VETERAN RECALLS VICKSBURG ASSAULT

Today is the Forty-sixth Anniversary of Grant's Great Coup.

THE BEGINNING OF THE BREAK

Confederate Power Was Shattered in The West by This Tedious Siege Of Union Forces.

'It is just 46 years ago today that Gen. Grant made his first assault on Vicksburg," said Col. F. M. Sterrett, executive director of the forty-third national encampment of G. A. R. which will be held in this city next August. The colonel was in a reminiscent mood, and spoke of the siege of the Mississippi stronghold, which began on May 19, 1863, as the beginning of Grant's great career as the military genius of the Civil war, and also as the beginning of the breaking of the confederate power

"Late in April Gen. Grant came up the river with troops, transports and gunboats, below Vicksburg, prepared to gunboats, below Vicksburg, prepared to open up a series of operations against that town. Grant crossed the river at Bayou Pierre, two weeks before the assault took place. The Thirteenth corps, under Gen. McClernand, and the Seventeenth corps, under Gen. McPherson, were ferried across the stream Sherman's forces, which had been busy keeping the confederate force in the garrison at Vicksburg from receiving reinforcements, was also on the ground when the attack began.

"The confederate forces at Vicksburg were commanded by Gen. John C. Pemberton, who was acting under orders from Gen. Johnston. Pemberton had were commanded by Gen. John C. Pemberton, who was acting under orders from Gen. Johnston. Pemberton had been ordered by Johnston to move out from Vicksburg, when he, Johnston, would form a junction with him and crush Grant by weight of superior numbers. This Pemberton attempted to do, but Grant saw the peril of the situation and instantly took measures to strike Pemberton before such a junction could be effected. On May 16, the Union forces under McClernand and McPherson met Pemberton's army and after a desperate struggle, in which some of the Union forces were compelled to fall back, the confederates, who fought most gallantly under the added disability of the treachery of one of their generals in refusing to fight, broke ranks and fell back in confusion. The general refusing to obey orders was Loring, and he shared the panic of the troops and moved from the field leaving his artillery behind. Pemberton retired within the walls of Vicksburg.

GRANT INVESTS VICKSBURG.

GRANT INVESTS VICKSBURG.

"On the morning of May 19, General Grant's army completely invested Vicksburg on the land side, and by the aid of a successful movement by Admiral Porter, was able to receive supplies for his army by way of the Mississippi river.

"Grant ordered the attack at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. It was tegun by Sherman's corps. Blair's division took the lead. The ground was very rough, cleft by deep chasms; in fact the front of the confederate works was such a tangle of hills and obstacles that approach was difficult and perilous. Blair's regiments moved steadily on, however, delivering the first blow to General Schoup's Louisiana brigade, which struck back powerfully. After a slight recoil, Blair's troops moved on across the ditch to the exterior slope of the works, where the Thirteenth regulars, under Gen. Glies Smith, planted the flag of the Republic. The Eighty-throi Indiana and One Hundred and Twenty. of the Republic. The Eighty-third In-diana and One Hundred and Twentyseventh Illinois also gained the slope but were unable to enter in the face of the dedestruction was useless, Sherman recalled the men at dark, and the assault was abandoned for that day.

SURRENDER TO GRANT.

"On the 22nd, however, Grant ordered "On the 22nd, however, Grant ordered another assault by his whole line. In order that the attack should be perfectly planned, the time of the assault was arranged and the corps and division commanders set their watches by that of Gen. Grant. At the appointed hour the storming columns all moved forward, while Admiral Porter's mortars were belching forth shot and shell from his river squadron. As on the 19th, Blair's division formed the advance of Sherman's column. At the same time the batteries of Wood, Barrett, Waterhouse, Spoor and Hart consame time the batteries of Wood, Barrett, Waterhouse, Spoor and Hart concentrated their fire on the northeast bastion of the works of the enemy. The van moved forward with never a foe in sight until they reached the salient of the bastion, when suddenly up sprang two rows of Confederate sharp shooters, whose terrible volleys swept down the advancing Union line in an instant. The rear of the column then attempted to push on, but was repulsed with heavy losses. All the divisions of the assaulting force stormed the various positions of the Confederates, but when darkenss fell no decided advantage had been gained, and the troops were withdrawn. McClernand's forces were withdrawn. McClernand's forces really gained some of the intrenchments of the enemy, but they were not reinforced and his advantage was not unitatived. maintained.
"When Gen. Grant found he could not carry the stronghold by assault, he decided on a general siege, and the post was completely invested. How the heroic Pemberton held out with his force against starvation is well known history," concluded the colonel, "On Wankeesha Firm Awarded $132,700 Bid for Structural Metal-'Frisco Company Gets $19,000 Contract.

