

OGDEN. PLEASURE

OGDEN OFFICE.
BASEMENT REED HOTEL.
STIRLING A. STEVENS.
Mgt. Ogden Branch.

Nothing more pleasant and healthful than a cup of good Tea.

Hewlett's Teas are always Good.

PRESIDENT TAFT IN JUNCTION CITY

Program Carried Out in Every Detail for Two Hours' Stay of Executive.

SPEECH AT LESTER PARK.

Proud to be a Countryman of the Big Hearted and Energetic People of Utah.

OGDEN, Sept. 27.—From the moment President Taft and party arrived yesterday noon till the time of departure, every detail connected with his entertainment was most successfully carried out. At exactly 1 o'clock the "Taft special" came to a stop a short distance north of the Union depot and the distinguished visitor stepped on the rear platform, hat in hand, wearing his characteristic broad smile. Cheers went up from several thousand throats, and the Ogden Military band played a rousing national air. Mayor J. L. Brewer and the entertainment committee were then introduced and the big president was escorted to a waiting automobile. After the president was seated, Mayor Brewer entered the car, followed by Military Aide John D. Butler, Secret Service Agent Sean and D. A. Smyth, the latter acting as driver. Mounted policemen rode on each side of the president's car, and behind came other cars loaded with prominent citizens, as per program already published.

At the depot the local company of the N. G. U. acted as a special guard, and the streets were lined with local union men, serving as special policemen.

The party proceeded east on Twenty-fifth street and north on Washington avenue between great throngs of eager people. At Twenty-fourth street the party turned east, continuing to Harrison avenue, thence traveling north to the Canyon boulevard. No stop was made in the canyon till it was reached, and there a good representation of the citizens of Ogden valley greeted President Taft.

The return trip was over the boulevard and west to the State School for the Deaf and Blind. No stop was made at the school, the party simply driving through the grounds to Mountain street. Going south to Twenty-first street, the party entered Liberty park, where a very large representation of all the school children of Ogden, waving flags, lined both sides of the road. After the children greeted the president, who waved his hat and bowed to the delighted youthful throng, it was a grand sight, and the president referred to it later in his address.

Leaving the park, the party entered Lester park, where a very large representation of all the school children of Ogden, waving flags, lined both sides of the road. After the children greeted the president, who waved his hat and bowed to the delighted youthful throng, it was a grand sight, and the president referred to it later in his address.

Leaving the park, the party entered Lester park, where a very large representation of all the school children of Ogden, waving flags, lined both sides of the road. After the children greeted the president, who waved his hat and bowed to the delighted youthful throng, it was a grand sight, and the president referred to it later in his address.

Leaving the park, the party entered Lester park, where a very large representation of all the school children of Ogden, waving flags, lined both sides of the road. After the children greeted the president, who waved his hat and bowed to the delighted youthful throng, it was a grand sight, and the president referred to it later in his address.

Leaving the park, the party entered Lester park, where a very large representation of all the school children of Ogden, waving flags, lined both sides of the road. After the children greeted the president, who waved his hat and bowed to the delighted youthful throng, it was a grand sight, and the president referred to it later in his address.

Leaving the park, the party entered Lester park, where a very large representation of all the school children of Ogden, waving flags, lined both sides of the road. After the children greeted the president, who waved his hat and bowed to the delighted youthful throng, it was a grand sight, and the president referred to it later in his address.

Leaving the park, the party entered Lester park, where a very large representation of all the school children of Ogden, waving flags, lined both sides of the road. After the children greeted the president, who waved his hat and bowed to the delighted youthful throng, it was a grand sight, and the president referred to it later in his address.

Leaving the park, the party entered Lester park, where a very large representation of all the school children of Ogden, waving flags, lined both sides of the road. After the children greeted the president, who waved his hat and bowed to the delighted youthful throng, it was a grand sight, and the president referred to it later in his address.

Leaving the park, the party entered Lester park, where a very large representation of all the school children of Ogden, waving flags, lined both sides of the road. After the children greeted the president, who waved his hat and bowed to the delighted youthful throng, it was a grand sight, and the president referred to it later in his address.

