In Women's World.

Thanksgiving is of little value if our expressions of gratitude have no effect upon our own conduct. Appreciation of blessings is shown by acts rather than by words. If we regard citizenship as a priceless inheritance, we should resolve to transmit it, not only unimpaired but improved, to the next generation; if our educational system has been a boon to us, it should be extended and amplified for the benefit of posterity; if the resources of our country have a value beyond computation, it behooves us to see to it that these resources are not squandered, and that the bounties which the Creator intended for all shall not be monopolized by the cunning, the craft, and the avarice of a few; if our government gives to life, liberty, and prosperity greater protection than any other government grants, we can not excuse ourselves if we fail to preserve it, in all its purity, for our children and our children's children. If in our religion we find a consolation, a life-plan, and a moral uplift, we can not but earnestly desire and embody the desire in deeds—that these shall be shared by those about us and by those also who, though separated from us by seas, are bound to us by that primal tie that links each human being to every other.

Cut a slit in the side of each pepper that extract the seeds, touching the inside as little as possible. The pungency lies chiefly in the seeds. Lay the emptied peppers in boiling water for 10 minutes. Prop the slits open with a bit of wood to let the water reach the inside. At the end of the 10 minutes drain the peppers and cover with ice-cold water, leaving them in it until they are perfectly cold. Wipe and stuff with a force-meat of any kind of meat that you have on hand, preferably poultry, veal or lamb. Add to the meat a raw tomato skinned and chopped, and one-third as much fine crumbs as you have meat. Season with salt, melted butter and a very little sugar to soften the acid of the tomato. Wet well with gravy. Tie the filled peppers into shape with soft thread and set upright in the covered roaster; pour a cupful of gravy about them, and bake, covered for 20 minutes, then five more, uncovered. Serve upon a heated platter, pouring the thickened gravy over and about them.

You may, if you like, substitute fish, picked free from bones and skin, for the meat.

Or, mushrooms, skinned, parboiled and cut small—not chopped.

Or, and perhaps best of all, sweetbreads, blanched, then stewed for 10 minutes in the gravy that is to be poured about the peppers. This last named dish is exceedingly dainty.

SON'S CHOICE MADE FATHER A SUICIDE.

The all absorbing topic in New Orlean's wealthy set, is the suicide of Gustave Lehmann, Jr., the millionaire wholesale dry goods merchants partisan, related and otherwise, of the elder Lehmann, attribute his self-murder to the alliance of his son, Joseph, with Helen Florence Hahn, one time a stenographer in New York and later a member of one of the Shubert's musical productions.

Mrs. Lehmann, Jr., has never been recognized by her husband's family, a leader in German society here, which it is declared, finally succeeded in persuading young Lehmann to desert her. Joseph Lehmann went abroad in June last at the instance of his father, it is asserted, and recently the wife has been pressing the father, through counsel, to restore her husband to her.

Grief at his son's action in making a marriage so distasteful to the family and worry over the threat of legal proceedings are believed to have unsettled Gustave Lehmann's mind. He disappeared and was absent for more than a week during which time Mrs. Joseph Lehmann filed a $100,000 damage suit, after having exhausted every effort to effect a settlement. It is said the young wife had refused a compromise of $75,000, declaring she loved her husband.

Mrs. Lehmann, Jr., desires to retain her husband's affections. "I love my husband," said she, "just as much as the day we were married, and should he return tomorrow I would forgive him everything and receive him with open arms."

"The steps that you now take, the ability of the government to back them up and the fact that not a particle of risk is involved therein, give the fullest guarantees of the sound condition of our treasury. All that our people need to do now is to go ahead with their normal business in a normal fashion and the whole difficulty disappears.—Extract from President Roosevelt's letter, Nov. 17.

