NEWS OF THE WEST.

Lineman Falls Across an Electric Wire With Fatal Results.

RUPTURED A BLOOD VESSEL.

Sugar Fire Cries Encourage—An Indian Murderer—Big Law Suit—Sheep and Cattle Market.

The New Mexican legislature has passed a law exempting sugar factories from taxation for a period of six years.

Albert A. Smith, a lineman in the employ of the San Joaquin Electric Light and Power company, fell across a live wire Tuesday afternoon, near the Barton vineyard, Cal., and was instantly killed. He was 35 years old and unmarried.

Robert M. Fernald, superintendent and editor, at one time in the street railroad business, and highly respected citizen of Juneau, Nevada, dropped dead Tuesday while superintending some repairs on the road. He was recovering from the suffering they was last occasioned by a ruptured blood vessel in the brain. Deceased was a pioneer of Humboldt county, aged 67. A widow and two children survive him.

A surprise has been sprung on the political managers of the private company in Fresno, Cal., by the action of the Afro-American Loyalty league, which nominated Grant Scott, colored, as candidate for trustee on a ticket with it in opposition to Joseph Spivey, the regular Republican nominee, who was re-elected. The leaders are now "sat" concluding from these ward, which is usually strongly Republican.

Three more suits have been commenced against the Arctic and Alaska Russian company, Cal., by servant of laborers employed by the living way on a bridge over Mare river. The company's ship last December. Charles Kilburn sues in $25,000 on account of the death of a dear sister, Ida A. Kilburn. Mrs. Mary E. Kilburn, mother, sues for $10,000 for injuries to her son, the sleeper, and will not recover, brings suit for the same amount. Clara A. Kilburn, as administratrix of the estate of her husband, Capt. Wm. Kilburn, deceased, who was killed on the steamer, sues also for $25,000 damages. The three actions are based on the wreck of the steamer and damages are laid at a grand total of $60,000.

San Luis Gonzaga, one of the best known Indian servants of Monterey county, Cal., and the proprietor of a wagon and harness shop, was shot and killed by Indians, who, according to information obtained, were about 9 o'clock Tuesday night, and the authorities are now on the trail of the murderers. The body has been dragged quite a distance, and the face and teeth were smitten with blows. It is thought that the purpose of the murderers was to conceal the body of their victim with an abandoned well, but that the noise of parties approaching caused the murderers away. Indian authorities were informed and put in motion in tracing the scene of the crime. An examination showed that Gonzaga's head had been shot through with a rifle ball on the left side. There was a wound in the left ear that narrowly missed the heart. Tracks led from the body, and the shoes traces there on a cabin occupied by two Indian servants, Bill Miller and Richard Rosario.

Omaha Stockman, March 10: W. P. Noble, of the firm of Noble Bros., prominent cattle and sheep owners of Salt Lake City, Utah, was here today looking over the markets with a view to running in several thousand sheep and a thousand or so of cattle. This firm has now upwards of 8,000 sheep on feed at Fremont, Neb., and about 12,000 more on their range in Wyoming, and besides their sheep they have a big string of cattle which they have been hay-feeding through the winter at their Utah ranch and which are now about ready for market. Besides their Brand 1W1 they have lots of hay-fed steers in San Francisco markets and received on the ranch $3.80 per cwt for the same. Some time the coast markets have "clumsied" and Mr. Noble thinks that the first of his steers will be landed in South Omaha. While the next few weeks. They have experienced a very mild winter in Utah this year and both cattle and sheep have fared very nicely up to the present time, and the loss in general will be nominal, although they experienced some pretty tough weather in limited localities. Their sheep at Fremont, Neb., are in fine condition as the present time and will be put on the markets within the next few weeks, provided conditions are favorable in marketing. Mr. Noble says that the western ranges have been deserted of feeding stock and he is of the opinion that those who have the right cattle to their ranges will realize a handsome return on their holdings in the next year or two, as he thinks that cattle prices are sure to advance and will hold up for some time to come.

