SENSATIONS are quite numerous about now. In addition to the Woodhull scandal, the Presidental election, the horse disease, and the Boston and London fires, there are the disastrous storms in north-west Europe, the tremendous night, considerable interest was maniinundations in Italy, the universally fested and amounts were subscribed early and severe winter snaps, the coming cholers, and last a very fowl disease in Pennsylvania. Thus do exciting events spring up one after another, a very good thing for the newspapers, and a matter of great interest to all, furnishing subjects for comment and gossip, and probably diverting some persons from working out vicious plots which they had in their minds.

THE New York Sunday Mercury contains the following concerning the Woodhull business, purporting to be the result of an interview with a deacon of Beecher's church-
