

SAVAGE ATTACK ON A DETECTIVE

"Pick" Shannon's Narrow Escape from Sudden Death at Hands of Chinaman.

CLEVER BROUGHT INTO PLAY

Fired a Shot and Then Clubbed the Enraged Oriental with the Butt of His Revolver.

Detective "Dick" Shannon of the Salt Lake police department had a narrow escape from instant death at the hands of an enraged Chinaman early last evening at 624 west Second North street, where he, in company with Detective Wilson, went to investigate a disturbance.

Word had been received at headquarters that trouble was brewing at the place mentioned, between a couple of Chinamen. When Shannon arrived at the place he started to enter the Mongolian's abode. The Chinaman, whose name is Ah Hing, seized a keen-bladed cleaver and rushed furiously at Shannon. He struck at the detective with great force and the blade sank into a beam above the door. Shannon stepped back and the Chinaman, enraged, rushed at him from the doorway. Shannon, however, was not taken by surprise. He drew a revolver and fired a shot at the Chinaman, but the latter was not frightened. He then rushed at Shannon and the latter, in self-defense, clubbed him with the butt of his revolver.

With a howl of rage he advanced upon the officer brandishing the cleaver, Shannon sidestepped and smashed the Chinaman a blow on the side of the head with his revolver. The Chinaman fell to the floor but still clutched the cleaver. Wilson took a hand at this point and the two officers managed to pin the Chinaman to the floor and disarmed him. He was then taken to police headquarters and locked up.

It seems that Ah Hing had trouble with a fellow countryman and had chased him out of the house with the cleaver. When he saw the officers coming he became more enraged than ever and tried to kill the officer. He will be charged with resisting an officer and with assault with a deadly weapon.

He suffered habitually from constipation. Doan's Regulator relieved and strengthened the bowels, so that they have been regular ever since. A. E. Davis, grocer, Sulphur Springs, Tex.

SALT LAKE GIRL IN WRECK.

Viola Pratt Gillette Has a Narrow Escape in Canada.

Many of Mrs. Viola Pratt Gillette's Salt Lake friends will be surprised to learn that she had a narrow escape from death in a railroad accident a few days ago in Canada. Mrs. Gillette, together with Mr. George McFarland and a number of other passengers, were enroute from Ottawa to Toronto, when the train was wrecked. A spreading rail dished the locomotive demolishing the baggage cars entirely, while several passenger coaches were very badly damaged. The bodies of the passengers lay close to the wreck. Mrs. Gillette and Mr. McFarland were directly to the theater where they were obliged to appear in their street costumes. They are billed to appear at the Orpheum here in November.

The track and train were sufficiently repaired so that the passengers were able to reach their destination late but safely. Mrs. Gillette and Mr. McFarland were directly to the theater where they were obliged to appear in their street costumes. They are billed to appear at the Orpheum here in November.

Special Issue of "Truth" is of Enlarged Size.

The state fair edition of Truth comes out with a sub-title for the paper, "The State Weekly." In addition to the usual amount of news and editorial pages, there is in this issue a large section, profusely illustrated, which reviews business and industrial growth in the state, during the past year. The review is accompanied with an assertion that it is only the internal strife involved in the so-called "state" controversy that has retarded Salt Lake from surpassing such cities as Los Angeles or Denver as a large metropolitan center. The edition in every way is a commendable one and deserves every appreciation of the paper at getting on its feet again.

AMUSEMENTS.

Theater-Tonight sees the opening of The Vanderbilt Cup at the Salt Lake theater. It will run the entire week and is sure to do an enormous business.

Miss Northrup's phenomenal engagement in Salt Lake ended Saturday afternoon and evening with the production of "Carmen" and "The Lady of the Shalott." The receipts for the four performances ran close to $5,000. "Carmen" was rendered in the same thrilling and magnetic fashion as before and it is considered by many to be Miss Northrup's very finest conception. "The Lady of the Shalott" was on its first production here and the great audience which beheld it, agreed on one point at least, and that is that it is fairly named. It is of all things French, the most French, and the

NEW YORK MONEY COMMANDS

When American Stocks Are Buoyant They Affect African Securities As Well.

Seeing Europe by automobile, is the topic Col. E. F. Holmes discusses at length in an interesting letter to H. L. A. Culmer of this city. Col. Holmes has been absent from Utah since early last spring in his long European trip, and in this letter he deals particularly with London and the country approaching it by automobile.

"There was a time," writes Col. Holmes, "when it could have been said that 'when the old lady on Threadneedle street took snuff all the world had to sneeze,' but it does not now apply, although she is yet a powerful influence and will always remain so. But it is to New York that the preponderating influence is being shifted, and it is amusing as well as instructive to see how their markets follow ours. When the New York market is buoyant it affects African stocks as well as the English market, and the English market is forever trying to make it appear as though the market changes were based upon some other cause, but it can be seen all the time that the financial condition in New York is at the bottom of any considerable movement here. It is a strange commentary that this great country should become dependent upon our own, not only for food and the raw material for their great manufactures, but that their finances should be, to a large extent, controlled from Wall street."

