GARFIELD'S RESPONSE.

To a Delegation of Young Men.

CLEVELAND, 8.—The first voters of the Garfield and Arthur battalion of Cleveland, went to Mentor this afternoon by a special train of six cars and called on General Garfield at his Lawnfield home. The train stopped at the farm, and the battalion, headed by a band, marched to the residence, where Hermann W. Gramms, president of the organization, made a brief, eulogistic address, to which Gen. Garfield responded thus:

Mr. Chairman: This is no ordinary event in the history of any man, indeed in the history of any people, when, as I am told, that there are 400 young men here who have made this journey, not for any personal purpose, but to express those great general earnest purposes that arise in the hearts of active intelligent young men, when they first grappled the questions of their country. I know of nothing quite like this in our history. With all the pleasure it brings, I am bound to say it brings a little disenchantment to me in this. Always to this time I have been accustomed to consider myself a young man, (laughter and applause) if before your arrival anybody had raised the question, I should have asserted, with a good deal of indignation, if anybody had denied it, that I myself was a young man; but they tell me that you are to cast your first national vote at a presidential election. If that is so, young man as I am, I was a voter before any of you were born. Now, to you young men and voters, I ask, borrowing the language of Rip Van Winkle, when he awoke from that long sleep, "Who in the world am I?" (laughter and applause.) I must have passed the flush of youth at least, but young gentlemen, I have not so far left the coast of youth to travel inland, but that I can very well remember the state of manhood from an experience in it of some years, and there is nothing to me in this world so inspiring as the possibilities that lie locked up in the head and breast of a young man; the hopes that lie before him; the great aspirations around him and above him. All these things, with the untried pathway of life opening up its difficulties and dangers, inspire him to courage, force and work. Now let me say a word in answer to this great kindness and compliment in your coming to my house, about some of the thoughts that I know go into the hearts of young men, to awake and inspire them, and some of the delusions that are likely to get into their minds. Let me speak of one of the delusions that I think, from the remarks of your chairman, you are not likely to have. It is a delusion that affects all men more or less, particularly the young men—the delusion that good things and great things are some way off, yonder, away, abroad. That is one of the delusions that I hope you are not living fast. To illustrate that outright. Over here 15 miles where I spent my childhood there is a lovely little brook and gorge where we used to go down and find slate stones and whittle them out into pencils for ourselves, thas were better than all the pencils sent from abroad; but if any boy ever brought into our school what is not in any English dictionary, but in schoolboys' dictionary a boughten pencil, he could get a whole handful of our home-made pencils for it, yet every one of ours was better than the best that he brought from abroad. There was a delusion among us that outside of us, away from us, was glory, was greatness. Now, as to our country, let us not get any such delusion into our heads. I know that it is a good thing for us to know all about abroad, to know what it is, to enlarge our minds by it, but I want you to feel in the depths of your heart that there is no abroad in all this world that is half equal in glory to being an American here at home. [Applause.] Right here in this yard is a splendid specimen of American sovereignty. Enlarge it into millions of men who vote and you have the grand august sovereign of this last and best-born of times—the American Republic. [Applause.] Now that that sovereign shall be unshackeled forever, that that sovereign shall be unpursuable forever. When it stands at the ballot box to order the will of the Nation, that that sovereign shall be unintimidated by mortal man when it utters that final omnific word that commands the continent. That is the great purpose that all true Americans should keep in their minds. When I see such a band of earnest young men as meet me here to-day, I feel certain if they would display themselves as a ballot box guard to defend the party of the American ballot box [applause] to stand around it as around the cradle of our hero, the present American Sovereignty. Such guardians, such defenders will keep the Republic pure and keep it free. Young gentlemen, your visit gives a compliment of the highest sort, and while it disenchants, as I said a little while ago, it still reaches the hand of the young out to men which I take with all certainty, and for your tendered support to me which is not for my sake, but for the sake of the cause of which I am now the representative. I give you all the thanks of which my heart is capable. [Applause.] The house is small, farm small, township small and the country small, but all there is in it to give, of the generosity and hospitality and welcome that is in my hands to give, is yours while you stay. [Applause and cheers.] I bid you welcome to all there is of us gentlemen.

An Interview with Hancock.

