The purpose and strategy of the project & mission that was considered complete was finally turned out. It was put in the hands of a subordinate and afterwards sent to James McLaughlin, at Washington, whose opinion was considered valuable. Mr. McLaughlin tried the machine and it gave way, literally, under the test. Another was sent to him, and in the course of time several, each having

THE CHINA FACTOR IN THE 1970s
The 1970s saw a dramatic shift in U.S. foreign policy, with a focus on China. This was a result of the Cold War and the desire to balance power. The U.S. government, under President Richard Nixon, initiated a policy of détente with the Soviet Union and a strategic shift towards China. This led to the historic visit of President Nixon to China in 1972, which opened the door for improved relations between the two nations. The U.S. government also sought to establish a strategic partnership with China, which would help to counter the influence of the Soviet Union. This policy was a key factor in the U.S. foreign policy of the 1970s.