Leaving the park, the party entered Lester park, where a very large representation of all the school children of Ogden, waving flags, lined both sides of the road. After the children greeted the president, who waved his hat and bowed to the delighted youthful throng, it was a grand sight, and the president referred to it later in his address.

Leaving the park, the party entered Lester park, where a very large representation of all the school children of Ogden, waving flags, lined both sides of the road. After the children greeted the president, who waved his hat and bowed to the delighted youthful throng, it was a grand sight, and the president referred to it later in his address.

Leaving the park, the party entered Lester park, where a very large representation of all the school children of Ogden, waving flags, lined both sides of the road. After the children greeted the president, who waved his hat and bowed to the delighted youthful throng, it was a grand sight, and the president referred to it later in his address.

Leaving the park, the party entered Lester park, where a very large representation of all the school children of Ogden, waving flags, lined both sides of the road. After the children greeted the president, who waved his hat and bowed to the delighted youthful throng, it was a grand sight, and the president referred to it later in his address.

Leaving the park, the party entered Lester park, where a very large representation of all the school children of Ogden, waving flags, lined both sides of the road. After the children greeted the president, who waved his hat and bowed to the delighted youthful throng, it was a grand sight, and the president referred to it later in his address.

Leaving the park, the party entered Lester park, where a very large representation of all the school children of Ogden, waving flags, lined both sides of the road. After the children greeted the president, who waved his hat and bowed to the delighted youthful throng, it was a grand sight, and the president referred to it later in his address.

Leaving the park, the party entered Lester park, where a very large representation of all the school children of Ogden, waving flags, lined both sides of the road. After the children greeted the president, who waved his hat and bowed to the delighted youthful throng, it was a grand sight, and the president referred to it later in his address.

Leaving the park, the party entered Lester park, where a very large representation of all the school children of Ogden, waving flags, lined both sides of the road. After the children greeted the president, who waved his hat and bowed to the delighted youthful throng, it was a grand sight, and the president referred to it later in his address.

loads of tomatoes, averaging about two tons to the load. This factory employs 125 men, women and children, and they are kept very busy for eight hours each day handling the immense output. By the end of the week it is thought that the entire tomato crop will be picked.

S. L. & O. DEPOT SITE.
OGDEN, Sept. 27.—The Salt Lake & Ogden Railway company has leased the Harris block, on the corner of Twenty-fifth street and Lincoln avenue, and it is understood that it will suit for depot purposes after March 1, 1910, that being the date the lease goes into effect. The building is occupied at present by Frank C. Watkins' grocery store. Mr. Watkins intends erecting a $3,000 business block a short distance east of the Harris block and move his business into the new building. The railroad company will remove the old partitions in the Harris building and remodel it so as to make room for offices and waiting rooms.

NORTH WEBER CONFERENCE.
OGDEN, Sept. 27.—The North Weber stake quarterly conference was held in the Tabernacle yesterday. President James Wetherpoon presiding. Two sessions were held, one at 10 in the morning and one at 7:30 in the evening. The speakers at both sessions were President James Wetherpoon and Counselors John V. Bluth and Frank Stratford. The Tabernacle choir, under the direction of Prof. Joseph Solentyne, furnished the music at both sessions. At the evening meeting, a special musical program was rendered. The choir and the vocalists did splendid work and special mention should be made of the "Rain Song" from "Kilgus," which was sung with great feeling.

ARRESTED FOR POCKET-PICKING.
OGDEN, Sept. 27.—Shortly before President Taft's departure for the north, two well-dressed men were arrested at the Union depot, charged with being "pick-pockets." They were working their way into the immense crowd, plying their nefarious trade on the patriotic people who had gathered to bid the president farewell. The patrol was called and they were landed in the city jail.

BUGGY SMASHED.
OGDEN, Sept. 27.—Dr. Freeman of Rock Springs, Wyo., had a narrow escape in a runaway on Washington avenue yesterday afternoon about 5 o'clock. His horse, which had been hired from the "Coney" livery, became frightened as the doctor was about to enter the rig and its efforts to run, backed the buggy into a post at the edge of the sidewalk and completely smashed it. The doctor escaped uninjured.

MILITARY OPENING.
At Mrs. E. Warren's, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, Sept. 27th, 28th, and 29th. Beautiful display of all classes of military uniforms and accoutrements. Forty-five East First South St.

