

A GRAVE QUESTION.

Alleged Error by the State Supreme Court Is a Railing.

OF GREAT INTEREST TO LAWYERS.

Strong Array of Legal Talent Supporting a Petition for a Rehearing.

Some changes, in an action between the North Point Cement Co., Ltd., and the Utah and Salt Lake Canal Company, defendant, pending in the Third district court, Moore Richards & Richards, representing the plaintiff, moved for a temporary injunction, which was granted by the court.

On the hearing in the latter court, the attorneys for the defendant objected to the jurisdiction of the court on the ground that appeals from a district in the State Supreme court were taken to the State Supreme court.

The labor ruling contained considerable comment among members of the bar, and some of the more prominent of them, when the court ruled that Moore, Richards & Richards were preparing a brief in support of a petition for a rehearing, asked to be allowed to join, which request was readily granted, hence a remarkably strong array of legal talent in support of the petition.

Following is the petition (for a hearing) in the supreme court of the state of Utah:

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF THE STATE OF UTAH.

North Point Cement Co., Ltd., Plaintiff, vs. Utah and Salt Lake Canal Company, Ltd., Defendant and Appellee.

PETITION FOR REHEARING.

Now come the defendants and petitioners to the court for rehearing, on the grounds specified herein, upon the following grounds, to-wit:

1. The court erred in dismissing the appeal in said case.

2. The court erred in applying to the Constitution the rules applicable to the construction of the Constitution of the United States.

3. The court erred in applying to the Constitution the rules applicable to the construction of the Constitution of the United States.