NEW YORK, 8.—The Democratic Evening Express prints the subjoined interview with Gen. Hancock to-day:

"General," said the reporter, "will you make a formal report to the statements concerning yourself made recently by Gen. Grant?"

"It is yet too early to answer that. There is a good deal to be read and understood before a determination can be arrived at. I am unwilling to be interviewed," was the reply.

"General," said the reporter, "I am here to ask if President Lincoln offered to you the command of the army of the Potomac before Grant was called to its command?"

"There is a history but I don't want to be interviewed, I can't be interviewed every day; I was held in Washington; I was detained there a week or I don't say by whom; Lincoln was President; it was before Grant was called to the command; there had been a disaster; the battle of Mine Run, I think, but ask army officers who know all about the matter. There are men who know the facts. I will not be interviewed."

From other sources than Hancock, the Evening Express has information, which it has good reason to regard as truthful, that Lincoln did tender the command of the Army of the Potomac to Hancock, before Grant became its commander, and that written evidence of the truth of this important fact is in existence.

Another reporter called on Gen. Hancock to-day in regard to the recently published interviews with Gen. Grant. Gen. Hancock said, "I have no replied, nor have I prepared a reply. In fact, I have not yet carefully read what Gen. Grant has said to me, and which has been given to the public through the medium of the press." Of the assertion that when the Army of the Potomac was looking for a commander, Hancock's name was not even suggested for the place, General Hancock says: "After the failure of the campaign I was detained in Washington one month by Secretary Stanton with a view of placing me in command of the army of the Potomac, but I did not want it and would not accept." General Hancock's aids are Captains Wharton and Ward and General Mitchell, who were with Hancock at the battle of Gettysburg. These are regarded as the military family of General Hancock, one member of which family is understood to be the person who wrote the letter which appeared in the Chicago Tribune. Gen. Mitchell was not at headquarters when the reporter called, but Captains Wharton and Ward expressed much indignation and said they did not believe any such letter had ever been written.

Seymour's Speech.

Governor Seymour crowded Chickering Hall to-night, and made a political speech which was heartily received. He reviewed Conkling's speech in a caustic manner, and strongly denounced the centralization of power and upheld the state sovereignty doctrine. Mr. Seymour referred to the republican charges of democratic unwillingness to keep public faith. He cited instances in his experience as governor, when he vainly endeavored to collect from republicans funds to meet the State obligations in 1863 and 1864. And he added, the meanest repudiators are they who who profess honesty and poverty and then spend money in riotous living; and now I want to appeal to the business men; and then I will relieve you. In closing Seymour said: Of the candidates I have nothing unkind to say; there is a bend of sympathy between Mr. Garfield and myself. He and I went into conventions, not as candidates, and were both nominated. We went around speaking and he is going to be beaten just as I was. The speaker closed by the picture of Garfield taking the oath of senator and Hancock that of President in March 4, 1881.

Missionary Report.

Missionary Bishop Clarkson, of Nebraska and Dakota, reported in his original diocese 58 clergymen, 60 churches and chapels, 2,700 communicants, and 600,000 people. Church property is valued at a quarter of million dollars.

The report of the Bishop of Yeddo is encouraging.

Prospects in Indiana.

CHICAGO, 8.—The Times Indianapolis special says: The Times correspondent while in the democratic headquarters, chanced to mention the report he had heard that $10,000 would be offered in one lump on Porter to-morrow, and this vague and uncertain intelligence created a panic. Democratic statesmen have it that a portion of the republican corruption fund will be used in this way. It is probable a democratic pool will be made to take any big bluff which may be made.

And now comes Judge E. Martindale, former editor of the Indianapolis Journal, with this statement: In a conversation with Gen. Grant, held at Manitou Springs, Colorado, last July, the latter had expressed himself substantially as in Rev. Fowler's interview. Judge Martindale says: However, that Grant in speaking of Gen. Hancock, referred to him as a soldier in terms of praise, with the qualification that, though he had proven himself an excellent corps commander, he had never shown himself possessed of any ability to fill a higher position. The judge remembers distinctly that he had used none of the unsoldierlike epithets attributed to him by Rev. Fowler, and the harshest criticism he had indulged in was that Hancock was wrapped up in himself and that he was undoubtedly a vain man. Grant went into details with regard to the Louisiana business, and his remarks on this subject were about as given in his published interview, only more particular. Judge Martindale said he would have given this important information, but for the fact that he supposed the conversation was private.

