the owners of one tunnel car, one incline car and 250 feet of 4-inch galvanized iron pipe, and that the defendants converted the same to their own use to plaintiffs' damage in the sum of $100.

The defendants denied the allegations. A jury was waived and trial had before the court. After hearing the evidence his honor rendered judgment against the defendants Denhalter and Hoffman for $95, the action having been dismissed as to defendant Liberty E. Holden.

For a Loss of a Horse.

Late yesterday afternoon the case of John McDonald, Jr., against the Salt Lake City Railway company, the Salt Lake City Gas company and Salt Lake City, came up before Commissioner Moyer. The plaintiff sued for $225 damages, alleged to have been sustained by a valuable horse stepping in a hole on Third South street. He holds that the gas company is liable because they dug the hole, the railway company because they did not fill it up, it being between the tracks, and the city because the hole was on one of its thoroughfares.

Judge Judd appeared for the plaintiff and E. D. Hoge for the city, E. B. Critchlow for the street railway company, while the gas company was not represented by counsel.

The court rendered a verdict for the plaintiff for $195, holding the three defendants jointly liable for the damages.

From the Mission Field.

Elder J. M. Phelps writes from Silver Creek, Lawrence County, Miss., Feb. 24, 1893, a letter to Mr. Actal Osborn, of Montpelier, Idaho; a few extracts of which are published by request. The writer relates some of his experiences on the field and then continues:

"It was then I looked back at the many chances I had neglected at home to inform my mind. I thought of the Y. M. M. I. A., of the Sunday School, of our Sabbath meeting and the many times I had gone hunting horses or fixed up excuses to keep from attending the meetings. Often when we have had meetings appointed, and I consider how incapable I am of performing the trust placed upon me, has a silent tear stolen down my cheek while sitting on some old rotten log, trying to comprehend the Gospel. Dear brother, there is nothing but the still, small whispering of the Lord that can console a man in such times. At home you have perchance a father, a mother or a loving wife to cheer you up, when the trials of life come upon you. But out in the world you have none of these but must look to your God to fill the place of all you left behind. It is at these times you will steal out to some lonely spot and pour out your thoughts to your Maker, and let me tell you, as one who has tried it, you will receive the sweet consolation that comes from no other source. When I look back at my past life, I feel to thank God that I am here, and now if He will give me health and continue to hear and answer my prayers I will stay here until His servants say it is enough. Two years ago there were but four Elders in this conference and now there are fourteen, and our president is calling for more. There are thousands of good, honest souls who have never heard the sound of the everlasting Gospel and there is work for all."

The Mistletoe Bough.

This interesting drama will be given in the Eleventh Ward meetinghouse this evening preceded by a musical program. It will be under the auspices of the Y. L. M. I. A. of the ward, and will be repeated tomorrow night. The admission is 25 and 50 cents.

Wonderland.

Another complete and interesting change of program occurs at this place of amusement today.

The stock company will appear in the exciting military drama Lynwood, with a strong cast, and with new scenery and accessories.

In the curio Hall many new and attractive features will be seen, amongst whom are McLean and Hall, acrobatic song and dance artists, Ed. Pringle, juggler, and Miss Alice Evans, vocalist.

The Rick sisters artists on cornet and euphonium, have scored a great success, and have been engaged for another week.

THE FEDERATED TRADES.

They will Try a Hand at Manipulating Public Affairs.

Delegations from the Federated Trades and Labor council and the Building and Trades assembly met with the County court last evening. The Building and Trades assembly was represented by William Doxie, Joseph Wilkes, C. F. Gibbs and J. Murray, and the Federated Trades by Messrs. Hamlin, Willard, Morris, Zinck and Lapsley.

William Doxie, the spokesman of the delegation, said that he appeared as the representative of the Building and Trades assembly, an organization composed of the stonemasons, bricklayers, plasterers, tinners and cornicemakers, stonecutters, Brotherhood of Carpenters, Amalgamated Carpenters and Joiners' unions, with a combined membership of over six hundred. The delegation represented, he said, the centralization of power of all the building interests. They have given the proposition of bonding proper consideration and have determined to do their utmost to bring it to a successful termination. The services of three men were at the disposal of the court on election day and every man who could vote would be at the polls.

