THE REVIVAL OF IRISH POPLINS.

Coleen poplin, in the shade known as London smoke, is used to develop this charming princess frock. The trimmings are of smoke gray velvet ribbons. A smart little chemisette of lace-dyed gray to match the tone of the material, is made over a foundation lining of gray tulle. The skirt is edged with gray velvet to match the ribbon used for trimming. A narrow facing of thin haircloth is set in the hem of this dress to give the soft poplin just enough body and spread, a finish the French are very fond of.
