EVENING NEWS.

Thursday, June 29, 1882.

Mother and Daughter.

"It is my opinion that that will be a match." Mrs. Slimborn's voice expressed genuine satisfaction. Her daughter, Miss Birdie Slimborn, playing a brilliant waltz in the hotel parlor, and James Nicklespoon, Esq., engaged in turning the young lady's leaves, were the subjects of this remark.

"Then you like Mr. Nicklespoon?" Mrs. Slimborn's companion inquired. "Oh very much! He is a perfect gentleman, and enormously wealthy, you know."

"So have heard," said the plain little woman in black silk and thread lace, who was evidently watching the proceedings at the piano with considerable interest; "and I have also heard," she added, "that Mr. Nicklespoon was somewhat of a miser."

"Not to speak of it, I think," Mrs. Slimborn responded, a smiling face turned to the young couple at the piano. "Mr. Nicklespoon may be a little tight, but my dear Mrs. Beaufort, you wouldn't recommend a minister for a son-in-law, would you?"

"If the minister were a good man, and your daughter loved the minister, most certainly," the little lady replied.

"If Mr. Nicklespoon were to lose his money, has he anything to depend upon, Mrs. Slimborn?" she asked.

"Mercy on us!" The maneuvering woman exclaimed. "You don't know what you are talking about, Mrs. Beaufort! Why Mr. Nicklespoon's place on the Hudson is worth half a million at the very least. Mr. Nicklespoon is a millionaire."

This was so comical and preposterous a suggestion that Mrs. Slimborn was obliged to ask pardon for being so exceedingly impolite as to laugh in her companion's face.

"Your daughter is a fine plant," Mrs. Beaufort remarked, after her neighbor's merriment had subsided. "She ought to be," said the plain little woman, "she has the musical education. I let everything and went abroad with her for two years, just for the sake of having her perfected. You know, Mrs. Slimborn, on 'Dear me! I did think I should do with her musical education. Birdie's teacher didn't want her to come back for two or three years more, do you think but of course that was nonsense?"

"In what way was it nonsense?" Mrs. Beaufort inquired.

"Don't you think she can play well enough as it is? If we had been educating her for a public performer, that would have been different."

"I suppose she could teach music," Mrs. Beaufort remarked.

"Well, in a way," Mrs. Slimborn replied, "I had her skip harmony and thorough bass, and all that nonsense. They weren't necessary for her, you see. I wanted her to be just what she is, a brilliant performer, able to read difficult music at sight, and all that, you know."

"In other words, Mrs. Slimborn, you desired your daughter to shine in society?" said the little woman in silk.

"That's about it," Mrs. Slimborn replied, "frankly. We mothers have a fearful responsibility, for so much depends on the way we begin with our daughters. If they are not well settled, then they have the most perfect right to blame us."

"So much depends on what you mean by well settled," Mrs. Slimborn's neighbor remarked. "If parents educate their daughters, as they do their sons, to be self-supporting."

"Self-supporting?" Mrs. Slimborn interrupted with a frightened expression of countenance. "You don't mean to work and take care of themselves?"

"That is precisely what I mean," the lady responded. "If, for instance, you had seen to it that your daughter had studied music so thoroughly as to be able to teach it if occasion required, then you would have secured her against the future."

"Excuse me," said Mrs. Slimborn, with some coldness; "but if you will allow me to make a personal remark of it, I should like to ask if you have educated your daughters on this plan?"

"The little lady in black silk smiled pleasantly. "My oldest daughter, Mrs. Slimborn," she answered, "is now perfecting herself—try not to be shocked at the use of dressmaking. To use a more plebeian expression, she has learned a trade. She made the dress, Mrs. Slimborn, that you admired so much to-day at dinner. Her taste runs in this direction, and my idea is to have her learn every thing that can be learned of the science of dressmaking. If anything were to happen now or in the future which made it necessary to support myself, she could do so."

"My daughter has graduated from college, and will return this fall to take up astronomy with the professor of that branch of study. To add a little to the personal narrative, Mrs. Slimborn," and now the little lady laughed heartily, "it is my desire that both my daughters shall live lives of single blessedness."

"Mercy on me! old maid!" Mrs. Slimborn exclaimed.

"Old maids, unless their husbands are their equals in the qualities that insure happiness to married life," said Mrs. Beaufort, earnestly. "To bury my daughters, Mrs. Slimborn," she added, "would be a light trouble compared with giving them to unprincipled and dissolute men. Wealth my daughters can live without if need be, but honor is indispensable."

The music had ceased, and Miss Birdie had walked away with her admirer. Mrs. Slimborn, a good deal dazed, and more shocked by what she had heard, excused herself as soon as she could, and went in search of the young couple.

The next day the formal announcement was made of the engagement between James Nicklespoon, Esq., and Miss Birdie Slimborn.

That morning Mrs. Nicklespoon celebrated his engagement by getting drunk.

"Boys must be boys!" Mrs. Slimborn remarked when the news came to her, and both she and her daughter commented jokingly on the young man's dissipated appearance the next day.

James Nicklespoon's place on the Hudson, Mrs. Nicklespoon's town house, and unlimited money, which Mr. Nicklespoon might begethly of.

built, watched with absorbing interest—the career of this young couple.

It took just four years for Mr. Nicklespoon to go through with his property, and at the expiration of that time Mrs. Nicklespoon was obliged to flee to her parents not only for shelter, but for protection against the dissipated wretch to whom her mother had been in such haste to marry her.

Mr. Nicklespoon, who had speculated on the expectation of financial assistance from his wealthy son-in-law, finally failed in business, and soon after died, leaving his daughter and grandchild, are now objects of charity, neither woman having the ability to contribute in the slightest manner to her own support.

Mrs. Beaufort, full of pity for their misfortune, found a few music scholars for Mrs. Nicklespoon, but that lady's superficial education, and her long her two years abroad, made it impossible for her to give satisfaction.

"I told you Birdie couldn't teach!" Mrs. Slimborn remarked one day to Mrs. Beaufort. "I didn't educate her for a teacher; and then her sensibilities are much too fine for such drudgery."

"I can't say any to say anything to her," Mrs. Beaufort remarked afterward, "but it seems to me the story of these two women ought to be written. Perhaps some mother will read it and find it a warning to her daughter's marriage and more of her education. If mothers would only find out what their girls are fitted for, and then see to it that they learn thoroughly whatever they take up, always with self-support in view, a world of misery would be saved. Marriage under most conditions is a lottery."

"And the proper education of our girls is the only thing in life that will ever make it less so."—Eleanor Kirk, in Phenological Journal.

Connected with Messrs. Rogers, Peet & Co.'s vast clothing emporium in New York is Mr. E. C. Church, who resides at 307 Rodney street, Brooklyn. Recently speaking of St. Jacobs Oil, Mr. Church said: "I used St. Jacobs Oil for a severe case of rheumatism, and found it a sure and pleasant cure. In fact, the oil is found in my house at all times; we would not be without it, and whenever I see any one suffering from rheumatism, I advise them to use St. Jacobs Oil and be cured."