J. L. Morris announced that he spoke in behalf of the Federated Trades, and represented thirteen unions of this city and county, composed of over 1500 men. They intended to do everything in their power in aid of the proposition to bond in order that the joint building can be completed. The county could depend upon the Federated Trades for a strong support, and they would furnish twenty men, and more if necessary, to get out the voters on election day.

A. L. Hamlin also spoke in favor of bonding the county. "Let us," said he, in conclusion, "support the proposition, and let those who come after us pay for the bonds."

Judge Blair and Selectman Morris then explained the proposition, and the needs of the county for money from the bonds.

Mr. Doxie inquired who could vote, and was told that all taxpayers could, whether or not they were citizens.

Mr. Doxie—Does poll tax cover that?

Selectman Morris—Well, that is a species of tax, but I hardly think it covers it.

The meeting then adjourned.

MARVELOUS FAHYAHS.

They Walk in the Air Hundreds of Feet Above the Ground.

The Fahyahs are the greatest legerdemainists, necromancers and hypnotists in the known world.

One of their practical feats is walking in the air. The Fahyah who performs it lays flat down with his face toward the earth for a minute or a minute and a half, then arises, and forcing his arms against his sides stands very erect, deliberately walks into the air as far as his power of endurance will permit him, at times reaching an altitude of from 250 to 800 feet, when he simply walks down again.

At first I could hardly believe my eyes, and I thought I had indeed seen a miracle performed. It took me over a year to understand this feat, at the end of which time I discovered that it was accomplished by a thorough knowledge of the electrical powers.

They thoroughly understand the laws of changing their electrified form from the positive to the negative by inhalation, and by that means, just the same as this universe is held in place by a congeniality of those two forces, so they utilize them in the performance of this feat.

To try to make it even clearer I will go into the philosophy of the trick, starting from the first principles of electrical law, congeniality. Two persons are introduced to each other. Instinctively each party to the introduction knows whether there is a feeling of perfect congeniality or not. If there is a congeniality that proves that one is the positive and the other is the negative; if that feeling of congeniality is wanting then they both possess similarly electrified forms and naturally are repellant.

Of course after associations may ofttimes make two such similarly electrified forms friends, but 'tis very rarely the case. The same law precisely that governs the feelings of those men who have been introduced to each other is that which controls and keeps the universe in place.

The world is supposed to be 25,000 miles in circumference, 10,000 miles more or less in diameter; it revolves only once around the sun every twenty-four hours.

That is a pretty rapid rate of speed, it must be admitted, and naturally some force of electricity must be evolved; call it positive. Then if the world is positive space must be negative; otherwise one would be repellant to the other and we could not hold our place in the terrestrial firmament.

Now if the world does hold its place by that law of electrical congeniality, why is it not possible for the man who possesses the knowledge of changing his electrified form from the negative—which we who inhabit the earth all are—to the positive by a process of inhalation, which he does when he lies upon the ground, and then walk into the same space, by the same laws that hold that tremendous globe and all the other planets and stars in their place?

This is the way, and the only way, by which the Fahyahs perform this most wonderful feat.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The father of his country knew how to say no. Some ladies belonging to a club in Washington have lately unearthed a number of unpublished letters of the Washington family. One is from old Dame Mary Washington herself to her son George. She tells George she has the rheumatism; that her house roof leaks, and that she is coming to the capital to spend the winter with him. George's answer is unique. He writes back to his mamma that he is sorry she has rheumatism; that her roof shall be mended at once, but as to her spending the winter with him, she can't do it. It would not be agreeable to their guests to have her eat at the family table, and as she would either have to eat at the servants' table or have her meals sent to her room, and that would not be convenient for his wife. Is there in this a horrid suggestion that the mother of George Washington ate with her knife? In any case all must agree with the verdict of the lady who read the letter to the club—that it was a pity Washington had never learned to tell a lie.

Hood's Cures

Saved My Wife's Life

Weakness, Nervousness, Salt Rheum.

John W. Jones
Kalama, Wash.

"Of my own free will and accord, unbiased by anyone, and wishing only to do good to the afflicted, I wish to tell of the good qualities of Hood's Sarsaparilla and Hood's Pills. I think there are no medicines equal to them, and have proved their merit by experience in my own family. My wife, Rachel, has been afflicted with weakness, nervousness, and salt rheum. I spent nearly all that I had of this world's goods for doctor's bills and medicine until we decided to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. It immediately