NEW KIND OF SILO.

Rectangular in Form and Has Two Pits, One For Summer Use.

Below are illustrations and description of a new kind of rectangular silo. It has two pits, and hence is convenient for cities in small number of cows or a summer silo for use during a summer drought. One pit is to be opened at a time, so that the whole quantity of silage will not be exposed at once.

The cuts and accompanying text are from Hoard's Dairyman. The editor says:

We know it is sometimes advised that a silo may be partitioned off into smaller pits, but this is not practicable in our opinion in a round silo or desirable in any form of silo. Crowds in a silo prevent proper settling of the silage, and it is largely because of their absence in the round silo that it is so much improved.

In the style of silo illustrated herewith we make the pits of any required size and add to their number as illustrated. The tie across the corners so increases the angle that it offers but little more resistance to settling than a straight wall.

In Fig. 1 the lining and siding are broken away at the corner to show how the frames are joined at the corner.

An essential details of construction shown in the cuts. Make a foundation wall coming up above the surface sufficiently so that the ground may be graded to carry all water from rains and melting snow away from the building. On this foundation lay the first frame, which may be doubled if desired and secured by bolts set in the wall. In our opinion, this will be necessary. At each corner of this frame and in the middle set up blocks 19 inches long, and on these build the next frame—thus it exactly above the first. On this second frame set up other blocks upon which to build the third frame, making these blocks long enough to space three frames 2 feet from center. Continue on in this way, adding frames above, increasing the distance between, until at the top they may be 4 feet or even more apart. These frames, for pits not exceeding 14 feet on a side, may be made of 3 by 8 inch stuff. Allow 16 feet per 2 by 16. Use spikes freely.

Fig. 2 shows one of the frames. The lining of the silo are represented by the inside and outside lines with the adjacent spaces.

When the third frame is in place, continue to stay lath and brace. If the outside is to be covered with clapboards, drop siding, or ship lath, and nail on lath forming strip. This will leave a space for circulation of air from top to bottom in summer and prolong the life of the silo. Use building paper under the siding.

The section in Fig. 3 gives an enlarged view of one of the corners, so that its construction may be more plainly seen.

Finish the interior with two thicknesses of boards, with heavy quality tarred building paper between them. The first course of boards may be of cheap lumber and should be put on horizontally, each board overlapping a little. The second lining should be put from top and four blocks and made of narrow boards. We do not consider matching necessary, but many use stuff that has been tongued and grooved.

Leave openings for taking out the silage where need for use.

These openings are not closed with doors, but with boards cut in lengths to fit and put in as filling progresses—two thicknesses with paper between, same as the lining. Doors hung with hinges may be used on the outside.

The "carrier" goes in at the door in the corner, and a sweep turns the silage into either pit as desired.

Students Judge Dairy Cattle.

W. H. Smith & son, breeders of Holstein-Friesian cattle, offer $25 dollars in prizes for the judging of dairy cattle during the fall term by students of the College of Agriculture of the Cook State university.

Last year this firm gave prizes to the students for judging nine head of Holstein-Friesians from their herd.

This year Messrs. Smith & Son propose to include all dairy cattle that are accessible to the students.

Crowd the extra feed into your cows about this time of year. Pasture is not enough.

Horses Kick
in self-defense. It is their most vigorous form of protest against the annoyance of flies. Nails that are driven into their feet or hoofs cause them the most excruciating pain. Horseowners often suffer much loss in ignorance of the danger that is liable to follow.

This is what happens. Our part comes next when it should be considered. You order your new set the sooner the better, also send for copy of the Celebrated in which the fibres of metallurgy separated and cut close to gum upon which the nail is driven. Thus the nail is easily forced by the tough edge along the inside near the gum.

Putnam Nails

are extensively Hot-Forged and Hammer-Pointed, producing the only nail with hammered hand-made nail. This process makes all particles of iron more vigorous and compact, thus rendering the nail against split, Sliver or Break and is
