One of the most elaborate Halloween parties of the season was that given last night by half dozen young girls at the home of Dr. and Mrs. E. S. Wright, the hostess being Misses Geneva Wright, Georgia Williams, Mildred Miles, Amy Farnsworth, Eva Lund and Stella Shell. The guests entered through the basement, making ghostly echoes from tin cans and bones rattling along their way both underfoot and overhead, while dummy ghosts were stationed at every turn. A winding way led up stairs to the kitchen, then out doors around the house to the bedroom window which was entered by means of a ladder. Here the guests found themselves in an ancestral hall crowded with skulls and skeletons, while all about the walls were placards with blood curdling devices, and little devils with pitchforks waiting at every corner. There was a fortune teller, and a witch's den; a
