New York.—Hall's detailed report of his Arctic expedition is published. It appears there is no longer even the shadow of a hope that any one survives from Franklin's company. It is thought that none reached even as far as Montreal island. Their bones lie scattered along the coast of King William's Island, some in isolated graves, others in the camping places where they died in companies. The melancholy history has a crowning terror in the knowledge that they died by starvation through the base behavior of the Esquimaux. Capt. Hall was reduced to the awful necessity of taking the life of one of his mutinous men. Hall states the Erebus and Terror were not abandoned, before they had consummated the great Northwest passage. Having five men aboard, though the evidence of the exact number is circumstantial everything about this northwest passage ship of Franklin's expedition was in complete order. Four boats were hanging high up at the ship's sides, one on the quarter deck. The vessel was in its winter hausing of sail cloth. This vessel was found by the natives near O'Reilly Island in latitude 68° E., 30° N., longitude 98° E., 8° W., early in the spring of '49, being frozen in the midst of a smooth unbroken floe of ice of only one winter's formation.

The merchants and importers have decided to seek the President's aid in this emergency so that they may be relieved from the embarrassments naturally resulting from the unsettled condition of the money market. On Wednesday Secretary Boutwell was asked if he would not modify his programme so far as selling $10,000,000 in gold during next month was concerned. Boutwell sent back positive instructions that the line of action already determined on should not be in any way disturbed.