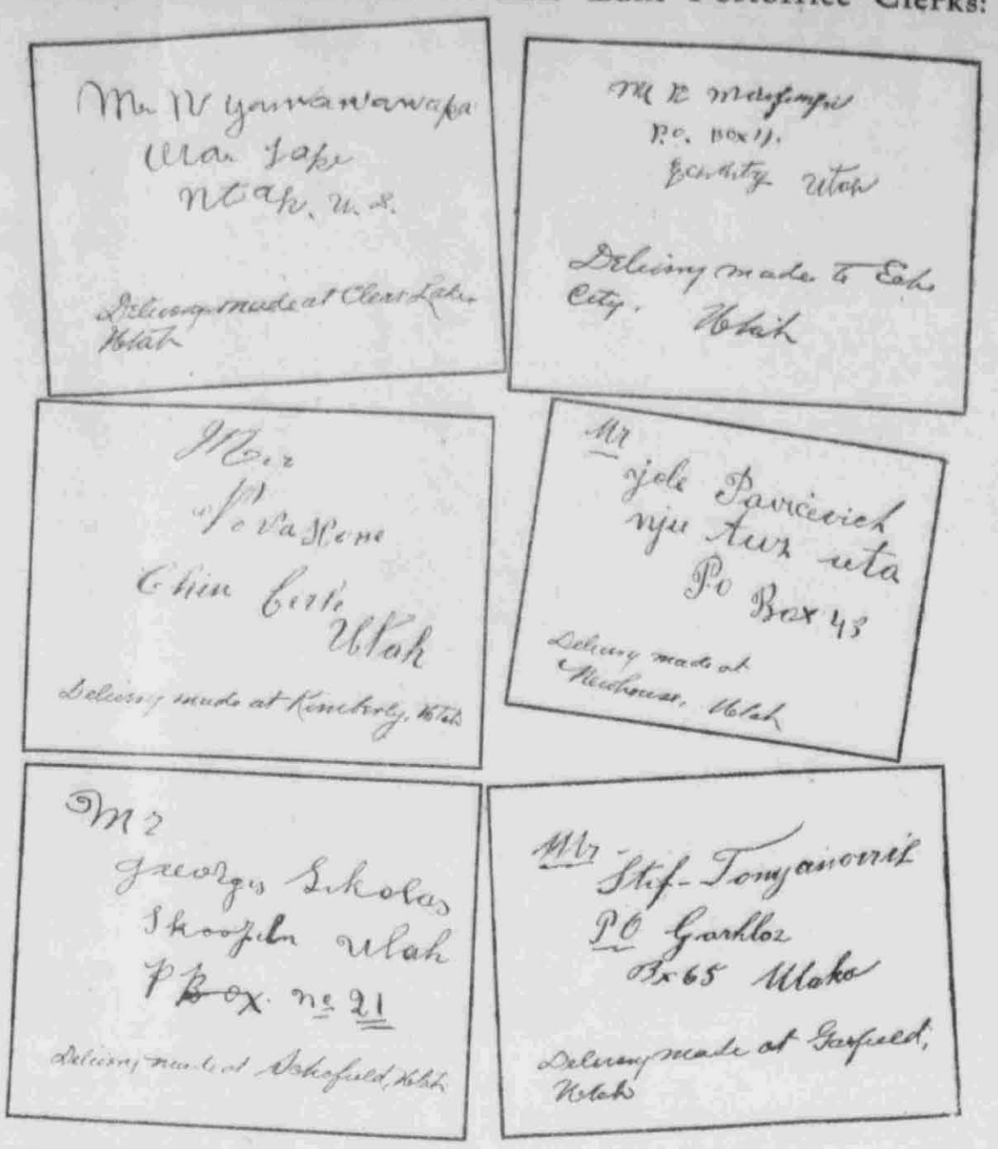
Trials and Tribulations of Salt Lake Postoffice Clerks:



AFTER looking over the facsimiles of envelope directions printed in connection with this article, the wonder is that postal clerks are not all either gray-headed or baldheaded; and if it were found at any time necessary to establish a special department for demented postoffice clerks in the insane asylum, it might be said the expected has happened. These reproductions are not by any manner of means the only ones that have made the clerks in the Salt Lake postoffice harrow their fingers through their hair and wish for death. Postmaster Thomas produced a great bunch from the inner recesses of his desk two days ago, as samples of the daily problems weary clerks have to deal with, problems that would discount the "Devil's Wheelbarrow" in Euclid, and make the "Pons Asinorum" resemble a baby's rattle in simplicity of construction. "Give me Sanskrit, give me Arabic, or even the Basque vernacular to translate, rather than the job of deciphering some of the letters that come into this office," said one of the clerks yesterday, to a "News" reporter, as he fetched a sigh that suggested life had lost all its charms for him, and he fain would fly away and be at rest.

What makes the situation so extreme unromantic is the presence in this city and county of so many ignorant peasant laborers from the nations of southern Europe, the Greek, Czech, Sicilian, Syrian, Austrian, Hungarian, to which may be added the Hindoo, Korean, Chinaman and the Jap. Some direct their letters in their native tongues, some try to write in English and use every kind of letters but the Roman, often making such a hodgepodge that it is enough to petrify the brains of any American to decipher them. It takes time, ingenuity, patience in something more than wholesale lots, fertility in resources, linguistic attainment, perspicacity, shrewdness, acuteness of perception, a supernaturally even temper, imperturbability, a quiet temperament, a sanguine, hopeful disposition, dogged perseverance, determination, immoveable purpose, calmness, unusual powers of reflection, a discernment that no misty surroundings can baffle, and a whole lot of other qualities and characteristics that stand by one in hours of trial.

