James Kennedy, James Burke and Thomas Williams were yesterday afternoon found guilty of assault with a deadly weapon by a jury in the Second district court and will receive sentence Tuesday, Sept. 29. The case was prosecuted by District Attorney Halverson and Attorney Charles Stout represented the defendants. The principal witness for the prosecution was Southern Pacific Detective Joseph McIntyre, who testified that on the night of Aug. who testined that on the hight of Aug. 22 he went north on a train to the water tank, where he stepped from the train, but was immediately confronted by the three defendants, who held guns him and ordered him to throw up hands. The defendants de-nied in every particular having any as-sociation with the case, but Mr. Mc-Intyre's positive identification of the men and testimony was strong enough to convince the jury of the defendants' guilt. The jury was not out over a half hour when they brought in the verdict. The men appeared to be greatly surprised at the verdict, as Mr. Stout had put up a good defense for them. A young man named John Winberg was arrested by Sheriff Bailey at the sheriff's office and a charge of vagrancy is booked against him. He called at the sheriff's office yesterday and asked to see James Burks. He was refused to see James Burke. He was recused the privilege and then asked to leave $6 to help him out. The sheriff then questioned the young man as to his ac-quaistance with Burke and he became impudent and could not give a very good account of himself, so the officer, Tuesday night on suspicion, but was furned out on clearing himself of the suspected crime. LOVE'S LABOR LOST. How a Faithless Man Jilted a Confiding Woman for Another.

Mrs. Minerva A. Parratt, who recently filed a $5,000 breach of promise suit against Albert G. Matthews, tells an interesting story of how he jilted her for another woman. Mrs. Parratt, who is about 45 years of age and was divorced from her husband a little more than a year ago, says she first met Matthews at a Kickapoo Indian medicine show at which time he followed her home. At first she treated him with cold contempt but nothing daunted he continued to show her attentions and finally she grew to like him pretty well. Then the spark of love kindled into a flame and in a short time the twain were billing and cooling not unlike two little turtle doves Matthews, says Mis. Parratt, came to see her guite often and invited her to come and see him, which she did. Finally he proposed to her and she in turn plighted her troth to him, where-upon he presented her with a diamond ring and a photograph of himself as an evidence of good faith. For a while, says the filted woman, all was smooth sailing, but finally something told her all was not right. Presently she learn ed there was another woman in the case, and although the charged her faithless lover with being untrue to her, he denied the allegation and gave her to understand that all that he had was hers, and that she would shortly be-come Mrs. Matthews. But it was not to be. The fickle Albert was playing a dual role and in due season Mrs. Par-ratt's suspicions that she was being fatt's suspicions that she was being supplanted by another, proved correct, and the gay Lothario asked for his things back, but didn't get them. "The shock hurt me terribly," says Mrs. Parratt, "and for nearly a week I couldn't work at all. I used to lie on the bed and cry for hours. I tried to forget him but couldn't ask forget him but couldn't, and every time forget him but couldn't, and every time I would think of him I would have a fainting spell. I was in awful shape. Finally I got some people to pray for me, and now I feel better, but I'm not meand val myself yet.

'I don't know why he left me, but guess it was the other woman. The heighbors say he would have done betby marrying me," said Mrs. Parratt, in reply to a question as to the other woman's beauty. "Wait till the case comes up in court." she concluded. "Tve got plenty of evidence and you bet I'll fix him."

UNION DEPOT TALK.

Mr. Moffat Interviewed on the Question Of One at Salt Lake.

As to whether the Denver, Northwestern and Pacific will join the Rio Grande and the Western Pacific in a union depot in Salt Lake it is as yet too early to state, D. H. Moffat has been interviewed by the Denver Repub-Hean, which quotes him as saying as "Such a plan has been broached to me several times and I have been will-ing to join in such a move. I have never gone into details about the matter, as the question of terminal facilities there has never been seriously considered. We have several positive assur-ances of an entrance. It is also indefi-nite about our starting any construc-tion work out from that city. We have had a number of parties in the field seeking a route, and another was sent out by the engineering department last week. There is nothing definite to an-nounce yet about the road's course through the state, for no route has been decided upon."