Grant has not Heard from Hancock.

A Daily News reporter had a brief interview with General Grant this morning. The ex-President was asked if he had received any communication from General Hancock relating to the recent Fowler interview. Gen. Grant, "I have not." Reporter, "Do you expect a communication?" Gen. Grant, "It is not impossible that I shall hear from Gen. Hancock." Gen. Grant leaves for New York, accompanied by Mrs. Grant, via Pittsburg & Fort Wayne railroad at three o'clock this afternoon. He will go through without making any stops.

Suit Against Sharon.

SAN FRANCISCO, 8.—Lizzie F., late widow of the late W. C. Ralston, has filed a complaint in the Superior Court against Senator Sharon. The document covers 265 pages and is to the effect that Ralston and Sharon were partners in business; that Sharon was also one of the executors of her husband's will, of which complainant was sole beneficiary; that their partnership of property at the time of Ralston's death amounted to the value in round numbers of $30,000,000; that Ralston, just before his death, gave Sharon a trust deed of his property; that Sharon has had in custody the partnership books and papers; that no inventory of her late husband's estate had been filed by his executors, that Sharon, by false representations and other means has defrauded her in the settlement of Ralston's estate by large amounts for which she demands an accounting and such restitution as may prove just.

A Human Beast.

Near the town of Bisbee, Arizona, last Tuesday, a man named Dodson attempted to outrage a young lady, name not ascertained. Her father rescued her. Dodson soon returned with a carbine and fired two shots, one killing a brother of the girl and the other wounding her in the arm. Dodson escaped. A party is in pursuit.

Love and Murder.

QUINCY, Ills., 8.—A fearful tragedy is reported from New Canton, Pike County, caused by love, resulting in double murder and suicide. Six miles from New Canton lived a family named Baker, consisting of father, mother and two daughters, the oldest being 15 years of age. A young man named Sellers had been working for the family, and about 5 o'clock last evening, while Mr. Baker was absent, he insisted that the daughter should marry him. She refused, whereupon Sellers drew a revolver, shot the dog, then the mother, and finally the girl. He then placed the muzzle to his own temple and fired. Every shot proved fatal. The youngest daughter witnessed the whole tragedy, and gave the above facts before the coroner's jury this morning.

Boys in Blue.

INDIANAPOLIS, 8.—The reunion and rally of the Boys in Blue to-day is a grand success, and an immense crowd of people is in attendance. The streets on the line of march are literally packed. The parade commenced at 11 o'clock and was one hour and a quarter passing a given point. A number of leading manufacturers and business houses were represented in the procession. The streets on the line of march were handsomely decorated with flags and bunting. The afternoon was devoted to speaking. Senator Conkling, Hon. Emery Storrs and Postmaster General Maynard, and other prominent speakers will deliver addresses.

Killed Accidentally.

DENVER, 8.—On an excursion train returning from Golden last night with the Boys in Blue, where they had been attending a republican meeting, Jacob Goode had his neck broken by sticking his head out of the car window and being struck by a standing freight car, at the Golden depot. Some of the party being intoxicated, fired their pistols indiscriminately. One colored man was shot in the leg.

Avenged.

The following was received from Del Norte to-day: A lieutenant of the Fourth Cavalry, passing through here to-day, stated that at Rock Cliff a report reached him that A. S. Jackson, the man who shot the Indian a few days ago, was found dead at the stake. This tallies with the Indian threats and is generally believed. Great excitement prevails and citizens threaten vengeance.

Mississippi Shooting.

MEMPHIS, 8.—Last Wednesday at Concordia, Bolivar County, Miss., a difficulty occurred between B. J. Gwen, a justice of the peace, and J. W. Glover, a farmer. Owen was holding his court when Glover made a disturbance and was ordered under arrest by Owen. Pistols were at once drawn by both and they commenced firing. Owen fell dead. Glover ran about 300 yards and fell. He died after lingering eight hours. Both were young men of good standing in the country.
