

would be as satisfactory to Mr. Morgan as would that of any other Democrat except Judge Gray.

Mr. Towne has a great many personal friends among the western delegates, and they were actually engaged in his behalf, and Mr. Towne himself is on the ground giving the closest attention to the details of his campaign.

There was also an earnest effort in behalf of Gov. Douglas of Massachusetts, on the ground that his nomination would satisfy the labor element more completely than would that of any other man except John Mitchell, who has declined to be a candidate.

KERN IN FAVOR.

Ex-Senator Kern of Indiana was in decided favor among many delegates on the ground that he was not only in complete sympathy with Mr. Bryan, but also because he hails from a doubtful state. For the first time during the convention Gov. Kern's friends were seen early in the hall, and one of them, John Brien Walker, now of this state, but formerly of New York, wired Mr. Bryan as follows:

FOLK'S WARNING.

"Apparently the Democracy is about to perpetrate a vice presidential blunder as egregious as the Republican nomination of Sherman. Nominate a Cleveland Democrat and your associate puts the power as completely away as if in the hands of Sherman. Nominate a weakling and the country has confidence in Folks. He has been thoroughly tried and has proven himself in every way. His nomination would insure complete victory."

The mercury rose to the dignity of 90 degrees yesterday afternoon, but stands abashed before 108 at Yuma. The low area that hovered over the northern states yesterday has moved but a short distance eastward, being followed by a high area from the south coast. High barometric pressure prevails this morning over the Pacific coast states, and from the Mississippi river eastward to the Atlantic coast. An area of low pressure is central over northern Minnesota, where local thunderstorms have occurred during the past 24 hours. Precipitation also occurred over portions of southern Utah and the south Atlantic states.

High temperatures are general over the central valleys and Rocky Mountain region this morning, and are moderate elsewhere.

Accompanying the advancing high pressure are from the north Pacific coast, fair weather, with no decided change in temperature, may be expected in this vicinity tonight and Saturday.

PARTIES MAY MAKE UP

Suit in Court May Bring Parted French Couple Together Again—Tears in Evidence.

The separate maintenance case of Mrs. Mary W. French against her husband, Frank D. French, is still being heard before Judge Morse. The case has occupied the greater part of two days, and has been one of considerable heart interest between the parties. Mrs. French while on the witness stand burst into tears several times during the severe cross examination by the attorney for her husband, and at times the lacrimal flow was excessive. Mrs. French is a decidedly handsome woman, and claims that her husband refused to provide her a home in Salt Lake after leaving Denver in February, 1906, for Salt Lake.

The couple were married in Denver, Sept. 2, 1891, and all seemed to go smoothly until French decided to come to Salt Lake to enter business. Then their troubles began. Mr. French in his complaint alleged that Mrs. French was extravagant and traveled about the country on pleasure trips and running up bills against him, and that when he asked her to come to Salt Lake to live she refused, saying she did not want to come out to Utah and live among "those Mormon farmers." Mrs. French on the witness stand denied having made this statement.

Mrs. French claims that her husband is worth $15,000, and earns $500 per month, that he left her and failed to provide her a home. She intimated that she would be willing to come here now and live with him, and it is probable that Mr. French will submit a proposition to "make up" before the hearing is over.

SEARCHING FOR OLD MAN

Residents from North End of Utah County Out Looking for Old Character.

(Special to the "News")

Provo, July 10.—Today a party from the north end of Utah county is out searching the hills adjacent to Cedar valley in quest of an old man, known to the community as "Cap." The man lived in a cabin at the Jordan Narrows, near the ranch of Herbert Brothers. Last Tuesday he drove to Lehi, and while there purchased two quarts of whiskey and a bottle of alcohol, afterwards driving towards Cedar valley.

Next day a man answering the description of "Cap" was seen at Bowen's shaft, south of Fairfield. This person traded an old harness for a water bucket, and disappeared. Last night the man driven by "Cap" returned to the cabin, followed by her colt and "Cap's" dog. The non-appearance of the old man was noted and a posse was organized to find him.

O. P. Children, charged with a statutory offense, had a hearing before closed doors today, and was held to the district court in bonds $500. He was unable to furnish bail and is in the county jail. The woman in the case is Mrs. Rebecca Pratt.

SUIT ON FOUR NOTES.

Utah Commercial & Savings Bank Seeks to Recover $6,539.

The Utah Commercial and Savings bank today filed suit in the third district court against Hyrum Smith and Susan Smith his wife, of La Barge, Wyo., and Mary Ann Smith and Salt Lake county, to recover the sum of $6,539 alleged to be due on four promissory notes executed by Smith during the year 1902. The notes are secured by real estate situated in Salt Lake City, in which defendant Mary Ann Smith and Salt Lake county claim an interest, and these are made party defendants in order to clear title to the premises in question. Judgment is also asked for $400 attorney's fees in the action.

HARLEY WILL GET SOBER.

Ed Harley, an old offender, was again before Judge Diehl for drunkenness. When landed at the city jail it required the combined efforts of Patrolmen Carlson and Pierce to put Harley in the drunk house. He was given 10 days to sober up.

ARMSTRONG DISMISSED.