OFFICE CHANGES.

Radical changing of Short Line offices is being made in the News Annex. Auditor C. J. McMill is moving his private office from the fifth to the third floor, as is also the paymaster whose window now appears in the doorway of the auditor's office. Mr. McMill, under T. A. Martin, will occupy the large apartment just prepared in No. 32 by tearing out the entire floor into small offices. All of the partitions on the fifth floor are to be torn out, the entire space to be thrown into one great room for Auditor of Freight Accounts Joplin and his large force of clerks, who will move up from the fourth floor. The room now occupied by Mr. Joplin will be taken by Auditor of Passenger Accounts Crudekshank and his staff of 24. This completes the numerous novelties and removals that have been agitating the Short Line's offices for the last few months.

TO BUILD UP THE TOWN.

Real Estate Association Issues An Invitation to Capitalists.

The Salt Lake Real Estate association met Saturday evening, when the principal topic of discussion was how to get more house building done, so as to take care of the influx of population caused, it is believed, by the advertising done Salt Lake by the association during the past year. It was decided to issue the following circular letter: "The Salt Lake Real Estate association calls attention to the great influx of people into Salt Lake, and the consequent shortage of houses, flats and stores. The development of the natural resources of this territory is bringing thousands of people here and they must be housed. We invite capital to put up houses, apartment flats and stores, and we offer to furnish, free of charge, tenants for all new buildings of this character."

"This is the time for Salt Lake money men and property owners to come to the rescue and take care of the stranger who proposes to dwell in our midst."

"SALT LAKE REAL ESTATE ASSOCIATION."

It is generally understood that the high cost of labor and material has prevented a great deal of building that would otherwise have been engaged in.

MATHEW RHODES FUNERAL.

Obsequies Conducted at the Masonic Temple Yesterday Afternoon.

Funeral services over the remains of Matthew Rhodes, late detective on the Salt Lake police force, were held yesterday afternoon at the Masonic temple. The obsequies were conducted under the auspices of Wasatch lodge No. 1, A. F. and A. M., and were largely attended by members of the fraternity, fellow officers and many friends.

Rev. P. A. Simpkins, of Phillips Congregational church, delivered an address. The pallbearers were Detective Wheeler, Wilson, Burt and Shannon, and Officers Hilton and Shannon. The remains were interred in Mount Olivet cemetery. Mr. Rhodes succumbed to the ravages of cancer, and died at Indianapolis, where an operation was performed.

"There's a Reason"

In the neighborhood of Bishopgate street, where, like the Baring's Bank of England there is no word, or sign, to indicate what lies within; and so old-fashioned do they seem that a man is given a quill pen to endorse his draft, if he draws on his letter of credit. However, there is a promptness with which this business is done that reminds him that he is doing business with wide-awake people, as at home, in his own country. Generally at banks on the continent the reverse is the case, and you may wait the better part of an hour before a very simple transaction is concluded. At one place in Germany they had me sign my name three times on the back of a draft.

VARIETY OF TRANSPORTATION.

It is a relief, too, in London, to be able to get about so easily, during the day at least, although on a very rainy day there are hardly cabs enough to go around. The fare is low and the speed fair, at least in the forward part of the day. There are no elevated trains, except the regular steam trains, which, however, seem to go nearly everywhere; but there is now a good system of underground electric service. There are practically no street cars, indeed none at all in the main part of the city. Omnibuses, yes, a dozen in sight at once. Some drawn by horses, others great double deckers, gasoline engines driven, about the only noisy thing on the streets.

SILENT NEWSBOYS.

Not even newsboys, crying their papers, are allowed, so we do not hear the loud-voiced vendor calling out "All about the horrible murder," or other sensational news, but instead the man bears a large placard displaying in this type the particular sensation of the hour. This absence of the human voice on the streets is remarkable. Cab drivers, or teamsters, do not seem to be all the time shouting to one another, as in some countries, and as for swearing, I have heard but one person say "Damn"—present company except of course. Indeed it is said that a law against using profane language is enforced. They tell of the American in the smoking room telling a story in which swear words are used, and promptly as the first one came out the usual subscription box was presented to him requiring one shilling for the poor fund. This was repeated for the second offense, when the man said to Betty, the bar maid, "See how you utter that box down here by me for there are several more cuss words in this story."

GOOD PAVEMENTS.

There are in London better paved streets than in any city we ever saw, and what is more wonderful there is no more mud on the streets so far as we can see, although there is plenty of evidence that streets have recently been repaired. The conclusion is that this being the busy London season, when there is most need of good, well paved streets, and when the city is so full of strangers—English, American, French and German to say nothing of the Irish, that the streets put in perfect condition before the crowd came. The city was never so filled up before, and what with parliament in session, the Epson and Ascot races, the horse show, the football season, and the queen's visit of the king and queen of Denmark, there has been a great deal going on.

SOME POTENTATES.

