UNCLE SAM'S GRAB BAG OPENED

Little Helen Hamilton, Blindfolded, Makes First Drawing in the Coeur d'Alene Land Lottery.

EVERYTHING WAS REGULAR.

Little Miss, Pretty Miss, Handed the Envelope to One of the Superintendent's Assistants.

Coeur D'Alene, Idaho, Aug. 9.—Swarming arbund a great net covered cage, hundreds of eager men and women waited this morning for pretty little Helen Hamilton's eyes to be blindfolded that she might plunge her hands into a great heap of 105,000 yellow envelopes and draw out the name of the lucky man who had won the right to the first choice of all the 1,500 homesteads and timber claims on the Coeur D'Alene Indian reservation.

At Spokane, other anxious and excited crowds surged around bulletin boards or snapped up the extras which told the names of the winners.

Inside the big transparent cage at Coeur D'Alene where Supt. James W. Whitten was absolutely ruler, can after can filled with applicants of homeseekers had been carried, the seals broken, and the contents dumped on the white canvas that covered the floor. More than half a ton of envelopes all just alike were piled up in a big golden mound. Not one chance for a hint of fraud or favoritism was to be tolerated. A marked envelope in that mass would have had less chance than the ancient needle in a haystack; but to shut out the least possibility of collusion the pile of letters was ordered stirred and mixed to even more hopeless chaos than before.

THE DRAWING.

The simplest methods had been chosen for the great drawing which starts the history of a new region. Little Helen Hamilton, 12 years old, the dainty niece of Cour d'Alene's mayor, was carefully blindfolded and placed in front of the mass of letters. Picking up an envelope at random, she handed it to one of the superintendent's assistants. He opened and scanned the application quickly to see if it conformed to the rules. If a name had been written on the envelope, or a notary's signature had been omitted from the affidavit, if the seal had been forgotten, if any other radical fault appeared, the application was rejected and cast aside. If no serious error was discovered, the paper was handed to Supt. Witten, who promptly announced the name of the lucky applicant. Then it went to the recorder, and to the reporters of the newspapers to be announced to the nation.

Fifteen hundred names are to be drawn today, 400 more tomorrow. After the first few envelopes have been chosen, two other little girls are to assist in the drawing—Harriet Post, the daughter of a prominent Spokane attorney and Christine Donlan of Missoula. Wednesday will be a day of checking up the work. On Thursday the scene witnessed today will be repeated, with little Miss Donlan taking the place of Miss Hamilton and drawing the first of the winners among the 87,000 applicants for land in Montana's great Flathead reserve. Three days are allowed for this drawing. Next Monday morning Miss Harriet Post will begin selecting the few lucky winners for the Spokane reservation, where 500 names will be drawn, though it is doubtful and more than 40 good quarter sections are left for the white settlers.

BLANKS IN ABUNDANCE.

Though not one in 30 of those who have applied for Coeur D'Alene lands will even draw a number, and not one in 60 can secure a homestead, some rich prizes are to be distributed among those names first to appear. The land thrown open stretches around the southern half of beautiful Lake Coeur D'Alene, and extends south for 20 miles over the Moose Creek mountain range. In the northern part are great tracts of magnificent evergreen timber where single quarter sections are valued at $15,000 to $20,000, as they stand. In the east part of the reserve stretching along the picturesque St. Joseph river are famous meadows, yielding great crops of hay. Along the lake shore are bays and inlets which will soon be occupied by the summer homes of wealthy citizens of Spokane. Toward the south where most of the Coeur D'Alene Indians have chosen to hold their homes and build their schools, wheat lands, capable of producing 30 to 40 bushels per acre. The Milwaukee railway's main line cuts right across this reserve. Harriman proposes to build a branch of his Oregon railroad and navigation road from Lockwood east to the lake. Still another railway is projected from Coeur D'Alene city to the south, so there are plenty of townsites to be platted, though at present the homesteader can only guess where they may be.

It is predicted that the winner of No. 1 today will choose a timber claim either at Rockford bay or Mica bay, where transportation is easy and where the soil will be good after the trees are cleared away. Most of the highest numbers will probably call for timber claims, although the locators will not be permitted to commute but must make their home on the land for the next five years.

JUDGE BOWMAN'S MONDAY MATINEE

Bloodless Race-War Ventilated —No Casualties, No Penalties.

STANDING ROOM COMES HIGH.

Joe Natress Will Think So for Thirty Days—How Joe Peterson Fooled The Detective.

The irrepressible Babe Rivers, of dusky hue, sat in the court room this morning in an anticipated dual role—that of complaining witness and defendant. When W. Alberty, a negro, who told the court that he "was 51 years old and this was the first time he had ever been arrested," admitted that he had been drunk Sunday night and couldn't tell what he had done, after a whispered conversation between the court and Prosecutor Rogers, "Babe" lost her chance of being put on the stand as a complainant, for the defendant was discharged. Alberty was charged with assault, the specification being that having the physical power to do bodily injury and harm to the complainant, he had pointed a revolver at her. Whatever the circumstances were, Alberty was given the benefit of the doubt and although he pleaded not guilty, he was discharged without being tried.