Architect John Parkinson of Los Angeles, the architect of the new Kearns' building on Main street, is in the city in connection with the letting of contracts. The contract for the structural steel has been let to the Modern Steel company of Waukeesha, Wis., for $132,-00; the terra cotta work to the Gladding & McPean company of San Francisco for $19,000; with the contract for the elevators to be awarded in a few days. Like many other prominent architects, Mr. Parkinson believes in a more extended use of terra cotta for front elevation purposes, and remarked oday, that its appearance in the Ecarns building would so demonstrate the advantages to be gained from its use that no doubt a plant would be established in or near this city, for the manufacture of terra cotta for all kinds of use in building construction. The plan of the Kearns building will plan of the Kearns building will be very much like that of the Security building in San Francisco. Mr. Par-kinson expresses himself as much pleased with the general business out-look in Salt Lake, which he considers city with a promising immediate fu-

DR. ALLEN'S MISHAP.

Driving His New Automobile on Slippery Ground Comes to Sudden Stop.

Riding in his newly purchased auto-mobile at a good rate down the slippery surface of F street this morning at 11:30 o'clock and attempting to turn sharply into South Temple, Dr. Allen met misfortune face to face. The pace at the turn and the condition of the newly sprinkled street combined against himand instead of making the turn, his machine skidded across the street, jumping the carriage steps in front of the J. B. Cosgriff home and then crashing headlong into a trolley standard. One of the front wheels of the gasoburgey was bent out of all resemblance to its original appearance, the front of the car was crushed and the medical man was somewhat perturbed. He hastened to a gurage and obtained a new wheel and a machinist and the two combining permitted Dr. Allen to resume his morning calls without further incident. Dr. Allen was accompanied by a boy as a passenger, but neither was injured in the least. o'clock and attempting to turn sharply

WEATHER REPORT

The predicted frost of last night did not materialize for the mercury did not fall below 49 degrees. The thermometer is on the rise today, and will hardly fall below 55 tonight, although the weather office says it will be cool.

Only slight changes in air pressure have occurred since yesterday morning relatively low pressure prevailing over the southern half, and relatively high pressure over the northern half of the country. Light precipitation has occurred over various portions of the country during the past 24 hours. Moderate temperatures still continue throughout the Mississippi valley and eastern states.

Commission Men Demonstrate There Are Two Sides to Question.

Are Two Sides to Question.

Local commission men are complaining that they are charged demurrage by the rallroads after the usual 24 hours, without any regard to their being interfered with, while unloading, by switching crews. For instance, a merchant is notified that a car consigned to him is on the track waifing to be unloaded. Teams are promptly sent and unloading begun. But in the course of 30 minutes, along comes a switch engine, and pulls the car away, to get at others, and it may be one to three hours before that car is put back again to where the consignee can continue his work, and in the meantime his teams are idle at the fate of a dollar per hour per team. It sometimes happens that the consignee is prevented for six hours out of the 24 hours from emptying that car, but no allowance whatever, is made for the interferance, and if that car is not unloaded in 24 hours after the date of arrival, demurrage is charged. So the merchant has two losses to meet—the loss of time when the teams are standing idle, and the demurrage he has to pay the company for interfering with him while he is doing his best to accommodate the rallroad company.
