

MUSIC AND DRAMA

The speeches in last night's "News of the Week" combination between Sarah Bernhardt and Madeleine Adamson were a study in contrasts. Adamson took a good many theatrical points straight away. Nothing but this was her aim, to convince everyone that her Maude was a really climbed vent near the pinnacle of dramatic fancy. She will be with the keenest interest to hear now await the announcement whether or not Salt Lake is to be the site of the livery. As only 100 tickets are to be sold, and as the chances are slim, it is to be feared that the transportation jump will not be made. We shall hope for the best; Chicago, St. Louis should be the westernmost city visited. It is highly that an excursion to Salt Lake would be made up to witness the appearance of the new characters with the foremost actors of her time.

This combination gives Charles Frohman another right to his title of the Napoleon of managers. At the same time it must be said that like the original Napoleon, who wasted but little on sentiment, the new Napoleon has one; there is no doubt what is due to the financial outcome of the Ada Rehman's new play will be read for her early in August. Martha Monton is now in the Adirondacks writing it, and it is nearly finished. The scenario has met with Miss Rehman's unqualified approval.

In Bountiful this evening the play "An Unequal Match" will be given by a Salt Lake company with Phil Margett at its head. It will be interesting to their friends to know that Mr. Race Whitney of the Herald, and Miss Brockbank, formerly Miss Lute Young will be members of the cast.

A New York letter says: The roasting that the dramatic critics gave N. Goodwin was practically unanimous, as was the action of the general public in packing the house. It must be a New commentary on the taste of the people.

her card keys were displayed, and a moment later I saw her pick up one of them and drop it into her pocket. She stepped at once into the crowd, and I rushed after her. I was a little distance away when I heard her say, "Wait a minute, I can't get to the car." She immediately without exciting panic. Just before I reached her side the young man who managed the fancy goods department squeezed in ahead of me and tapped her on the shoulder. "Pardon me, madame," he said, "but I have your card case," and he handed her a card case, almost the facsimile of the one I saw her pick up. "Why that can't be mine," she exclaimed, looking startled; "I have mine in my pocket." The department manager opened the case for her and brought out the card case I had seen her drop a dollar note on the outside. "This may help you to identify it," he said, smiling. By that time the lady had extracted the other. "Yes, that is mine," she said, when she saw the money.

"I am afraid mistake, but they look like yours," he said, as he took her card case and a like note in the outside." During this brief colloquy my blood ran cold. Ten seconds more and I would have had the woman under arrest, probably involving the house in a great damage suit, and certainly losing my job. As the department manager turned to go, I said, "Excuse me for the first time." "Hello Jim!" he said, "I suppose you are intending to call her back, too." "Yes," I replied slowly, but I was mighty careful not to tell him how I was intending to do it. New Orleans Times Democrat.

L. D. S. UNIVERSITY.

New York, June 8.—George Washington's state coach has been presented by Augustus Free to the Ladies' Association of the Union, the New York vice-regent of the association being Miss Townsend.

The coach, according to the historian given by Mr. Frey, was used by General and Mrs. Washington on a journey which they made from Mount Vernon Richardson drove in the coach through the streets of Philadelphia. At his death it became the property of relatives and later passed into possession of Mr. Frey. The upholstery of the vehicle is the worse for time, but otherwise it is in fairly good condition. It will be shipped to Mt. Vernon on Monday.

JESSE W. FOX.

Jesse W. Fox, he pioneer surveyor, and an old time school teacher, whose name was known from one end of the state to the other, died in Bountiful April 1st, 1894. He was born March 31st, 1819, near Adams Center, Jefferson county, New York, where he received an academic education and taught school. He was a companion of the noted financier, James Keep. He embraced the Gospel early in the forties and went to Nauvoo, only in time, however, to see the remains of the martyred Prophet and Patriarch. He left Nauvoo and came with the people to Winter Quarters in 1847, but was sent from there by President Young on a mission to his old home in New York. He was in the company of pioneers which was attacked by cholera on its journey to Utah, several of his companions falling a prey to the scourge. He arrived in Utah and taught school first at Mantt and later in this city. He surveyed the site and set the stakes for the Salt Lake Temple. He was elected by the Legislature, Surveyor General of Utah, a position which he held for many years, until the time it was discontinued. He located and surveyed the principal canals of this county and territory, and was appointed chief engineer of the old Utah Central and Southern railroads. He was always distinguished for his gentle and kindly spirit, and commanded to a singular degree the affection of his old time pupils. This was well illustrated when, on one occasion he was taken by the terrible Indian chief, Black Hawk, who had been a pupil of his when a lad in Mantt. Instead of destroying him, he ordered that his old teacher be not only permitted to continue his journey unharmed, but gave him an escort to a point of safety.
