EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Chicago Herald cruelly remarks that Jay Gould will probably sail his yacht in some of his watered stock.

The oldest newspaper in the world is published in Peking. It is printed on a large sheet of silk, and it is said, has made a million years for upward of a thousand years.

The Lancet thinks that if children would wear woollen next the skin, and wear longer clothing, suspending it from the shoulders, we would hear more of bolterous health and less of back aches and pains.

Seven million rabbits have been killed in Australia in less than a year, and yet the rabbits do not seem to decrease in numbers. They may yet drive out the British, as Lord Rosebery says they once did for Hailgland.

The prospects of the proposed ex-position of foreign industry, art and science at Boston, are very encouraging. Secretary Frelinghuysen has promised the support of the government as far as possible, and has ordered 5,000 descriptive circulars to be distributed through our consuls and ministers abroad.

The extent of many Mexican estates is almost beyond realization. The boundaries of one estate on the central table lands in Mexico extend over a hundred miles north and south. The mountains traversing it abound with mineral wealth, and fine farms and extensive towns are met with at frequent intervals.

The San Francisco Chronicle says: "Seven Chinamen were received into the First Presbyterian Church at Los Angeles last Sunday. We think it would be the better part of wisdom for the deacons to keep a sharp eye on the communicants, since, for religion is seldom more than a disguise with the Mongolian, while larney is ingrained."

One of the great problems of today, says the Scientific American, is to infuse a large share of modern spirit into school life and school work; to lessen largely the amount of book learning and increase the proportion of individual efforts in dealing directly with realities; in short, to make the student more of a doer and less of a passive recipient of vague generalities.

Sadly but firmly the American tramp turns his back on Wisconsin, and like the red man who is hunted down and driven from place to place, bids that State a tearful farewell forever. A new law has just been adopted by the Legislature making the following of the traveling profession punishable by from six to twelve months' imprisonment.

A. M. Sullivan, an Irish patriot, tells his fellow countrymen that "if temperance were brought to the front as it ought to be, Ireland would be free in five years." We might doubt it if it would be free from British rule, but if every man in Ireland were to become a total abstainer, the country would be freed from one of the greatest weights which is pressing it down. This is the testimony of many of Ireland's best and truest friends.

In August Nordenahjold, the Swedish navigator, will start on an expedition for Greenland. He proposes to make a complete exploration of the interior of that country. As comparatively but little is now known of Greenland, and as it is among the possibilities that information so obtained may be of some practical value, it would seem that such an exploration is worthy of more encouragement than the many fruitless and fatal efforts to find the North Pole.

Captain Carey, who, it may be remembered, acquired unhappy notoriety and obloquy from riding off and leaving the Prince Imperial in his moment of peril, has just died of a broken spirit, at Kurrachee, in the Bombay Presidency, where he has served the last three years with his regiment, the Ninety-eighth. He was the nephew of a distinguished officer, General Jackson Carey, and came of a Guernsey family which contributed many gallant soldiers and sailors.

Haggal, Zechariah and Malachi, prophets of the Old Testament times, were buried in the city of Jerusalem. The ground in which their remains were laid belongs to the Turkish government, and negotiations are now on foot for its purchase by Christians, in order that a "Christian" church may be erected on the spot. The Jewish inhabitants of Jerusalem are much excited about this, but the Turkish representatives say that their only way to prevent the ground from passing into the hands of the Christians is to buy it themselves and pay down the cash.

The Mark Lane London Express says of English agricultural prospects: "The past winter has been most disastrous. The general outlook is more gloomy than for years. . . . Since October last there has been scarcely one week's interval of fair weather, and while the autumn-sown wheat has been either washed out of the ground or irretrievably damaged, but little opportunity has been afforded for the ordinary operations of the late winter or early spring. In eleven years there has only been one winter with heavier rainfall than this."

BUSINESS, NOT SENTIMENT.

The Denver papers are having a great deal to say about the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad and its connection with Salt Lake and Ogden. Some sensible remarks are made and some not so sensible. It is conceded that Utah will, by means of the new line, obtain control of the grain and vegetable trade with western and south-western Colorado, and perhaps of other branches of business. But the fear that the new road will discriminate in freight for the special benefit of Utah dealers and against the Denverites, appears to us ill founded and unreasonable. Also the notion that special efforts will be made in favor of the "Mormons," seems to us groundless and absurd.

The Denver Tribune publishes the opinions of several merchants on the subject, but editorially takes no stock in the complaints against the Denver and Rio Grande which it declares "has been the best railroad friend Colorado has ever had." The Times, however, says that "the Rio Grande does not look for any of the Gentile trade" of Utah, but is making "diplomatic moves to secure the friendship of the Mormons, who naturally look to it as an ally against the Union Pacific and the Gentiles," alleged to be equally opposed to polygamy. One of these "diplomatic moves" is mentioned, namely, giving its contracts for construction to "Mormons."

