Base Statesman: Ex-Governor Arthur L. Thomas of Utah is in the city. He says the Republican campaign in Congress has a good chance of election, though there is a serious drawback for Republicans in a defect in the election law. By an oversight of the framers of the law, there is no provision for registration for a special election. There was a large element among the Republicans that did not ball vote in the last election and these cannot now be registered.

THREE JUDGES SPEAKERS.

Powers, Henderson and King Address an Enthusiastic Audience—Hon. J. T. Caine was Chairman.

The Democrats opened the congressional campaign in this city before a large audience in the Salt Lake Theater last night. The meeting was called to order by Hon. B. T. Lloyd, chairman of the Democratic county committee, who introduced ex-Congressman John T. Caine as chairman of the evening. Chairman Caine made a few felicitous remarks, after which he presented Judge O. W. Powers as the first speaker. Judge Powers was received with applause and after it had subsided he proceeded to say:
"The Democratic party stands on principle, as it has always stood. An effort has been made to place it in a false position in this campaign. An attempt has been made to show that the campaign is upon local issues alone. But Utah has no contest with the United States. Utah is a part of the Union. The real issues are national, just as they will be next fall. Let all those who think they can draw us out of the great issues of next fall know that we cannot be misled and will not be drawn from the issues now."
But where stands the Republican party upon the great questions of the day? Have you read that wonderful platform, that wonderful essay which issues from the pen of the man who must be suffering with the blind staggers? Where does it stand upon the great issues? You find in it nothing but a full and complete endorsement of the administration of William McKinley and an endorsement of the gold standard.
On these great questions the Democratic party is united. First of all is the Hay-Pauncefote treaty. Congress is considering the Nicaragua canal. This treaty was sprung. It surrenders our right of fortifying the canal. We have surrendered on questions of finance to England, and now we are to give up our right to fortify this great canal. According to this document, we are not to possess the canal in time of war and can build about it no forts to hold it.
"But that is not all. There is the tariff with Puerto Rico. Not long ago President McKinley said that the tariff between Puerto Rico and the United States should be abolished; that there should be free trade between the two. And I think that is a very good doctrine. We have no right to place that country and make peace of those people.
"But there came a change. The President reconsidered; he advocated a small duty on imports from Puerto Rico. Why this change? Because the great sugar trust and the tobacco trust to which the Republican party is subservient demanded it. But consider this: Either Puerto Rico is within the Union or it is without. If Puerto Rico is within the Union there must be no tariff wall fence shutting out the products of that country. No one says that Puerto Rico is not a part of the Union and not subject to its control. Then say the Constitution is extended over it, and if so, we cannot put up a tariff wall. There can be no tariff wall between parts of the Union."
Judge Powers said the administration of President McKinley is the apotheosis of imperialism. Fortune is Democracy that these questions have arisen. In view of such, there is any question that there are serious questions. The administration has surrendered to the banks in the currency bill which has been introduced in Congress. It gives to the banks power to contract the currency at will, to make people richer or poorer at their pleasure. There are graver questions for our consideration.
"When a nation has reached the point where its chief executive may change from upon such a matter as free trade or tariff between Puerto Rico and the United States, it is time to come back to first principles of government such as prevailed when the Democratic party was founded two years ago by Thomas Jefferson. They argued for the Constitution of the United States does not extend over the islands we have taken. They say Congress alone can have power over them. That is their doctrine. But we have been taught for the years that the Constitution follows the flag, and where one goes the other must go, too. They would change all that.
"There are questions which confront us in this campaign. They are matters of vast and immediate consequence. These are no local issues.
"And we have named for our candidate a man who will discuss these questions in Congress as well as the man from any State. The doors of Congress will swing in when he advances. His return will be looked forward to with favor by members he knew before. When people stop and consider the growing power of trusts they must see that it will be a mistake to let Congress one more vote in their favor. You must see that we are drifting away from the principles on which the government is founded, and we must stop; we must return."
When Judge Powers had finished speaking, Chairman Caine introduced Judge Henderson, whom he designated as one of the fathers of the Democratic party in Utah. The speaker said that to Utah, the youngest State in the Union, had come the distinction of opening the presidential campaign for 1900. He said the Democratic party found the Republicans divided upon almost every national question. Each laying the blame upon the other for the mistakes that had been made. Many of those who favored and preached free silver in Utah in 1896 told the people of the East that the gold standard was the proper thing. Now that party stood for the single standard every time. Continuing, Judge Henderson said: Our congressmen will have no question of party issues on which to vote. He will consider only national questions. His vote will bind Massachusetts; it will bind the States south of Mason and Dixon's line. There are none but national question before Congress.
"Why are the Republicans in this campaign so silent on these questions? Why does not their organ say something about the tariff of Puerto Rico? Why would they tell you that their national convention had not met and that it had not told them what to say. They would tell you that they did not know what to believe upon this national convention has instructed them.
"They were forced into the war with Spain by public sentiment, and they promised that in all their actions the principles of the Declaration of Independence and of the Constitution would Held's band made music for the Democrats last night.

