Present From His Men.

There was a genuine surprise in store for Chief Devine of the fire department last night in the greeting between him and members of the department over which he has presided so ably for many years.

There was a celebration consisting of a presentation to the chief, there were speeches, jokes, cigars and something else. Especially "something else." The bright and pleasing feature of the cele bration was the presentation to Chief Devine from members of the depart-ment of a handsome gold watch. The arrangements were all carried out without the knowledge of the chief and hy was the most surprised man in town when he returned to the station at c'clock and found all the fire laddies members of the council committee and representatives of the press lined up to greet him. Assistant Chief Wood stated to his superior officer that the rian had a grievance to make, and that members of the council committee and reporters from the daily papers were present to see that justice was done to all parties concerned. The chief looked dazed but said nothing.

Engineer Simpson, the veteran of the department, was chosen as spokesman department, was chosen as sposesman and in a few well chosen words he stated that the grievance consisted in the considerate manner in which Chief Devine had treated the boys during his nine years' service. The sentence, he caid, was the presentation of the gold watch. "This beautiful watch," said Mr.

Simpson, "is not set with diamonds, emeralds and other precious stones, but it is with something more lasting, the respect and esteem of the members of the department for you, Chief Devine. And now, we hope you will ac-cept this watch in the spirit in which

Past and Local Implement Trade Review-Past and Present.

In an interview today with the officers and management of the Consolidat-ed Wagon & Machine company of tils city, the conditions of the local imple-ment trade were gone over and favorably commented upon. The company has now been in existence for one year, and the management remarked this morn-ing, that the trade enjoyed for the past 12 months was satisfactory. More-over, the outlook for 1963 was fully as promising. Notwithstanding the rad-ical advance in the cost of manufactured articles, the general public during the preceding 12 months has not paid pay advanced prices over what obtrined before 1902 on vehicles, implements, of farming machinery; and the company has in the year past paid to holders of preterve atock dividends of about 6 per cent, and from all sources comes the gratifying statement that the ad-vance in prices at this date is not in excess of 5 per cent over the prices on similar commodities one year since. This, however, the Consolidated Wagon & Machine company management states is a loss that will be largely borne by the company, and not by the general public until such time in the near future as present stock becomes exhausted. This will be replaced by new stock, when the necessity of an advanced price to the consumer will be apparent to all. In an interview today with the officers and management of the Consolidat as present stock becomes exhausted. This will be replaced by new stock, when the necessity of an advanced price to the consumer will be apparent to all. The management states that the records show that the company has re-tained for the year past, and has concracted for 1903, with all the prominent manufacturers whom its predecessors represented in the past; and the volume of business enjoyed in 1902 for Utah. I faho and contiguous territory has been such as to warrant the belief that the patronage enjoyed by the Cooperative Wagon & Machine company, and the Consolidated Implement company prior to 1902, has not been diminished during the current year. The Herculean task of consolidating into the present organization, the two concerns entailed a to 1902, has not been diminished during the current year. The Herculean task of consolidating into the present organization the two concerns entailed a great amount of work; yet the organization has been able to overcome the difficulties incident thereto, and report business has moved along smoothly, and with few changes. These changes are only for the betterment of the service. The management anticipates with the comencement of the New Year, that slight difficulties incident to consolidation will be overcome by the experience gained; and patrons are assured of the best service as far as the ability of the company will permit, with the best goods and best prices pos-sibe, existing conditions considered. The personnel of the directory of the company insures a conservative polsibe, existing conditions considered. The personnel of the directory of the company insures a conservative pol-ley and management at all points with a view to accomplishing these results. The steady prices at which the company's stock has been quoted, and the slight advance in the price of common stock together with statements made to a "News" representative, are an indication of the general outlook for sat-isfactory trade conditions in the Intermountain country for ensuing year. In fact an increased trade should be looked for. Collections are reasonably good, although conditions of the livestock market and the inability of the railroad people to furnish sufficient number of cars to move the same have retarded collections in some districts. collections in some districts.

The city council's action in appropriating funds for the construction of an addition to the isolation hospital was not taken in time to prevent the over-flow of that place with smallpox pa-tients. Yesterday the hospital was so crowded that it was unable to accommodate a new case reported to the board, that of Lydia M. Wilkinson, aged 21 years, who resides at 766 west Second North street.
