THE FESTIVAL.

The first performance will commence this evening, with "Rhein-gold;" Monday, "Walkeure;" Tues-day, "Seigfried;" Wednesday, "Got-terdammerung"—together compos-ing the Trilogy, "Rheingold" being the prologue.

The second performance will take place from August 20 to 23, and the third and last from August 27 to August 30, commencing each evening at 5 o'clock. One thousand seats are reserved for patrons and three hundred for casual visitors. Each ticket for admission to the three series will cost 300 thalers, a little more than $200. Tickets for a single performance of the trilogy, occupying four evenings, will be 100 thalers, or $75, and no more tickets will be sold than the seats will accommodate.

THE TRILOGY.

Although great interest is felt as to the stery of this famous work, it is almost impossible, from the immense number of characters, the mythological plot, and the curious mixture of mortals and immortals, to give anything like an adequate idea of this portion of the work; but the following embodies the most prominent of the characters and their action, and gives some idea of the mystic, legendary incidents which the composer has taken for the basis of the operas. The trilogy is preceded by a prologue, which forms an introductory opera, "Rheingold." This prologue opera will form the first evening's
