The First War Nurse.

A short time ago Miss Florence Nightingale, most famous of English nurses, died at the age of 103. On her birthday, and a memorial address commemorating her was presented in her honor in London and America. Her services to the world, especially material for the interest and inspiration of the young, are well known. Her present war work again.

Miss Nightingale has served well 80 years, though she started as a nurse when she was only 16. At the time the heroine of the Crimean War was only 35. She has lived 47 days, in a shadow house in her London home. It is a beautiful example,

A Rich Gift to France.
 Mrs. Monaghan, the wife of a prominent French patriot, who had a heart of purest gold, had inherited from France a collection of her husband's paintings, sketches, etc. Many of the pictures were by the hand of the artist himself. They were of such value that they were sold for the benefit of the French people. Mrs. Monaghan is a lady of high social position.