The trustees of the Utah Republican club will hold a meeting at their rooms at 5 o'clock this afternoon.
Hon. James T. Hammond and George A. Smith had a big audience at Logan last night.
Parley P. Christensen, secretary of the Republican State committee, is now comfortably installed in his office in the Daft building.
Chairman Eichner and the Republican county committee will shortly arrange for campaign committees in each voting precinct in this city.
A. J. Weber of Ogden and ex-County Commissioner Hall of Salt Lake addressed a Democratic rally at South Cottonwood last night.
The Bryan meeting which will be held in this city on Saturday evening, the 24th inst., will take place in the Exposition building.
Col. George B. Squires and S. A. Kenner, the erstwhile Democrat, will speak to the Republicans of Grantsville tomorrow night. They will hold forth at Tooele.
The Women's Republican club is arranging for a reception in honor of Mr. Hammond, to take place at the Kenyon on March 19th. A big rally will take place about a week later.
Gov. Thomas of Colorado will talk for the Democracy at Ogden on Saturday. The governor is a forcible speaker and will doubtless be appreciated by those of a similar political faith.
The Republican State committee and the Utah Republican club now occupy the entire second floor in the Daft building. The club will commence lunch service for its members tomorrow noon.
A SQUAW'S HARD WORK.
Takes Her Three Months to Make a Navajo Blanket.
Mr. Miles A. Romney, manager of the Z. C. M. I. carpet department, has just returned from a Navajo blanket purchasing expedition to Santa Fe and Durango. "These blankets," said Mr. Romney, "are a big source of revenue to the Indian agents at those places. As to the squaws who do the spinning and weaving it is marvelous how little they get out of it. The work they put on an average size blanket is enormous. Take for instance a blanket eight feet long and five feet wide, it will require three months of work, ten hours a day, to complete. Then what does she get for it? If she is fortunate she will get her about $5. This is minus the cost of the wool, which is about sixteen or seventeen cents a pound.
"The Navajo sheep are very small—not more than half as large as ours, and of poor wool and inferior. Scab gets in among them occasionally, but the disease is kept down pretty well by dipping twice a year. These blanket workers are wonderfully deft and patient, and withal good designers.
"As colorists they are also very skillful. They have two kinds of blankets. One is the genuine Navajo, which is made from the native wools as raised about the foot of the San Juan. The other is the Germantown blanket, made in every varying shade and design from finer wools spun in the looms of Pennsylvania and shipped to the Indians for their use. These are colored in the East, while the squaws do the weaving. They also attend to their flocks and herds, while the buck Indians devote themselves to other avocations, such as hunting and fishing.
"The Navajos are now," continued Mr. Romney, "turning their attention to agriculture, and I found many of them in their fields ploughing just as the white men do."

The little "want" advertisement which has become so popular is a silent buyer, a silent seller and a silent purveyor of good. It possesses a double virtue of being cheap and profitable. It brings labor to the unemployed and gives those who desire to employ. It makes homes for men and women. It transfers property and in a general way is responsible for 25 percent of the business transacted in the commercial world. It is the empty house and brings prosperity to the land.