PROVO.

The "News" is delivered by carrier every night (Sunday excepted) at 10 cents per month. All payments and complaints should be made to H. J. Deane, Deseret News, Ogden Branch, 212 E. 1st St., Ogden, Utah. Carrier east side of Academy Ave. Bell 208 red. Carrier west side of Academy Ave. Bell 19 black.

PROHIBITION THEME IN M. I. A. CONVENTION

Strong Talk for Temperance Reform Before Young People of Provo.

(Special Correspondence.)
PROVO, Sept. 27.—The M. I. A. stake and ward union held their annual convention here yesterday. The officers met in the forenoon and afternoon in the B. Y. U. and discussed the year's work, receiving counsel and instruction from Dr. George H. Brigham and Mrs. Augusta Winters Grant of the general board.

In the evening a well attended meeting was held in the tabernacle. Mrs. Augusta W. Grant was the first speaker. She referred to the Y. L. M. I. A. course for the year, laying special stress on the home-making features. Elder James C. Duffin spoke on the prohibition question and urged the people to attend the primaries and see that prohibitionists were nominated for city office.

Elder Joseph A. Buttle read an article showing the immense sums of money expended for liquor and tobacco. Dr. George H. Brigham also spoke on the prohibition question, answering Mayor Rowe's individual liberty plea by emphasizing the need of protection to the young and to the women who are the great sufferers of the liquor curse.

Prof. John P. Meakin made a brief address, encouraging efforts for a pure and noble life, closing with a beautiful tribute to the home. After his address he sang, by request, "Let a Little Sunshine In."

President Joseph B. Keeler encouraged the members of the associations to do a good season's work. Beautiful vocal selections were rendered by the choir and a solo by C. R. Johnson.

DEATHS AT HOSPITAL.

PROVO, Sept. 27.—Two deaths occurred at the State Mental Hospital yesterday. Ellen Shoppe, who was committed from Salt Lake, died from general paresis at the age of 27 years. It is thought her remains will be shipped to relatives in Wyoming.

Joseph Littlefield of Morgan died from general paresis at the age of 54 years. His remains will be sent to Morgan.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

PROVO, Sept. 27.—The Utah State Sunday school convention was held here Sept. 26, Oct. 1 and 2 in the Methodist church. The opening session will be held Thursday evening, and sessions will be held Friday, Saturday, forenoon, afternoon and evening of each day.

A large number of Sunday school workers will be present from all parts of the state, among them Dr. H. J. Talbot, Rev. P. A. Stimpson, Rev. C. R. Neil and Miss Frieda Drossel of Salt Lake City; Rev. W. C. Merritt of Tacoma, and Mrs. Mary Foster Bryner of Chicago will be in attendance.

BABY SCALDED TO DEATH AT LEVAN

(Special Correspondence.)
NEPHEW, Utah Co., Sept. 26.—On Friday morning the one-year-old baby boy of George Francum of Levan, this county, reached from his high chair and pulled over on himself a kettle of boiling fruit and was fatally scalded, dying a few hours after in great agony.

LOGAN.

The "News" is delivered by carrier every night (Sunday excepted) at 10 cents per month. All payments and complaints should be made to H. J. Deane, Deseret News, Ogden Branch, 212 E. 1st St., Ogden, Utah. Carrier east side of Academy Ave. Bell 208 red. Carrier west side of Academy Ave. Bell 19 black.

CACHE MUTUAL CONVENTION AT LOGAN

Preceded by Social Gathering in B. Y. College Saturday Evening.

(Special Correspondence.)
LOGAN, Sept. 26.—Today the Cache Mutual convention was held in the Tabernacle. There were meetings of the B. Y. U. and evening sessions. The convention of the work of the year was outlined preparatory to the beginning of the present work. Supt. A. Cranney and President Rebecca E. Stewart are taking hold of the mutual work with such interest that there is no question of this winter's work being a success.

One of the most entertaining social gatherings of the season held in Logan was the reception given at the B. Y. college last evening by the stake Mutual officers to the retiring officers. The attendance was large and the first gathering was in the Nibley hall, where a very choice program was rendered, following which a dance was given in the college gymnasium and refreshments served in the adjoining rooms. The affair was a thorough success and while it was a fit occasion for showing the appreciation of the work done by the retiring Mutual officers, it also drew the visiting delegates and the students of the college to the winter's Mutual work.

