, when circumstances are favorable to progress, in the material and social advancement of a thrifty and enterprising people. A lithograph sketch of Salt Lake City, in the year 1852, when the long since discarded adjective "Great," held a conspicuous place in its alphabetic title, and the paradox subsequently created by the city's increase and the shortening of its name was possibly unforeseen, serves as a reminder of the good old long ago and as a contrast between the present and bygone times, which, while unpleasant in some respects, is in many others most refreshing to contemplate. The sketch alluded to is in the possession of Don Carlos Young, architect, of this city, and is the copy of an original by W. W. Mifflin, lithographer of St. Louis, Mo., and published by Robert Williams in some particulars, notably the aspect of the surrounding mountains, which loom up more prominently in the picture than in the actual view itself, the sketch is more ideal than accurate, but in the main the representation is pretty correct, especially in regard to the general appearance and location of houses, many of which are easily recognized, even at this late day, as ancient landmarks serving as links in the chain of architectural improvement, to unite what is with that which used to be. The city, as might naturally be expected, is sparsely settled, and though spread over a considerable area, is swept with a glance from the artist's point of observation, viz. Arsenal Hill, in the foreground stands an Indian, clad in the traditional habiliments of his race, (more familiar to admirers of Fenimore Cooper than to real observers of what he romantically carles (fures) and gazing wistfully to the southeast, almost on a line with the State road, which the artist evidently placed as the centre of his design. The most prominent object to the left of this street, if we except the grand old mountains, (which frown down even more sternly than the noble red man on the attempt to colonize the barren vale of which they have hitherto been the unthought joint guardians and possessors) is the old Lamb Barn—a portion of it still standing—the property of President Brigham Young, immediately behind which and almost hidden from view juts out the western end of the White House on the hill, his original residence. His other and more modern places of abode, the Beehive and Lion houses, were evidently, at the date of the sketch, not in existence. To the right of the picture, the Temple Block, without the faintest suggestion of a Temple or even of a wall surrounding the space set apart for its erection, is the cynosure of observation. A tall liberty pole, tall enough to annihilate the rules of perspective, is planted on the east side of the block, about where the uncompleted Temple now stands, and from its far too lofty summit floats a national pennant emblazoned with the one word "Utah," in letters as large as some of the houses between it and the artist's standpoint. The Old Tabernacle, an oblong structure whose sloping roof almost forms a triangle with the earth's surface, stands just as it did when pulled down some years ago, in the southwest corner of the square, and besides this there are several minor buildings in the northeast angle of the block, which memory alone would recognize, as they have long since disappeared. In its present place on the hill, stands the former home of President Heber C. Kimball, now owned and occupied by his son, Heber P., and on a direct line southward, within a distance of two blocks are the residence of Blahon N. K. Whitney, the Tithing Store, and the Benson House; a portion of the second now the DESERT NEWS office, and the last named the present home of General D. H. Wells. The Council House, recently destroyed by fire, is one of the prominent features behind, and the corner now adorned by the palatial Garde House is occupied by a building of humble pretensions which, if it did not then, afterwards contained the telegraph office and Squires' barber shop. The building now used as the Desert Museum, unless the eye is much deceived, was then standing as well as the dwelling just west of it, which may have then been, as it was several years later, the residence of Apostle Parley P. Pratt. Main Street, the now busy commercial thoroughfare, has the appearance in the sketch of a quiet village street, through which the meandering pasture boy, with freckled face, a solitary suspender and a tub on his back, might go limping after his cow, as he stopped to browse upon the grass and watercress growing upon the top of the doorknobs of what would now be Z. C. M. I., Desert Bank, Walker Brothers and the Greenback Building, etc., etc. And so we might go on all day, were it not that this article is already too long for the reader's interest and fully long enough for the time and space at the writer's disposal.

Notice.—The regular monthly meeting of the officers of the Y. L. M. I. A., will be held next Saturday, the 3rd inst., at 11 o'clock a. m., at the residence of Mrs. E. S. Taylor, one block and a half west of Cliff House. All interested are invited to attend.

Death of a Veteran.—Brother

Lewis R. Bisco, whose steady decline for the past fortnight has been noted at various times in these columns, expired yesterday afternoon about half past one o'clock, at his residence in the Eighth Ward. He was one of the early pioneers of the Territory, not of the historic 149, but one who followed close upon the heels of the first arrival into Salt Lake Valley, being a captain of fifty in C. C. Rich's company, which was one of the first to reach here in 1847. He was born October 25th, 1818, at Cincinnati, Ohio. At an early day, long before the Church existed at Nauvoo, Illinois, he was a resident there, and an intimate friend, as he ever continued to be, of Counselor D. H. Wells, then "Squire" Wells, who also resided in that vicinity prior to the advent of the Church. He was baptized at Nauvoo in the August of 1849, though he had previously been a staunch friend to the Prophet Joseph Smith and the Church Authorities, and participated in all the troubles of the following September, which culminated in the Exodus. On his way to the Valley he established the Platte River Ferry, and afterwards conducted the ferry at Green River. He also lived for a long time at Bridger, where he kept a supply store and blacksmith shop, helped many a missionary going said coming, and threw open his doors and made them welcome at all times. He was in early days appointed to labor among the Indians, particularly the Shoshones, Washakie's tribe, and it was largely due to his worthy example and the influence exerted by him and his comrade Joshua Terry, that peaceful relations were maintained between them and the whites, and that so many of the Lamanites subsequently joined, and are still joining the Church. He lost his place at Bridger through some legal irregularity in papers, of which he was made the victim, and the government neglected to remunerate him for his property of which it took possession. He was a member of the 37th quorum of Seventies, and his whole life was a working mission. He was beloved and respected for many sterling qualities, notably for his courage, hardihood and generosity, and his staunch and undeviating integrity to the work of God, and his friendship and fidelity to his leaders. He leaves a numerous posterity to the up and bless him. His death was caused by blood poisoning, superinduced by inflammation of the bladder, an old complaint which recurred while on his recent visit to Montpelier, Idaho, where he went to meet the remains, and attend the funeral of his son Charles E., who died on the 26th of September, in South Carolina, while fulfilling a mission. Since his return from the north, about two weeks since, he has steadily failed and his death, while much regretted, was an event daily expected. The funeral will take place on Saturday, at noon, in the Eighth Ward Meeting house, to which the friends of the family are invited.