"A rag-chewing match"—to quote from the Spencer like phrases of William Newton, police court attorney, and Al Hayden, colored—was all there was to the altercation between Roy Armstrong, a negro of lemon yellow tint, and W. F. Rosenberg and R. J. Murphy on July 4. The two white men were passing the negroes in east Second South street, and after passing the negroes, turned on the white men with a choice assortment of bar-room epithets. Armstrong was brought to court on the charge of using abusive language. The testimony was so conflicting that Judge Diehl was unable to say who was to blame for the affair. He found Armstrong guilty, but dismissed him.

SCULPTOR DALLIN ON UTAH ARTISTS

Says Many of Them Possess Exceptional Talent and Deserve More Recognition.

COMMERCIAL CLUB EXHIBIT

Will Be Held This Week of Photographs from Famous Productions Of Former Springville Boy.

Browned with the sunshine that pours over the Wasatch mountains into his boyhood home at Springville, Cyrus E. Dallin is in Salt Lake today to spend a week of his summer vacation.

Mr. Dallin has been on Hobbie creek for a week among the scenes where he first felt the art impulses which have been the guiding motive in his career. After a week in Salt Lake, and another short visit to his Springville home, he will leave for Europe to spend the coming year in finishing the Syracuse Soldier's monument, awarded to him last winter.

EXHIBIT WORK.

An exhibit of photographs of some of Mr. Dallin's principal work will be held this week at the Commercial club. Among the pictures are the panels for the Syracuse monument, a view of the monument in perspective, photographs of the series of Indians, one of which, "The Signal of Peace," is represented in a plaster cast in the city and county building, pictures of the Paul Revere figure, and a number of other well known productions.

The photographs were arranged today in the main room of the Commercial club, and were much admired by club members this morning. Most of Mr. Dallin's work was done in his studio at his Arlington Heights home, near Boston.

Besides working at his own studio, Mr. Dallin has for several years taught at Massachusetts Normal Art school in Boston, and he has obtained a leave of absence from this institution for a year to work in Europe.

"I felt like a boy again," said Mr. Dallin this morning, "to get down on Hobbie creek, and take on another Utah tan. It's mighty refreshing after a winter in close studio confinement—refreshing to one's soul as well as to his body."

UTAH'S ART WORKERS.

Mr. Dallin has one subject on which he is very serious. It is that of giving help and assistance to the talented young people in Utah now, who in a few years, through continuing present bitter struggles, will be beyond the need of local help.

"Praise is mighty empty," he said, "when it is not discriminating. And to raise a shout for anyone just because someone else has raised a shout for him, is not discriminating treatment. It is as liable to elevate the wrong man as the right man, and to expect talent always to come with the ostentation of an European endorsement, is to overlook the greatest chances to help and to encourage those who come with the sincerity of truth."

"It isn't hard to recognize simple, sincere truth, and yet the very people most liable to do extravagant things in helping him who comes with a flourish of trumpets, are the most liable to lack the capacity to understand the simple and sincere, and to extend the proper help to the man whose devotion is to his art, and not what he gets out of it. At that period in his career that determines whether he shall be a hopeless delirious or achieve success."

"You people here cannot afford to let your artists go weak and trembling down the street for lack of even nourishment enough to sustain them, and then turn to laud them to the skies after the bitter, bitter fight has been won, and the people elsewhere have given them the seal of approval, which is always the signal for the unthinking laquer to noise his praise."

"I have just seen Mahomet M. Young's figure of the Prophet Joseph. It is admirably executed, and he is one of those men that Utah can well afford to help, and help now while it will count a great deal more than in a few years from now when he will be beyond the need of it. Lee Greene Richards has work in his studio that should command him the respect and attention of the most discriminating. His work is exceptional, and I should hate to see him depart from Utah feeling only that it was a fine place in which to starve to death. I met a young architect here, too, A. O. Trengar, whose work has all the elements of sincerity and remarkable ability. That there should be a question of accepting his work and providing an avenue for expression here, where so much that is merely conventional and routine is being given its opportunity, it is hardly possible to believe."

Mr. Dallin in speaking thus of the men who are now in the art field, was careful to explain that he had not the least feeling in his heart of anything but love for his Utah home, and remembered gratefully the help extended him in the early period of his work in art.

CONCERNING HAFEN.

John Hafen, Mr. Dallin knows well, and unhesitatingly declares that he is doing better work than any American painter in mountains and mountain glows. Mr. Hafen, he says, is just beginning to get that recognition which he struggled here against every kind of adversity, and which was refused him for years, so far as his being able to secure from his work the right to proceed further with its creation.

It was Mr. Hafen two weeks ago in Chicago, he said. "His exhibit there in the Marshall Field building was attracting great attention. I was informed that it was considered the most successful individual exhibit ever held there. After closing the Chicago exhibit Mr. Hafen will go east and in the fall, will be in Boston. After that I think the problem of continuing at work will not be so hard as it has in the past."

NEXT YEAR'S PROGRAM.

When asked concerning the line of his recent activity, Mr. Dallin said that the Syracuse monument and the completion of his Indian series had taken up most of his time. He expects, he said, to return to America in the autumn of 1909 with his monument figures completed, although his contracts give him until May, 1910, to finish them. He will leave Utah in about three weeks and go directly to Europe.
