ENSIGN HENRY ALLEN PEARSON

It is a source of considerable pride to the people of Utah to know that they bad a naval representative in the great and now famous battle of Manila Bay where Commander, now Admiral Dewey, and his brave men achieved achieved leadership mander under whose fought in the Philip-As heretofore stated in "News" the Utahn referred to Philippines. the is Henry Allen Pearson of Draper, Salt Lake county. The young man is now an ensign in the American navy (an official position ranking with a lieuten-such a brillant and overwhelming victory over the Spanish Asiatic squad-ron. Especially is it a source of pride when it is known that the Utah repre-sentative referred to possesses all the attributes of a great naval leader himself, and that he may some day become as distinguished as the gallant comancy in the army). He was born at ancy in the army). He was born at Draper December 24, 1869, and is there-fore twenty-nine years of age. His father is a native of Sweden, reared and educated under the tutilage of the Swedish nobility. His mother, is a daughter of Utah. ausign Pearson as a boy attending the district school at Draper where he showed unusual aptitude for learn-ing, especially in the llne of mathe-matics. On completing his course of study in the Draper school he entered the University of Deseret, and gradu-ated from the normal department of that institution at the age of eighteen. He immediatel took up the profession of teaching and followed it for two years in the schools of Salt Lake coun-ty. He was given the opportunity of Utah cadet to the United States acade-my. September 6, 1889, being named by my, September 6, 1839, being named by Hon. John T. Caine while that gentle-man was serving the people of the then my, September 6, 1858, Using halfied by Hon. John T. Caine while that gentle-man was serving the people of the then Territory as Congressional representa-tive. For the ensuing four years he pursued his studies with unflagging zeal and graduated with the highest honors June 2, 1893. Mr. Pearson was always known as a most exemplary and moral young man, being imbued with a keen sense of right and wrong, following closely the prompting of Christian duty. In physi-cal proportions he is almost perfection itself, the claim being made that no finer formed man graduated from the Annapolis Academy. He weighs just 200 pounds, and is exactly six feet high. He has an easy and graceful mivement, and is as strong and brave as a lion. On leaving Annapolis he immediately entered upon active naval life, and quickly distinguished himself for ef-ficient service, ranking particularly high as a gunner of unerring marks-mariship. His proficiency in this direc-tion won for him the favorable notice of the naval authorities, and resuited in him being awarded two medals of merit. In 1895 he received a leave of absence, and came to Utah, visiting his parents at Draper, and exchanging greetings with his many friends in this city. His visit was cut short by the receipt of telegraphic orders to hastep to San Francisco and join the Olympia for a cruise in Chinese waters and to protect American interests in that part of the world during the Chinese-Japan-ese war. During the trouble between these two nations he was given excel-lent opportunity to study the force and effect of modern warfare. He has not been home since 1895, having remained continuously in Asiatic waters. He wrote his last letter to his parents from Shanghai, under date of April 5th. It was unusually brief and simply stated that the situation was very serious; that he was in the Monocacy at that time, but that he and three other Americans had just received orders from Commodore Dewey to forthwith join him on his flagship, the Olympia, and proceed with the United States fleet for the Philippines. This being true, there is good reason to believe that Ensign Pearson was on the Olympia when the great battle took place in Manila harbor on May 1st. His account of the now historic fight will be awaited with Interest. He was made acquainted with interest. He was made acquainted with interest of the flather and mother. expressed the profoundest regret and sympathy for the Havana harbor dis-aster. for a cruise in Chinese waters and to protect American interests in that part aster.

WEEKLY CROP BULLETIN.

Salt Lake City, Utah, May 10th, 1898.

The weather during the week ending The weather during the week ending Monday, May 9th, was generally cloudy and moderately cool, with gentle and widely distributed rains over the greater portion of the State. Snow fell at intervals during the middle of the week, and averaged in depth from a trace in southern districts to two feet in the eastern and northen sections. Heavy frost was quite generally re-ported from many localities but no damage is reported. damage is reported. In nearly all cases the rain was gen-

732