JURORS FOR OCTOBER.

LOGAN, Sept. 26.—The trial jurors for the October term of court have been drawn by the county clerk and are as follows: Newton—Amos R. E. Clark, Spencer G. Goffrey, Benson—Silas Hicks, Wells—John L. Morse, John E. Lee, Wellville—Dan P. Walters, Wm. R. Kerr, Thomas Breuchley, Walter Glenn, Lewiston—Joseph Bergeson, Brigham L. Trenton—Wm. D. Goodwin, Petersburg—Frank Nye, Richmond—Gilbert A. Bright, Clarkston—D. W. Butters, Charles S. Smith, Mendon—Isaac Sorenson, Paradise—Harry A. Shaw, Hyrum—Orson Salvoerson, Louis T. Miller, Millville—Alma Cummings, Smithfield—Hyrum Sorenson, Logan—Emor Crockett, R. S. McAllister, Andrew L. King, Frederick Schotes, W. Nielsen, John H. Westover, Hugh Roberts, John H. Bullock.

AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE NOTES.

LOGAN, Sept. 26.—Registration surpasses that of all previous years. Last Friday at the hour of closing the registration was 225, as against 141 for one year ago. Seats on the main floor of chapel are filled and the balcony seats are being assigned.

The dramatic department is getting an early start this year. The play chosen for the college students is "Clyde Pitch's 'The Climbers,'" and the high school students will put "Mr. Bob" on about the last of the year.

Edw. Caffery, the new commandant, is giving a new impetus to the military department. Old and new students alike are taking an interest in drill not seen heretofore, and from all indications the department has the best year of its existence before it.

The creamery has received, and will soon receive more, new machinery, which will add very materially to the efficiency of that department.

Prof. J. T. Calne III has returned from Europe, where he spent the summer visiting the livestock centers of the continent and purchasing for the new projected stock of the college.

The woman's building is being rushed to completion very rapidly. Some of the third floor rooms will soon be finished and the building will be ready for occupancy in a few weeks at most.

LOGAN BRIEFS.

Antons Koller of College ward was fined $25 or 25 days by Judge William Bringham on Saturday for spearing fish.

Bert Taylor of Wellville, who has been arrested on a charge of shooting ducks out of season and placed under a $200 bond, called Justice Bringham up by phone on Saturday and changed his plea from guilty to not guilty, and was before the justice on Thursday for sentence.

The sheriff has placed an attachment on the city restaurant to satisfy judgment for a bill run by the proprietor, a Jap, at the College grocery.

A minor who was caught in the pool room and taken before Justice Bringham, said he was 17 years of age. Upon questioning the boy admitted to being 17 but it years old and was fined $5 for the falsehood.

Lizzie Thomas Edward

Will reopen her vocal studio at 209 Center street Sept. 21, 1909. Bell phone 3409-k.

PREST. TAFT'S WELCOME AT BRIGHAM CITY

Greeted by Thousands Who Listen to Short Talk in Pouring Rain.

(Special Correspondence.)
BRIGHAM CITY, Sept. 26.—Long before 4:45 p. m. the time announced for the arrival of the President Taft train, the O. S. L. depot platform and the Forest street crossing were packed with children and citizens. Much disappointment was felt that the president would not speak here, as the latest report was that he had been taken ill at Ogden. The train arrived promptly on time, and while Senator Woodhouse spoke to the people from the rear platform of the president's car, explaining the reason and regretting very much that the president could not appear, the smiling face of President Taft was seen in the door and as the president came out on the platform every hat went off and a ringing "Hurrah for President Taft" went up from about two thousand throats, and despite the heavy rain which was then pouring down, the multitude remained and listened to President Taft's speech. A letter from Mayor Blackburn thanking President Taft, in behalf of the citizens of Brigham City for consenting to speak to the people here, was read to the president, who read it. Several cases of choicest peaches, the kind that has made Brigham City famous, were put on the platform and given to the children. The president then addressed the presidential party, and in order that the president might thoroughly enjoy his peaches, several jars of sweet cream were taken to the dining car.