The Times shows very little knowledge of Utah railroad history, and very little common sense in regard to the sentiments of corporations. What do any of them care about "Mormonism" or polygamy? They are looking after profits. We have no idea that the Rio Grande people, either in letting out construction contracts or making overtures for trade on their road, entertain any peculiar friendship for the "Mormons" or contemplate any discrimination in their favor. And the Union Pacific, which the Times imagines to be hostile to the "Mormon" Church, was built just as much by "Mormon" labor as the Denver and Rio Grande. It is quite a mistake to suppose that there is intense hostility on the part of the U. P. or alliance on the part of the R. G. with the "Mormons" in any way. The whole affair is to be looked at from a business point of view, and that alone.

Competition in the railroad line will no doubt prove beneficial to Utah as to other sections of the country. The road which offers the best facilities and rates to patrons, will gain their trade. One road will doubtless prove the more advantageous to some shippers and buyers, and the other road to others. There will be trade enough for all. Utah is bound to grow and advance in business of every kind, and whichever road gains the greater patronage will obtain it on business principles, into which mere sentiment will not enter. It will be neither "Mormon" nor "Gentile" distinctively; it will be neither Union Pacific nor Rio Grande as a matter of friendship or hostility. There is room for both roads and traffic also, and we wish them both success.

As for the Colorado trade, there are some natural advantages in favor of Utah, which the new road opens up and of which our business men, if they are sharp, will at once avail themselves. There are others which the Denver people possess and which they will not lose by way of the Rio Grande, and that road will, no doubt, act strictly on business principles and be as anxious to promote the Denver trade as the Salt Lake trade, looking upon all as fish that comes into its net. There is no cause for jealousy and no need for fear.

The Liquor Question.
 CHICAGO, 18.—Throughout Illinois yesterday, 48 cities and towns voted upon the liquor question. In halting for municipal officers. Four towns ignored the saloon question and voted on straight political issues.

Camp fires and signaling have been going on all day in the neighboring mountains. The citizens are uneasy, waiting the attack. A special train from Camp Huachuca is coming with troops.

The El Paso Times says editorially: General Crook will have the supreme command of one hundred and fifty San Carlos Apaches, and move on Sonora. The most vigorous campaign will be immediately commenced; both American and Mexican officers believe that only annihilation will make peace possible.

Cold-Blooded Murder.
 NEW YORK, 17.—The corner of Vanderbilt and Park Avenue Brooklyn, was the scene of a horrible murder this afternoon. The murderer, Dietrich Mahanaka, has a record for the corner where the shooting occurred, and the victim, Dietrich Steffens, was a large beer dealer, at 108 West street. Steffens for a long time had been paying attention to Anna Doeber, Mahanaka's niece and who resided with him and family over the store. Steffens married Miss Doeber to whom he was engaged to be married. Mahanaka was very suspicious of him and believed he was unduly intimate with his wife. His wife, knowing his jealousy, got Miss Doeber to move to a friend's house and requested Steffens to stay away. The murdered man was delivering goods opposite Mahanaka's store this afternoon and crossed the street in answer to call from a friend. He had hardly reached the sidewalk when Mahanaka approached holding in his hand a revolver and without a word he fired five shots at Steffens, four balls entered his head, the fifth hit his left breast. Steffens dropped dead; Mahanaka was arrested.

A Sample Railroad Town.

The terminus of the Northern Pacific Railroad has moved further on and left Weeksville, Montana, of pistol, shotguns and vigilante notoriety, out in the cold. As a railroad town, it is deficient. Speaking of the later terminal point of Last Chance, a correspondent of the Butte Miner says:

"On the 15th inst. the Northern Pacific Railroad Company employees were paid off there, and as the boys began to circulate their wealth the town began to boom, and as the whiskey began to work, revolver shots were heard in every direction and stray bullets made it almost 'dangerous to be safe' on the street. A row was raised in Smith's saloon. One man thumped his partner over the head with a bottle, and another seized his gun from him at the same time and began shooting out the lights and the glasses off the bar. A couple of his companions joined him in the spree. In a few seconds the three were left by themselves in their wild joy. Next morning that tent looked as though it had been held under a shot.

A town of tents affords but little protection against stray bullets. Harry M. Wilson, traveling for Schleibauer, Meyerfield & Co., San Francisco, cigar manufacturer, was made aware of that fact while taking in Last Chance on business yesterday. He was strolling through the street when a frame began in a saloon hard by, from whence a stray bullet came and bored a hole through his coat tail. He had important business at the time, and did not stop to find out who fired the shot."