As defendant Babe Rivers was on the docket on a charge of petit larceny, but her case was not called. A Jap is the complainant, who turned the tables on the negress and accused her of having stolen $5 from him.

Joe Natress had a high priced seat at the Orpheum last night. As it cost him $30 it will take just 30 days on the rock pile to pay for the seat, or more correctly his standing room. Natress conceived the idea that as a citizen he had a right to stand on the sidewalk in front of the open doorway of the Orpheum. When ordered to move on Natress declared his inalienable rights as a citizen and used words that shocked Patrolman Brown. Then Natress became so thoroughly indignant that it required three officers to cool him down. After the next 30 days the chances are that he will pay 50 cents when he wants to see the Orpheum show.

W. H. White has promised the court so often that "this will be my last time," that the court was left in a quandary as to what to do with him this morning. White has been a faithful worker for the city, his sprees coming at a time that always fitted into the cleaning and re-painting of headquarters, and he has always done good work. This week, however, there is no cleaning or painting to be done, and besides, the G. A. R. parade will be held Wednesday. In order to give him a chance to see the parade he was let go on this occasion, but he is expected to return by Thursday.

Something About a Beautiful City.

Salt Lake City is known around the world. Historically, it is a place of great interest, not only because it has witnessed the vigorous growth of one of the most peculiar religions known, from a mere handful of adherents 60 years ago, to more than half a million believers; but because it was nursed into life in the wilderness of the far west, a thousand miles beyond the then farthest outpost of civilization. It was intended by its founders to be a community and not a city, and was laid out with broad streets, and in blocks large enough for farms. But what was proposed was not realized—irresistibly a city grew upon the community site—a city as beautiful and prosperous as any in our land. Its situation, not far distant from the shores of Great Salt lake, in an elbow of the mountains, with great peaks towering over it on the north and east, and a valley, rioting in foliage and plenty, stretching away for many miles to the south and west, is the most perfect a city ever had.

As a business place there is nothing to compare with it in any direction for 600 miles. It is the beating business heart of an empire; a great railroad center, with that greatness but half achieved; the largest smelting center by far in the world, and the middle of a productive and rapidly developing area that takes in the best part of the mining lands of the United States.

Whatever other cities have, Salt Lake has in some degree, and Salt Lake has many things possessed by no other place in the world.

The Great Salt lake, with its marvelous bathing, is one of these, and the famous temple of the Mormons—40 years in building—is another. This structure and the queer round-roofed Tabernacle by its side, are far famed attractions. Then there are the broad, book-lined streets with their trimmings of trees, the palatial homes of Utah's many millionaires, and the quaint old "dobies" and other styles of architecture that still remain to remind us of the times when the wastes of desert were still to be redeemed, and when to live in Salt Lake was to toil and suffer and almost starve. These are among the sights that make Salt Lake City the most unique and interesting place to visit in all the west. There are many millions being spent in and around Salt Lake at this writing, and the city, ready with a population of 110,000, is expanding at the rate of 10,000 per annum.

The Great Salt Lake The Marvel of The World.

Utah has attractions that are all her own, of which the Great Salt Lake leads the procession. The lake is one of nature's mysteries. It stretches over 2,500 square miles of Utah's area. There is salt enough in it for all the uses of mankind, for all the centuries to come, and the bath in it is something that you cannot get anywhere else in the world, except in the Holy Land, and something to be remembered long, long after you have forgotten every other bath you have even taken. You cannot sink in Great Salt Lake. For those in search of health and novelty there is nothing else like it anywhere. The benficial and pleasurable effect of this bath, of floating on the buoyant waters of this miniature ocean like the floatsam of the great seas, will enrich the inner life of all who undergo it. The time will come when it will be the Mecca of the pleasure and the health-seeker. Already the bathing and other pleasure facilities at Saltair are greater than elsewhere in the world, and after a while people will live upon the shores of the Great Salt lake during the summer season as they live along the shores of the Pacific near Los Angeles. The unfolding of this lake as a place to live and for enjoyment will be one of the great factors in the growth of Salt Lake.

But there are other attractions. In a two hours' ride on an August day you can leave the snows that crown the mountains looking down upon Salt Lake from the east, and passing through the temperatures of autumn and spring, pluck the summer flowers that grow on the banks of the Jordan.

There are mountain resorts all around the city—little lakes that have been caught in the arms of the hills, streams that are teeming with trout close to where good hunting is found. And there are hot springs within the city limits whose thermal and medicinal qualities are a cure-all for many common diseases.