PRESIDENT TAFT AT LIBERTY PARK

He Addresses a Vast Multitude There in Characteristic Speech.

DWELLS ON CONSERVATION.

Duty to Posterity Referred to in Constructive Manner—Rain Prevents Reception.

After a rest at the Country club Saturday afternoon, President Taft started for Liberty park, where he addressed his largest audience in Utah. There were fully 25,000 people to welcome the chief executive and listen to his address.

Long before the president arrived from the country club, the Fifteenth infantry, the signal corps and companies B, C and H of the Utah National Guard, with the High School cadets, were stationed along the main driveway, keeping the space clear for the presidential party.

The high school band was drowned in cheers from 25,000 throats as the orderlies from the Fifteenth infantry, who were the escort of the president during his visit, drew up at the stand with the state's guest. All hats were off in a twinkling.

The president noted a large space in front of the stand which had been reserved for the band, but he saw no band. He had the band given another station and the space was soon filled with eager listeners.

In introducing President Taft, Gov. Spry said: "Ladies and Gentlemen: It is seldom that the honor has been given this state of receiving the chief executive of this great republic. Today we have that honor. Our president has been kind enough to extend to us the privilege of meeting with him and of talking with him and of putting himself in position to know something of the needs of this great state. I need not tell him, in the presence of this vast multitude, that he is welcome. (Applause.)"

"Since he arrived in the state yesterday morning, it has been the pleasure of the people to listen to him. His words of cheer and comfort and counsel and the spectacle that he has before him this afternoon must certainly inspire him to do his best for the people of Utah. I bid you a most hearty welcome, and I take pleasure in introducing to the people of Utah the president, Hon. William H. Taft. (Extended applause.)"

There was a mighty ovation as the president rose to speak, and his smile brought another round of applause. When he subsided, the president said: "Gov. Spry, Ladies and Gentlemen: I am very much obliged to the management who enabled me to come nearer to my audience by eliminating that noisy, noisy, noisy electric fan, which we all like, but which, alas, I don't like to have an air space between my audience and myself, because air, in that way, is a non-conductor, and if you can't get up a little electric current, you can't get up a little air space between yourself and the people you are talking to. It is a little chilly for the audience and it is still more chilly for the speaker. (Laughter.)"

"I want first to thank the governor of the state, the two senators, the congressman and the mayor of Salt Lake for their very great kind wishes and courtesies when I came into the state and for their attention and courtesy since an attention and courtesy which, I am glad to say, I believe I have mutual respect for. Now, the sentiment of the sentiment of the people who elected them to office. (Extended applause.)"

"It has never before been my good fortune to visit Utah. I have received every impression which I have received up to this time has been most favorable. I congratulate you on having such a beautiful city. Salt Lake is a beautiful city of growing into a great city. (Cheers.) Yours is a city of homes. Your streets are so broad, your homes so many, your courtesies so few, that really the movement towards the city in Utah is not one that ought to be deplored as such a movement is deplored in the east where the cities are so crowded, and the means of breaking free air so limited."

AS TO AVORDPOIS.
"The longer I grow—the older I grow—(Laughter) I am sorry to say I do not grow long. I grow the other way. (Laughter) (Some remark from audience inaudible to reporter.) I am afraid that was spoken by a thin man. (Laughter.) The older I grow the more respect I have for those in the early days that looked forward to greater things and built up the foundations, and that is what you can say of those who founded Salt Lake City. (Applause.) They gave you streets large enough, really, to be the heart of the city and to have parks in the middle of them and still not reduce the wagon way below the necessities of commerce and transportation. Now, the sentiment is illustrated in the history of Washington, the capital, and it is illustrated both ways."

"The plan of the city was devised by a French engineer named L'Enfant, and he built for a great capital of a great country (applause), and all the architects and landscape gardeners and engineers of the country, when they came and began to examine these plans for what was called the larger Washington, were only able to add to and add very little to the original plan that he mapped down for the development of the city we all love so well as the type of our nationality. (Applause.)"

"We are more enthusiastic than those of us who have clear ideas as to what ought to be done, will have to modify our views in some way and arrange a compromise. But life is a compromise of people, and that is only obtained by party, by the much despised politics, by negotiation, by pulling wires, by speeches, and by all sorts of inducements and said."

