The liberty of the press

is dear to every freeman. But that libe.ty is perverted and betrayed when advantage is taken of the shield of journalism to shoot forth poisoned word-darts, intended to arouse the basest passions and encourage the spirit of lawlessness It is high time that these press excesses were frowned down and denounced by all who have at heart the welfare of society.

As to "the expressed wish of the President," we think that Rutherford B. Hayes is too wise a man and too sensible a President to commit himself to any such incenecute, not forestall, the law, and from his official course up to the present time there are no warrants to be drawn that he desires anything but justice and fairness to prevail in any section of this great country.

The spirit breathed in the above extract is that which led to the mobbing of the Saints, the demolition of their property, the outrages committed on their defenceless wives and daughters, and the massacre of their leaders unconvicted of any crime. It is the spirit that moved men to make martyrs of the greatest souls of the ages, and nailed Christ to the cross. It comes ed Christ to the cross.
