Five Men Arrested Are Said to be Burglars and Bad Men.

(Special to the "News.")

Ogden, Oct. 14.-Detective Pender and Officer Brown this morning arrested five men who gave the names of John Alien, Richard Killan, George Smith, George West and James Ryan. They were arraigned on the charge of vagrancy and sentenced to ten days, It is learned, however, that a more serious charge is hanging over their heads and that a complaint charging burglary will shortly be sworn to. The burglary will shortly be sworn to. The broken into a car belonging to the Ore-gon Short Line and stealing some 50 worth of underwear and clohting, the property of the Pacific Hotel company. The property is said to have been powned around town by the men while the officers have discovered the balance ached away behind a pile of ties flank-ing the track. The burglary was com-mitted Saturday night. Charles Lewis was found guilty of vagrancy in the police court this morn-ing and given ten days. He also has a

Every farmer should take a trip, once a year, and visit successful farmers or fairs, for the purpose of getting higher ideals.

I saw at one fair a man looking at an animal in a pen, and went over and looked too. It had only size to recommend it; no particular color, breed of characteristics, but a well grown scrut, calf, not worth a minute's time. The man hung on the fence looking at it for a quarter of an hour. Why? Because he had no ideal animal in his mind. and anything would please him. He was satisfied with cheap things.

A very fine looking man was walking through the crowd with a small basket, selling peanuts; he looked smart enough to be a bank president, but his ideals were small, and he was content; he lacked what a slender young fellow who was striking the maul had-"vim." A big, coarse glant, proud of his strength had put the weight on the striking machine up to a high notch, and dared the crowd to match it. A nervous, small, but cordy boy accepted the challenge, He was cautious, setting the pin with precision, placing his feet in position, and putting his hands on the handle, so as to get all the force he could. He beat the glant, and the crowd cheered him, astonished and delighted. "Great luck," said one. "Nonsense," said another. "He knew just how to place the pin, just where to strike, and exactly what angle was needed to get the whole force, and 'vim' did the

Many of us fail to do this, and dearly we pay for it. Successful people prepare before-hand. One exhibitor said: "I got the wrong rooster in that coop; you know one has to hurry so the day before the fairt" I could tell by the pullet with a white feather in her wing, which barred her from a premium; by the old patchedup coops too small to show the patchedup coops, too small to show the stock: by the dirty plumage-that he had neglected to prepare for the show till the last moment, and he will have plenty of time after the fair to count his prizes. The boy with his fowls accustomera to handling, and trained to stand as if on parade, commenced weeks before and won many prizes. Since the adoption of single expert judges, strangers to the exhibitors, the chances for the product and not the exhibitor to win, are good; and the New York state breeders have done good work for agriculture, by urging on fair societies this system, which is becoming general. Not only are those men able to award impartially and intelligently, but they can and should explain the reason why, "What alls that butter?" said one ex-"What alls that butter?" said one ex-hibitor decidedly. "The same thing that alls nine samples out of every ten-too sait." I answered. "Tasts this, then yours. Compare the two. Yours leaves nothing but a sait taste in the mouth, the other a flavor. You cannot distinguish any butter flavor if too much sait is used." He was satisfied, but the man whom a judge answereo by saving: "If you do not like the sward get out"-learned nothing.

sward get out"-learned nothing. A man had a great crowd around him, to which he was explaining the merits of a fountain pen. He took it out and raked it across a board till the points were bent double, straightened them out and bent them over back the wrong way. How he did bang it around, and then it would write as well as ever, which he proved by writing. Then a common black penholder was shown, and six pens, same kind, put in the handle. Then a black lead pencil hold-er for marking linen was held up, and a boy's handkerchief daubed with his