"Of course Congress may have different views, and perhaps those of us who are more enthusiastic than those of us who have clear ideas as to what ought to be done, will have to modify our views in some way and arrange a compromise. But life is a compromise of people, and that is only obtained by party, by the much despised politics, by negotiation, by pulling wires, by speeches, and by all sorts of inducements and said."

"Of course Congress may have different views, and perhaps those of us who are more enthusiastic than those of us who have clear ideas as to what ought to be done, will have to modify our views in some way and arrange a compromise. But life is a compromise of people, and that is only obtained by party, by the much despised politics, by negotiation, by pulling wires, by speeches, and by all sorts of inducements and said."

"Of course Congress may have different views, and perhaps those of us who are more enthusiastic than those of us who have clear ideas as to what ought to be done, will have to modify our views in some way and arrange a compromise. But life is a compromise of people, and that is only obtained by party, by the much despised politics, by negotiation, by pulling wires, by speeches, and by all sorts of inducements and said."

"Of course Congress may have different views, and perhaps those of us who are more enthusiastic than those of us who have clear ideas as to what ought to be done, will have to modify our views in some way and arrange a compromise. But life is a compromise of people, and that is only obtained by party, by the much despised politics, by negotiation, by pulling wires, by speeches, and by all sorts of inducements and said."

"Of course Congress may have different views, and perhaps those of us who are more enthusiastic than those of us who have clear ideas as to what ought to be done, will have to modify our views in some way and arrange a compromise. But life is a compromise of people, and that is only obtained by party, by the much despised politics, by negotiation, by pulling wires, by speeches, and by all sorts of inducements and said."

"Of course Congress may have different views, and perhaps those of us who are more enthusiastic than those of us who have clear ideas as to what ought to be done, will have to modify our views in some way and arrange a compromise. But life is a compromise of people, and that is only obtained by party, by the much despised politics, by negotiation, by pulling wires, by speeches, and by all sorts of inducements and said."

"Of course Congress may have different views, and perhaps those of us who are more enthusiastic than those of us who have clear ideas as to what ought to be done, will have to modify our views in some way and arrange a compromise. But life is a compromise of people, and that is only obtained by party, by the much despised politics, by negotiation, by pulling wires, by speeches, and by all sorts of inducements and said."

"Of course Congress may have different views, and perhaps those of us who are more enthusiastic than those of us who have clear ideas as to what ought to be done, will have to modify our views in some way and arrange a compromise. But life is a compromise of people, and that is only obtained by party, by the much despised politics, by negotiation, by pulling wires, by speeches, and by all sorts of inducements and said."

"Of course Congress may have different views, and perhaps those of us who are more enthusiastic than those of us who have clear ideas as to what ought to be done, will have to modify our views in some way and arrange a compromise. But life is a compromise of people, and that is only obtained by party, by the much despised politics, by negotiation, by pulling wires, by speeches, and by all sorts of inducements and said."

"Of course Congress may have different views, and perhaps those of us who are more enthusiastic than those of us who have clear ideas as to what ought to be done, will have to modify our views in some way and arrange a compromise. But life is a compromise of people, and that is only obtained by party, by the much despised politics, by negotiation, by pulling wires, by speeches, and by all sorts of inducements and said."

walk on those waters. (Laughter.) "This is bound to be a great city because it is the center of such a large tributary territory. It is the center of a territory that is bound to grow under modern improvements and modern development. I stand here in the presence of a community in which the first step in the reclamation of the arid and semi-arid lands was made, and most successfully, (applause) and that community is bound to make this country a most important part of the United States."

"We are beginning to feel a little cramped in the east. We are beginning to feel a little bit of the west. We are getting a little bit of the west. Now, here, when you first look out upon this desert you don't look for much hope in this direction, but when you come to understand the application of water and the scientific development of the land you see that in the hands of the Americans themselves is the opportunity for growth and the opportunity for making this whole western country another source of supplying that demand which, with the increase of population, is growing so rapidly as to cause us to run up farm products and food and all the other agricultural products to a price that the country people like and the city people don't like. (Laughter.)"

CONSERVATION OF RESOURCES.