In a recent letter I related that only the little king of Spain, the president of France and one or two rulers of minor importance, were potentates that remained for us to see, since which time the new king and queen of Norway visited France, where we saw them a code of dress, and here we have seen the king and queen, together with the king and queen of Denmark upon several occasions. The most brilliant scene in our experience was at a gala performance at Covent Garden theater, where we fortunately secured two of the best seats in the house, going to the performance in our very best togs and jewelry and with carriage and coachman. The occasion was the first gala performance given by command of the king in three or four years, and parts of three operas were given, having as their subject the story of the best performance of the combined German and Italian opera. Seated about us, and in the double tiers of boxes, were women wearing crowns, (laras and the whole dress of the queen and all levels. Probably not one lady present but was dressed in her best decolette gown; not a man having court costume, orders, etc., but what he wore then. One of the most notable of all persons in plain evening dress, but was almost the most dignified looking man in the lot, for the king is not good looking at all, or of good figure either. Neither is the king of Denmark or his queen.

A GALA PERFORMANCE.

The theater decorations were fine, nearly the whole front of all the boxes and balconies being massed with flowers, natural and artificial. The accommodation for leaving wraps outside was quite in keeping with the occasion, and people took them to their seats, a most awkward arrangement. But getting over our seats afterward was the worst of our course, we had a footman, and this man came back with the carriage as near the entrance as the narrow little street and leading us to it in the rain.

RAIN AND THE DERBY.

It always seems to rain here, especially at the most inconvenient times. By actual record of my own keeping, there has been rain every day but one since we came here, and in three weeks ago, and by the published report, there has been 28 hours of sunshine in the two weeks prior to the Derby. The rain the day the Derby was a great inconvenience to many, still it did not keep many away and the papers stated that 250,000 persons were present. We had seen the Grand Prix in Paris, the Grand Prix in London, and the great Russian race at Moscow, and wanting very much to see this, had engaged and paid for tickets by the hotel coach, 15 pence seat, but they were busy, the coaches started off in a pouring rain we declined to go in that way, as Epson was 27 miles away and it would be eight in the evening before we would get back, so it seemed to be all off so far as we were concerned; but about 11 o'clock we took one of the fast trains, and arrived at the course in good time. The day was a very fine one, but we were then how it did rain! However, taking the first train after the event, we were back in our hotel, the Charlton, without getting at all wet. So our trip was quite successful, and the rain will never forget. The great point, the crowds, the sunshine, the horses, all made a wonderful picture. We accidentally got out of an old London guide book, and found that the grandstand, a most uncomfortable place to sit on, is evidently the same now that it was many years ago.

The Hotel Carlton, in a great place to lunch, dine or have 5 o'clock tea and supper after the theater. Aside from that there is not much to be said, for it is an hotel. The floor service is much the poorer shabby than it was, and they are living on the names of their past greatness. There is no more comparison between the best hotels here and the corresponding class in London hotels, then the next to the headwater that takes your order must have at least two "Bos"—so called men, and of course, your waiter that brings the food must have his

HOTELS ARE POOR.

At such a hotel as the Carlton you can get a good table in the dining room, but you must pay the head-waiter a good sized gold piece first. A small gold piece will secure you a table, but not a very good one, and the larger the piece the better the table, and this is not confined to the Carlton alone either—it is so nearly all the London hotels, then the next to the headwater that takes your order must have at least two "Bos"—so called men, and of course, your waiter that brings the food must have his as Chicago was visited by the party, St. Louis was particularly pleasing to the visitors, but on account of the difficulty in the width of Salt Lake's streets and those of the river city there may be some difficulty in discovering a system giving the same effect here.

ARRESTED IN LOS ANGELES.

Newsboy and 12-Year-Old Girl of Salt Lake Located by Police.

Chief of Police McKenzie this morning received a message from Edward Kern, chief of police at Los Angeles, to the effect that the Los Angeles officer had arrested Harry Anson, who is alleged to have kidnapped Mabel, the 12-year-old daughter of Mrs. Libbia Griffith, of 256 east Second South street some time since. The dispatch also contained the information that Anson and the girl had been living together as man and wife in the California City, and that the officers are holding the girl.

Mrs. Griffith last Saturday received word that the couple were in Los Angeles and she sent instructions to the police there to apprehend them. Mrs. Griffith says that if she cannot prosecute the man there, she will seek to have him returned to this city and proceed against him on the charge of kidnapping her daughter.

BACK FROM TRIP EAST.

Mayor John S. Bransford and Councilmen Return from Inspection.

Mayor John S. Bransford and Councilmen Tuddenham, Mulvey and Holley have returned from their eastern trip for the inspection of municipal lighting systems. Their report to the council will not be made for some time, on account of the complexity of the lighting question. This city, on account of its wide streets, is not adapted to the same system which furnishes ample light in places where the streets are narrower and the intensity of the illumination not so great as would be required here.

The lighting problem is regarded as a hard one in every large city and the members of the council who have become the inspecting party have become convinced that they may give this city the best possible lighting system when the time shall come to take action in the matter.

At the principal cities of the middle west as far east