It will be noted from the translations accompanying each direction that the puzzle was successfully unraveled and the letter dispatched to the proper destination. Sometimes letters show up that would drive a wooden Indian to drink, and then there is a consultation of the doctors of letters at the postoffice, the epistolary patient is diagnosed, and sundry and various remedies applied. Sometimes the treatment works to a charm, sometimes it don't, and an extended hospital treatment is necessary. But somehow, or other, it is not often that a letter has to be sent to the department cemetery at Washington, as the local wits, wisemen and wizards generally manage to straighten things out.

The general public ought to have unlimited patience with postoffice clerks, for they are the most sorely tried mortals on the face of the earth. They are expected to know every person in town, whether resident for years or only arrived the previous evening, know not only who they are, but their ancestors for several generations back either in this country, or Independencia Turkestan or the Guiana dependencies of South America. The first thing expected of clerks on entering the postoffice is apparently that they memorize the entire city directory. These changes that constantly occur are to be carried also in mind, as the likening of Mississippi river steamboats memorize the constantly occurring changes in the great stream, and are able to locate every snag, every eddy, every current, every location where the banks have been eaten away, for 1,500 miles. If a newly arrived citizen changes his address four times in 24 hours, and his mail is delayed perhaps two hours because he has failed to notify the postoffice, he arises in his indignation and wrath and makes a spectacular display of himself, and perhaps writes a strong letter to Washington. If through some inadvertence any mail destined to Salt Lake from Chicago is carried by at Ogden to Reno or San Francisco before the mistake is discovered, the Salt Lake postoffice is down for a red hot scoring from people whose common sense ought to teach them that the Salt Lake office is not responsible for mistakes that happen up on the main line of the Union Pacific.

The natural inference is that the cranial structure of postoffice clerks must be of a sublimated superlative illuminated style of architecture; they must be an unusual order of being with eyes with which to interpret and translate all the hieroglyphics on the addresses, missaddresses and no addresses at all that come into the office, where immediate and intelligent handling is "confidently" expected. It is a fact that every day, from one to two letters are received improperly addressed, with no addresses at all, or no postage. So it will be readily seen that to do the work of a postoffice clerk is really "no small chore." Yet, with all this mass of epistolary lodgment spread out before him for assimilation, the postoffice clerk may be likened to "Patience on a monument, smiling at grief." And comparing the work accomplished with the compensation of the position, one is tempted to exclaim with the Latin poet Horace, that "Virtue is its own reward." When a niche of fame is set up in Salt Lake, a marble figure representing a conglomerate of all the stoic virtues mixed with justice be set up there as representing the average clerk in the Salt Lake postoffice; and in the Millennium where rewards are to be dealt out with such a liberal hand, the Salt Lake postoffice clerk will come in for a bunch of blessings that will make him forget forever that there ever was such a thing as a misdirected letter to decipher. He can flap his wings in peace forever more unroubled by the vagaries of unreasonable people, or the perspiring rush of the Christmas holidays.

Postmaster Thomas gives the credit for the shrewdest work done in deciphering illegible or improperly addressed letters to Miss Ethlyn Markham of the clerical force in the postoffice, whom he says is one of the most capable experts in that line in the postal service.

"There is no particle of risk involved in letting business take its natural course and the people can help themselves and the country most by putting back into active circulation the money they are hoarding. The banks and trust companies are solvent.—Extract from President Roosevelt's letter, Nov. 17.

What Does Your Mirror Say?

Does it cheerfully report an abundance of beautiful, well kept hair or does it regretfully tell the story of hair neglect?

Your mirror may be anxious to please, but if you permit your friends to see dull, brittle and lusterless hair, with possibly dandruff and failing hair, your mirror will have to reflect the same condition.

All of these unfortunate effects can be overcome by destroying their cause with

NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE

The Original Remedy that "Kills the Dandruff Germ"

Dandruff, with its consequent hair injury and hair loss, is now known to be a highly contagious germ disease. It is caused by an invisible growth of vegetable character that finds lodgement in the sebaceous glands of the scalp. This growth disturbs the functions of the sebaceous glands, causing excessive oiliness or extreme dryness of the hair. It also sets up an inflammatory process that extends down the follicle to the papilla, where the adhesions are loosened and the hair slips out. The value of Newbro's Herpicide in such cases is quite extraordinary. Its intelligent use will correct every condition short of chronic baldness and thus permit the hair to resume its natural luster and abundance.