"That brings me to the subject of the conservation of our resources. I don't intend to discuss that in detail this afternoon, but there has arisen within the last seven years a feeling in less than that time—a deep feeling on the part of the people that we must conserve the resources that the Lord gave to this continent in order that our posterity may not be embarrassed and straitened and even starved."

"A man says: 'Well, what has posterity ever done for us?' Well, I don't think it ever has done anything for us, but we here and we have got to work out the problem, and we are bringing forth children who will live to the time when the conservation of these resources of the earth will become a most valuable result to them. It involves the saving of the forests and the reforestation of land which has been denuded of forest. It involves the saving of water power so that the people may enjoy it at reasonable rates (applause). It involves the saving of the coal lands so that the supply of coal shall be more or less under the control of the public, and it involves the extension in every direction of the reclamation of our arid lands."

"Now, to one man more than any other is the fact due that the issue is before the people, and that they have become impressed with the necessity for our saving, not wasting, the resources of God has given us, and that man is Theodore Roosevelt. (Cheers and applause.) It was not reserved for him to be in office as president in the development, even of the first of these great works."

"It often happens that one man sees and another reaps, and I could not but feel that when I stood at the mouth of the Gunnison tunnel, a tunnel six miles long—longer than any other tunnel in the world—and opened the way for the water from the Gunnison river, in order to come into that unproductive valley, Uncompaghe valley, where thousands of acres were to be made to blossom as the rose and to bring forth the fruit which they say in Colorado even exceeds the fruit they raise in Utah—but, of course, that is an exaggeration. (Laughter.)"

"When I am in Colorado the fruit seems bigger there than anywhere, and when I come to Utah my glasses are fitted to see it larger here. The pursuit of that policy involves self-restraint; it involves foresight; it involves diligence and industry, and it involves more than that—it involves the passage of legislation well directed toward the result, and that is what we are going to do. We are going to make on Congress and ask Congress to help us out. (Applause.)"

"Of course Congress may have different views, and perhaps those of us who are more enthusiastic than those of us who have clear ideas as to what ought to be done, will have to modify our views in some way and arrange a compromise. But life is a compromise of people, and that is only obtained by party, by the much despised politics, by negotiation, by pulling wires, by speeches, and by all sorts of inducements and said."

"Of course Congress may have different views, and perhaps those of us who are more enthusiastic than those of us who have clear ideas as to what ought to be done, will have to modify our views in some way and arrange a compromise. But life is a compromise of people, and that is only obtained by party, by the much despised politics, by negotiation, by pulling wires, by speeches, and by all sorts of inducements and said."

"Of course Congress may have different views, and perhaps those of us who are more enthusiastic than those of us who have clear ideas as to what ought to be done, will have to modify our views in some way and arrange a compromise. But life is a compromise of people, and that is only obtained by party, by the much despised politics, by negotiation, by pulling wires, by speeches, and by all sorts of inducements and said."

"Of course Congress may have different views, and perhaps those of us who are more enthusiastic than those of us who have clear ideas as to what ought to be done, will have to modify our views in some way and arrange a compromise. But life is a compromise of people, and that is only obtained by party, by the much despised politics, by negotiation, by pulling wires, by speeches, and by all sorts of inducements and said."

"Of course Congress may have different views, and perhaps those of us who are more enthusiastic than those of us who have clear ideas as to what ought to be done, will have to modify our views in some way and arrange a compromise. But life is a compromise of people, and that is only obtained by party, by the much despised politics, by negotiation, by pulling wires, by speeches, and by all sorts of inducements and said."

"Of course Congress may have different views, and perhaps those of us who are more enthusiastic than those of us who have clear ideas as to what ought to be done, will have to modify our views in some way and arrange a compromise. But life is a compromise of people, and that is only obtained by party, by the much despised politics, by negotiation, by pulling wires, by speeches, and by all sorts of inducements and said."

"Of course Congress may have different views, and perhaps those of us who are more enthusiastic than those of us who have clear ideas as to what ought to be done, will have to modify our views in some way and arrange a compromise. But life is a compromise of people, and that is only obtained by party, by the much despised politics, by negotiation, by pulling wires, by speeches, and by all sorts of inducements and said."